Last Finn Offer Taken To Moscow; Nazis Wait Recall From Turkey

Ankara No Longer Neutral, German Press Says; Angered By Pact With Allies

By the United Press

Istanbul, Nov. 2.—German authorities tonight ordered all German nationals to be ready to leave Turkey "as soon as possible."

The German Ambassador to Turkey, Franz von Papen, is en route to Ankara from Berlin where he has been in conference with Chancellor Hitler and other Nazi leaders for ten days.

Von Papen was presumed to have been summoned to Berlin to report on Turkey's failure to reach a mutual aid pact with Russia and her decision to enter into such an alliance with Britain and France.

Italy in Friendly Gesture

Hasty preparations for departure were evident among German residents. Some already have left Turkey and others have sent luggage and belongings to the Reich.

Turkish political circles appeared to have been favorably impressed by a friendly gesture on the part of the Rome radio, which, on the occasion of the Turkish republic's recent anniversary, extended congratulations, played the Turkish national anthem and conducted a program in Turkish.

It was the first time Italy had made such a gesture in several years.

Announcement that Italy and Greece have agreed upon a reaffirmation of their nonaggression pledges also was cheered in Turkish quarters as furthering the maintenance of peace in the Levant.

Unneutral, Nazis Charge

The German press yesterday asserted Turkey had abandoned her neutral position by going to the side of Britain and France and echoed Soviet warnings that the Turks might "regret" their decision.

The Nazi press statements were made in comment on the Tuesday night speech before the Russian Supreme Soviet (parliament) by Premier and Foreign Commissar Molotoff, who spoke bitterly against Turkey.

Greeks, Italy Reaffirm Amity

Rome (Friday), Nov. 3 (AP).—An exchange of notes dated September 30 between Italy and Greece was published today in which each expressed the desire that a new agreement shortly would replace the treaty of friendship and conciliation signed in Rome in 1928.

The Greek note, signed by Premier Metaxas, expressed appreciation of Italy's "spontaneous gesture" in withdrawing Italian troops from Greece's Albanian frontier on September 20.

He said Greece reciprocated with similar action.

Replying to new Italian "assurances" given by Premier Mussolini on September 12, Metaxas said these had "created an atmosphere of cordiality" between the two governments.

A usually reliable diplomatic source said, meanwhile, that a new Italian-Bulgarian treaty was expected to be signed shortly. There were reports that a new agreement also was being studied with Egypt.

Czechs Threaten Strike

Copyright by New York Times.

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, Nov. 2.—It was learned from reliable sources here that a deputation of Czech workers called on the protectorate office in Prague threatening a general strike there unless the persons arrested after last week-end's independence day celebration were released within three days.

The same informant states there was wholesale abstention from work in factories on independence day despite notices warning the population that such actions would be considered sabotage, punishable under German military law.

The War Today . . .

GERMAN authorities ordered all their nationals living in Turkey to be ready to leave at once.

RUSSIA reportedly demanded of Bulgaria the right to establish naval and military garrisons at three Black Sea ports.

SLOVAKS rioted by thousands in Bratislava and called for return of territory taken by Hungary after the peace of Munich.

BRITAIN was reported planning a domestic war loan, possibly as large as $4,000,000,000. The view was expressed in Parliament that Russian Premier Molotoff's speech Tuesday had cut Germany off from military aid.

Won't Yield Port; Other Scandinavian Ministers Meet Envoys at Station

By G. E. R. Gedye

Moscow, Nov. 2.—The Finnish delegation returned to Moscow this morning headed by Special Delegate Dr. Juho Paasikivi and with the addition of Chief of Protocol Hakkarainen.

They were met at the station by Chief of Soviet Protocol Barkoff and the Swedish, Norwegian and Danish ministers.

It was decided there would be no meeting with Premier Molotoff and Josef Stalin today, as the delegation is busy preparing a translation of its final documents. The Finnish delegation attended as spectators this evening's session of the Supreme Soviet, devoted to a reception of the White Russian delegation from former Polish White Russia.

Information from Helsinki indicates the Finns are bringing their final offer. Apparently they are now willing to meet the Soviet Union to a considerable extent concerning demands for cession of territory which the Soviet Union claims essential for the defense of Leningrad, to cede Bogland and other islands off Kronstadt, and further to meet the Soviet Union in the question of cession of territory in the extreme north.

Balk at Naval Base

What the Finns apparently feel unable to do, as it would virtually destroy their independence, is to lease the Port of Hanko to the Soviet for establishment of a Soviet naval base there. The Finns would prefer to fight than do this. Despite the alarming character of passages in Premier Molotoff's speech referring to Finland, the Finns seem to believe the Soviet Union will conclude a peaceful agreement rather than proceed to extremes.

There has been constant contact since its arrival between the Finnish delegation and the other three Scandinavian legations. In Scandinavian circles everyone is looking towards Sweden for indication of her final attitude. A definite decision by Sweden to maintain under all circumstances the solidarity of the Scandinavian bloc, it is felt, would stabilize the situation and avert any possibility of conflict.

Sweden and most other Scandinavians, feel they must recognize that cession of Hanko to the Soviet Union would place Russia in a position to dominate the entrance to the Gulf of Bothnia. Although the Soviet Union has refrained from alarming Sweden by making any demands for the Aaland Islands, it is felt in Scandinavian circles that once Hanko became a great Soviet naval base it would place the Aaland Islands at Russia's mercy.

400,000 Finns Under Arms

Finland has today 400,000 men under arms in a position to defend the country, apparently determined as a last resort to offer resistance if no agreement can be reached. Despite deficiencies in mechanical forces and airplanes Finland seems convinced that she could put up a prolonged resistance, especially with the northern winter at her door.

In Swedish circles the question seems now to be viewed as whether Sweden may not be obliged at the last moment to take the lead in the

Slovaks Riot, Demand Lands From Hungary

Nazi-Controlled Police Stand Aside as Crowd Shouts for Revision

By the Associated Press

Bratislava, Nov. 2.—Thousands of Slovaks rioted here tonight, sacking two Hungarian newspaper offices and a number of Hungarian shops, following a mass meeting called to protest Hungary's acquisition of a slice of Slovak territory as a result of the Munich settlement.

Police looked on with folded arms as the rioters, shouting anti-Hungarian slogans, surged through the streets of this capital of Slovakia, nominally an autonomous republic but under German military protection.

"Down with Hungary—we got revision from Poland, now it's Hungary's turn to give back what she took," shouted the demonstrators, who sacked the premises of the Hungarian newspapers and the headquarters of the Hungarian minority party.

Ceded After Munich

(German and Italian mediators meeting in Vienna, November 2, little more than a month after the Munich agreement, awarded Hungary 4,875 square miles of territory with 860,000 inhabitants in the Slovak area of the then Czecho-Slovak republic after it already had lost the Sudetenland to Germany and the Teschen region to Poland.)

The meeting which preceded the disorders was called to protest Hungary's acquisition of Slovak territory.

The rioting started at 9 p. m., and continued until shortly before midnight while police looked on with folded arms.

The crowds swarmed through the Hungarian quarter in which one-third of Bratislava's 125,000 inhabitants live.

Soviet Embassy Sends 1,000 Bids to Party—Many Regrets

One thousand invitations to a gala Soviet anniversary party at the Russian embassy next Tuesday have reached Washington officials, society leaders and others, it was learned yesterday.

The embassy, noted for its lavish entertainments, its plenteous caviar and its vodka, announces on the R. S. V. P. cards sent out that the party will celebrate "the twenty-second anniversary of the great October Socialist revolution" that ended the rule of the czars.

Receipt of the invitations was followed in many circles by a noticeable air of expectancy, to which the current many-angled international diplomatic situation may or may not have contributed.

Efforts to obtain in advance an identity of some of the personages expected to make up the cosmopolitan company at the embassy were only partly successful. Many of the invited guests presumably considered it the part of diplomacy and politeness not to discuss the party in advance.

Some, it appeared, will be required to miss the festivities because of out-of-town engagements or for other reasons.

Acting Secretary of the Navy Edison said he probably would be away.

Senate Majority Leader Barkley, "must go to Kentucky to vote," and Senator Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, expects to be in his home State.

Secretary of War Woodring declined even to discuss the party.

Jerome Frank, member of the SEC, said he didn't know whether an invitation had come to his home, but in any event he would be unable to attend.

Milk Price Cut Proposed For Needy

U. S. Sets Hearings On Marketing Order; Farmers Would Get Extra $120,000

By James D. Secrest.
Post Staff Writer

A plan to sell milk to persons on relief at a price below the present 14-cent retail standard is contained in a proposed marketing agreement upon which hearings were scheduled yesterday by the Department of Agriculture.

The Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association, which requested a renewal of a Federal order regulating the handling of milk and cream in the Washington milkshed, agreed to a special producer price for class 1 milk sold for this purpose under supervision of the Secretary of Agriculture.

Cut 1 Cent a Quart

The special price of $2.71 a hundredweight amounts to a reduction of 1 cent a quart below the regular producer's price on this grade. Association officials expect a subsidy of possibly 3 cents a quart from the Surplus Commodities Corporation and a further reduction by the dairies.

The proposal is expected to swell the total return to producers while increasing consumption of low income families.

Producers said the order is necessary to stabilize marketing conditions, and they expect it to be instrumental in putting a stop to "bootlegging" of cream from outside the Washington milkshed.

B. B. Derrick, secretary-manager of the producers' association, which represents about 90 per cent of the farmers shipping milk into the District, said the marketing order should not cause any rise in the retail price of milk and cream in Washington.

Only the producers' price of cream sold for fluid consumption will be raised above present levels, Derrick said, and this will net farmers an extra $120,000 a year.

Dates of Hearings

Three public hearings will be held before action is taken on the marketing agreement and order. The first will be held November 20 at the courthouse in Warrenton, Va.; the second the next day at Winchester Hall, Frederick, Md., and the third the following day in the Agriculture Department auditorium, south building, Washington.

Among major provisions proposed by the producers, some of which are in effect, are:

Minimum prices, which are the same as existing prices, are Class 1, $4.17 per hundredweight; Class 2, $1.98 per hundredweight; Class 3, prices determined by formula based on butter prices. Class 1 and 2 pieces are subject to country plant handling and transportation allowances and a butterfat differential of 6 cents for each one-tenth of 1 per cent of butterfat above or below 4 per cent.

Pope Is Offended At Getting Same Message as Hitler

Copyright by New York Times.

Vatican City, Nov. 2.—President Tiso of Slovakia, has sent the Pope a message of homage, it was learned today, but since he sent a parallel message to Hitler, it is understood that His Holiness is offended. The telegram has not been published by the Osservatore Romano and it is believed in Vatican circles that the Pontiff will not even answer it.

The Holy See regarded Tiso's appointment to the presidency of the Slovak state with distrust because it did not want to see a priest placed in such a position under present circumstances.

The secretariat of state got confirmation today that the Archbishop of Lwow, was killed by Russians.

N.Y. Dock Hands Ordered to Strike

New York, Friday, Nov. 3 (AP).—Five thousand longshoremen and other dock workers at the Port of New York were called out on strike at midnight after the International Longshoremen's Association (A. F. L.) and nine coastwise shipping companies deadlocked over contract negotiations.

The midnight strike deadline was set by Joseph P. Ryan, president of the association. Waterfront observers predicted a complete paralysis of coastwise shipping in and out of New York harbor.

House Votes to End Embargo 245 to 179; Germans Accuse U. S. of Aiding Allies Outright

Berlin Warns That U-Boats Will Intensify Attacks on Ships Carrying Munitions

By the United Press.

Berlin, Nov. 2.—Angry Nazis tonight accused the United States of giving "outright support" to Great Britain and France by repeal of the United States arms embargo.

Official quarters declined to comment for publication until there is time to study the full effects of the legislation, but wel-informed individuals left no doubt as to the reaction of the average German to repeal of the embargo.

Nazi quarters, foreseeing heavy British and French orders for American arms and munitions, warned that U-boats probably will intensify their attacks on arms-carrying ships.

Both the foreign office and the propaganda ministry said that the lifting of the embargo "was no surprise and was to be expected."

The Nazi press has charged that repeal of the mandatory arms embargo would favor only the Allies and threatens to "drag the United States into the war."

Big News in London

London, Friday, Nov. 3 (AP).—London morning newspapers rated as a number one news story under large headlines the vote of the United States House of Representatives for repeal of the arms embargo.

"The United States Does It," was the way the Mirror headlined the story.

"United States Finally Approves Arms Ban Repeal," said the banner line of the News-Chronicle.

"The Daily Telegraph enlarged its headlines in late editions to "Roosevelt Wins Fight to Lift Arms Ban."

"Arms for Britain by the Week-end," said another headline.

B. B. C. Plays It Up

New York, Nov. 2 (INS).—The House vote on the arms embargo was the biggest news on British Broadcasting Corporation newscasts tonight, pushing even the visit of King George VI to royal air force headquarters out of first rank position, Columbia Broadcasting System's short-wave listening station reported.

Until the House voted, the King's visit was announced as "the most outstanding event of the last two days."

Swiss Dancer Gets 5-Year Term For Spying

Geneva, Nov. 2 (AP).—A 35-year-old dancer known as Nina was sentenced to five years in prison today by five Swiss judges who found her guilty of espionage and treason.

Roger Joel, a former draftsman in a Swiss arms factory, jointly convicted on the same charges, was sentenced to three years imprisonment.

The convictions carried loss of civil rights for three years in the case of Joel and ten years in the case of the dancer, who was on the docket as Virginia Capt Rota.

Paul Rochat, a Geneva detective who went to trial at the same time, was convicted of political activity in behalf of a foreign State and sentenced to fifteen months. His wife, Dolly, received a ten-month suspended sentence.

Crowds Flock to Capitol For End of Neutrality Debate

Record Throng Forms Day-Long Line Outside House Chamber; Many More Persons Turned Away

Hundreds of persons waited patiently for hours to gain admission to House galleries yesterday to hear the conclusion of the neutrality debate, and several thousand turned away on seeing the waiting line.

Fourteen-hundred persons packed the galleries throughout the afternoon, and many of these stayed throughout the session from 11 a. m. until 5 p. m., without lunch. Those who left lost their seats. Yesterday's throng was the largest, according to Capitol police.

The galleries were filled promptly at 11 a. m., when the House convened, and the line formed immediately. At times it reached from the foot of the marble stairway on the second floor well into Statuary Hall.

The only reward of those who stood throughout the afternoon was to be admitted after the debate was concluded and the roll calls began.

Unlike the Senate, the House kept the diplomatic and White House galleries barred to the public. At times the latter was empty and never had more than three or four occupants.

Strict surveillance by Capitol police, which has been maintained since the neutrality bill debate began in the Senate, was not relaxed. Uniformed men patrolled the corridors, stood at doorways and watched the milling crowds. Plainclothes detectives mingled with them unobtrusively.

The floor of the House itself, contrary to its usual appearance this session, was crowded. Not more than a score of its 435 members were absent and those present, either excited or inattentive, were so noisy the Speaker's gavel banged frequently.

When Representative Rayburn (Democrat), of Texas, finished the speech that climaxed the fight for the bill, applause, shouts and shrill rebel yells rose from the Democratic side of the House. Republicans mostly were glum and silent.

City of Flint Speeds Into Blockade Zone

Ship Rounding Norway; U. S. Plans Vigorous Fight in Nazi Court

By Harold A. Peters.
United Press Staff Writer.

Copenhagen, Denmark, Nov. 2 (U.P.).—The captured American freighter City of Flint, in command of a Nazi prize crew, tonight was reported racing at full speed toward Great Britain's naval blockade off the southern coast of Norway in an attempt to reach a German port.

Norwegian fishermen reported sighting the prize ship late today well out at sea off Haugesund, less than 125 miles from the Skagerrak entrance to the Baltic.

The reports, which said the ship was steaming southward at full speed at dusk, indicated that the Nazi prize crew had quit Norwegian territorial waters and was heading into the heart of the British blockade.

The sighting of foreign planes, presumably German, off the Danish coasts today aroused speculation that Nazi warplanes might have been sent out from the German base on the Island of Sylt to convoy the City of Flint into port.

U. S. Plans Legal Fight

Attorney General Frank Murphy said yesterday that international law experts in the Department of Justice are preparing to make a "vigorous" legal fight in the case of the captive American freighter City of Flint.

Nazi officials have announced that if the German prize crew is successful in getting the City of Flint to a German harbor, the vessel will be subjected to the usual prize court proceedings, probably in Hamburg.

Department of Justice lawyers presumably would appear before this prize court to argue for return of the ship to its American owner, the United States Maritime Commission.

Embargo's End To Free Billion For Arms Here

British Want 4,000 Planes, French 3,800; Other Exports to Suffer

By Edward E. Bomar.
Associated Press Staff Writer

A flood of European war orders—which Administration quarters expect will total a billion dollars in the next few weeks—will be released by repeal of the arms embargo.

Even before the House action yesterday, a French purchasing mission contracted for 4,600 aircraft motors from two eastern manufacturers at a price of approximately $50,000,000, officials were informed. A British mission, meanwhile, has been negotiating for some 1,600 training planes.

The arms embargo halted delivery on some 600 aircraft early in September. In addition to these, the French contemplate purchases of some 3,800 planes, and the British 4,000, it was reported authoritatively. A Swedish mission has been negotiating for upwards of 250 aircraft and a Belgian mission for 200.

The British-French Allies have stressed their need for warplanes of all types, but their purchases are expected to cover a wide range of other products, including:

Motor trucks and motorcycles, clothing, machine tools, field ranges, explosives, foodstuffs, surgical instruments, hospital supplies, searchlights, gas masks, pontoon equipment, water purifying units, ambulances, tents, saddles, telephones and radio compasses.

An immediate effect of repeal of the embargo will be to permit delivery of some 300 war planes for Britain and France which have

British Plan 4-Billion Loan; Chamberlain Derides Molotoff

By International News Service

London, Nov. 2.—Great Britain is planning the immediate launching of a domestic war loan of some $4,000,000,000, it was learned tonight.

Chancellor of the Exchequer Sir John Simon will take the initial step in the House of Commons Monday by introducing a resolution which would empower the treasury to float the loan.

It was said that the first issue of domestic war bonds would be aimed at raising $4,000,000,000, with subsequent issues planned to amass even greater sums for prosecution of the conflict against Germany.

This information was elicited from authoritative quarters after a busy parliamentary day in which Prime Minister Chamberlain chided Soviet Premier-Foreign Commissar V. M. Molotoff for his "flights of fancy" concerning the Allied war aims.

Chamberlain's weekly war report in Commons coincided with an address in the House of Lords by Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax in which he said no peace could be acceptable that did not bring with it a "solution" of the world armaments problem, but declared that for the present the "primary aim" is to win the war.

With the Balkans assuming increasing importance in view of the renewed Italo-Greek accord and reports of Soviet pressure for naval-military bases in Bulgaria, the Allies were revealed to be actively engaged in efforts to win this strategic region away from subjection to the Russo-German line-up.

Oliver Stanley, president of the board of trade, told Commons that negotiations are under way seeking

Majority of 66 Is Thrice What Leaders Expected; Bill Goes To Conference Today

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

The House yesterday in effect swept the embargo on arms from the existing neutrality law and cleared the way for cash-and-carry trade in all goods with belligerents.

Actual repeal of the arms ban awaited only routine conference agreement and ratifying action today or tomorrow.

By majorities that tripled official forecasts, two isolationist attempts to block enactment by binding conferees to retain the embargo failed, 245 to 179 and 243 to 181.

Packed but silent galleries, and a House floor jammed with a full turnout of members and visiting Senators heard Speaker Bankhead announce the Administration victory in terms of vote tallies that spelled but one word, "Repeal."

It was the purpose for which the President had summoned Congress from vacation on September 21 after Europe's war broke out—the climax of four weeks of Senate debate and three days of echoing House controversy.

Republicans Join Administration

Administration majorities, swollen by unexpected support from Republican ranks, ran the House margin for repeal up to 66 on an attempt to retain a limited embargo, and 62 on rejection of the existing embargo law.

The House and later the Senate, which in recess had awaited the outcome, immediately named conferees. A conference was called for 10:30 this morning to shape the neutrality bill in its final form.

A prompt conference agreement was expected, and final action by either or both houses is possible this afternoon, but more likely tomorrow. Majority Leader Rayburn, beaming his satisfaction with yesterday's vote, predicted sine die adjournment of Congress as soon as the conference report is approved. He said House action today was contingent on unanimous consent, as a conference report must normally lie over a day.

Three pending opposition moves to instruct conferees went to rapid-fire votes in midafternoon, after both the Speaker and majority leader took the floor in dramatic appeals for repeal action.

Wadsworth Cheered

Both received ovations, as had Representative Wadsworth (Republican), of New York, when he dissented with the bulk of his minority colleagues to urge enactment of the Administration bill.

In rejecting the Shanley motion to retain the existing arms embargo in even more drastic form than present law, 21 Republicans joined with 220 Democrats, 1 Farmer-Laborite and 1 American Laborite for repeal. Only 36 Democrats voted with 143 Republicans and 2 Progressives for the embargo.

The first repeal test came on an amendment by Representative Vorys (Republican), of Ohio, to embargo all shipments of arms and ammunition, but to permit sale of such "implements of war" as non-military planes. This was the amendment which upset the Administration on the House repeal effort last session, but yesterday it was repulsed, 245 to 179.

Credit Prohibition Fails

The only other attempt by the opposition to amend the Senate neutrality measure came on a proposal by Representative Wolcott (Republican), of Michigan, specifically to

Second Witness Tells Dies Reds Rule Sea Union

McCuistion Testifies Again, Says Radicals Said They'd 'Get' Him

By John B. Oakes
Post Staff Writer

For the second time in two days, the Justice Department yesterday received a complaint from a Dies Committee witness that civil rights had been violated by the allegedly Communist-controlled National Maritime Union.

Acting on the advice of the committee itself, Frederick C. Phillips, ousted N. M. U. official, followed the precedent set by William C. McCuistion, another witness, in asking the civil liberties section of the Justice Department to investigate his case.

Phillips testified he had been subjected to a "reign of terror" by the N. M. U. Communist domination of the union, he declared, gave Soviet Russia virtual control of American shipping.

McCuistion, who between his appearances on the witness stand has been held in jail as a fugitive from justice, startled committee members by relating how a friendly seaman visited him Tuesday in his cell to warn him that Communists along the Baltimore waterfront are boasting that they mean "to get" him.

Wanted in Murder

McCuistion, wanted in New Orleans on a charge of murdering an N. M. U. official, stated that last week while he was in New York, friends informed him that "if I showed up on the waterfront they (the Communists) would get me."

McCuistion indicated he would fight extradition to New Orleans at his police court hearing scheduled for 10 a. m. today, Lieut. Horace Lineberg, chief of the alien squad, said last night.

Chairman Dies, who has already denounced the N. M. U. for attempting to discredit the witness by pressing the murder charge, declared, "I am going to call upon the civil liberties section of the Department of Justice to protect witnesses before this committee."

"I am going to see that full protection is offered. Witnesses before a Congressional Committee are not going to be intimidated," he added. An official of the Department of Justice last night said that the department had received no such request from Dies.

Phillips, a war veteran and former secretary of the Atlantic district of the N. M. U., testified that not more than 10 per cent of the N. M. U. members are Communists, but that of the officials, "80 per cent are Communist and the other 20 per cent are afraid to open their mouths."

"You might say," suggested the chairman, that Russia has more control over the situation than the United States."

"You might," replied Phillips.

"The Soviet Union is virtually in control of the situation here so far as our ships are concerned," Dies went on.

"At the present time, I believe so," the witness responded.

Fears Sabotage

Phillips warned the committee that the Communists "could sabotage shipping to such an extent that the Navy would be powerless."

McCuistion, who yesterday took the stand for the fourth successive day, told the committee that George Mink, often mentioned in previous testimony, was "the power behind the scenes" of the American Communist Party. Mink, described as a Soviet secret police agent, could "give orders" to Earl Browder, party secretary, McCuistion declared.

Revealing that the committee had been attempting to subpena Mink, Dies instructed Rhea Whitley, committee counsel, to ask the Justice Department for help.

Prior to yesterday's testimony, Dies told reporters that the Administration would do "everything in its power" to defeat his request for a two-year extension of the life of the committee, from next January 3, to January 3, 1942.

But if a record vote were taken on the question, said Dies, not more than ten members will be against it.

Capper Asks U. S. Act for Peace

New York, Nov. 2 (AP).—Senator Capper (Republican), of Kansas, suggested tonight that this country "initiate peace negotiations" to end the European conflict.

"The United States," he said in a speech prepared for the Bronxville Men's Club, "cannot afford to participate in this European war. "But the United States can, and ought to, participate in a program for peace in Europe and the rest of the world now."

The Gallup Poll

Debate in Congress Causes Drop in Sentiment for Repeal

By Dr. George Gallup
Director American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Nov. 2.—The effect of the debate and voting in the Senate on the neutrality act during the last three weeks has been to increase public sentiment for keeping the arms embargo. Although a majority of voters in a Nation-wide survey still favor changing the act, the number is not as large today as it was before the Senate "isolationists" opened fire in the historic Senate debate.

GEORGE GALLUP

Each week for the past two months the American Institute of Public Opinion has conducted surveys throughout the country testing opinion on the neutrality act and proposed changes. A scientifically-selected cross-section of voters in each State was polled. The results show that, after a temporary rise in sentiment for changing the act which came just after the President's speech to Congress, the trend has pointed downward.

The issue put to voters was:

"Do you think Congress should make changes in the neutrality law so that England and France, or any other nations, can buy war materials, including arms and airplanes, in the United States?"

The results:

	Yes	No
Before Roosevelt's Speech on September 21	57%	43%
After Roosevelt's Speech (October 4)	62	38
After first week of Senate debate (October 11)	60	40
October 22	60	40
October 29	58	42
Today	56	44

In a companion survey completed this week, the Institute, at the suggestion of Congressman Karl Mundt of South Dakota, polled voters on the specific issue of raising the embargo. The Institute split its national cross-section into two equal halves, each half containing the same types of voters, and to the second half it put the question:

"Do you think Congress should repeal the existing arms embargo in the neutrality law so that nations at war can buy airplanes, arms and munitions in the United States?

The vote on this question was the same as the vote on the Institute's other neutrality question reported above.

For repealing embargo	56%
For keeping embargo	44

On the full cross-section the vote on the embargo question might vary slightly from the above figures, but the chances are that the variation would not amount to more than a per cent or two.

Most of the change in sentiment during the last few weeks has come among women voters and among Republicans, the survey shows. The women's vote for changing the neutrality act dropped 13 points, while among Republican voters there has been a drop of approximately 10 points.

The survey found four geographical sections definitely in favor of changing the act, and two sections evenly, or nearly evenly, divided in opinions.

	For change.	Against change.
New England	56%	44%
Middle Atlantic	59	41
East Central	50	50
West Central	51	49
South	65	35
Far West	60	40

Repeal Favored By Who's Who

Princeton, N. J., Nov. 2.—Frequently the question has arisen as to what sentiment on the neutrality act would be if the best-informed persons in the country were polled.

The American Institute of Public Opinion has just completed a survey among a cross-section of persons listed in Who's Who in America, a compilation of outstanding men and women in business and professional life. To this group the Institute put the same question as it put to voters throughout the country:

"Do you think Congress should make changes in the neutrality law so that England and France or any other nations, can buy war materials, including arms and airplanes, in the United States?"

The vote is:

For change	78%
Against change	22

Among the general public the Institute found a vote of 56 per cent for change to 44 per cent opposed, as reported elsewhere today.

One of the largest groups in Who's Who are college professors, deans and college presidents. In the Institute's special Who's Who poll this group voted overwhelmingly in favor of changing the neutrality act. The actual vote is:

For change	76%
Against change	24

Iron Magnates Deny Collusion On Ore Prices

Monopoly Quiz Told Letter on Agreement Didn't Mean That

By the Associated Press

Six leaders in the iron ore business before the Monopoly Committee yesterday undertook to explain why the base price of iron ore had varied only twice in the last 14 years.

Two of the witnesses were asked about letters dealing with relations among the firms which supply iron ore to the major steel companies.

Patrick Butler, a nephew of Associate Justice Butler, of the Supreme Court, explained that a letter to his father, Emmett Butler, did not "mean what it seems." Dated April 10, 1934, the letter said, "I saw Hoyt yesterday and he told me the ore magnates had decided to retain last year's market prices."

The Butlers operate Butler Brothers, an iron ore producing company at St. Paul, Minn., and the letter referred to Elton Hoyt 2d, president of Pickands, Mather & Co., important buyer and seller of Butlers' ore. Hoyt sat a few chairs away.

"Did you magnates get together and fix the price of ore?" boomed Leon Henderson, SEC commissioner and committee member.

"That's the first I heard of it," Hoyt replied calmly.

Called Shorthand

The younger Butler said his letter "did not mean that ore magnates got together and fixed the prices—that was just shorthand to my father that meant the magnates and their customers had negotiated a price for the year."

A second letter was from E. B. Greene, president of the Cleveland-Cliffs Corporation, to G. M. Humphrey, president of the M. A. Hanna Co., both Cleveland concerns dealing in iron ore.

Written in September, 1934, it said that Greene welcomed "Alex into our 'union.'" It added that Greene was "glad that the iron ore business is so largely in the hands of a small group of men who all work on a close and friendly basis."

Earlier, Greene had testified that there was "very keen competition" in the sale of iron ore, and that the Hanna company was one of several "substantial competitors."

Concerning the letter, Greene explained with a smile that "Alec" was A. C. Brown, then newly appointed vice president of his firm, and that this was a "personal note" regarding Brown's appointment.

"The last paragraph was merely facetious," he added. "We are friends and do work on a friendly basis, but not on an improper basis."

A. H. Feller, Justice Department attorney, who was questioning him, said he had not implied anything "improper."

Earlier, each of the six iron ore merchants had been questioned separately about his concern and its relations with the major steel companies.

Price Stayed Up

In addition to the Butlers, Hoyt and Greene, the sextette included George M. Humphrey, of the M. A. Hanna Co., and Crispin Oglebay, of Oglebay, Norton & Co., also a Cleveland concern.

Feller introduced charts showing that the base price of iron ore (for a ton of Messaba non-bessemer ores—51.50 iron natural content) was $4.25 a ton for the four years of 1925-29. It then rose to $4.50 and remained at that level for the next eight years; was advanced to $4.95 in 1937 and is now quoted at that figure.

Hoyt and Humphrey said that the base price each season was determined by the "first major sale" of ore.

They said most ore suppliers had long-term contracts with steel companies and that concessions were made by reducing contracted tonnage during depression years to maintain price levels.

Philadelphia Race Watched For '40 Trend

Pepper Woos Straying Republicans; Democrats Blast at City's Debt

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Nov. 2.—Philadelphia's mayoral election fight was projected further into national focus tonight with a Republican warning that defeat by a Democratic-Fusionist ticket might presage losses also in the Presidential election of 1940.

Not since 1834 have Democrats held sway here.

But, supported by "fusionist" Republicans, the Democratic slate headed by City Controller Robert C. White is accepted as a definite threat against Republican Candidate Robert E. Lamberton and his running mates in the November 7 balloting. Lamberton resigned as county judge to run.

Pennsylvania at large will name one justice of the Supreme Court and three Superior Court judges. There has been little statewide campaigning. Real hostilities center in the City of Brotherly Love.

George Wharton Pepper, former Senator, wooing Republicans who have strayed to Fusionists, warned that election of a Democratic mayor would be "inviting defeat" in the 1940 Presidential campaign.

Democratic speakers blast away at the city's financial difficulties—there's a net funded indebtedness of more than $380,000,000.

Republicans lay city fiscal troubles largely to the depression which they contend has been prolonged by the New Deal.

Of the 1,056,132 Philadelphians qualified to vote 583,774 are Republicans, 446,639 Democrats.

Britain Favors U. S. Intervention

London (Friday), Nov. 3 (INS)—The British public favors submission of Allied peace terms to President Roosevelt for possible mediation, according to the results of a survey conducted by the British Institute of Public Opinion, the News-Chronicle said today.

The idea of conveying to Roosevelt the minimum terms under which the Allies would negotiate peace with Germany won a five-to-four vote among representatives cross-sections of the British people polled by the Institute, the paper reported.

TVA Makes First Reduction In 'Yardstick'

2,000 of 340,000 Customers to Save ½ Cent Per K. W. H.

By Felix Cotten.

A reduction in the Tennessee Valley Authority's "yardstick" power rate to consumers was announced yesterday by David E. Lilienthal, TVA vice chairman.

It is the first reduction since the famous yardstick rate, designed by the Administration as a standard to bring private rates down, was promulgated in the fall of 1933.

Lilienthal revealed, however, that the lower rate is applicable for the time being only to about 2,000 of the 340,000 consumers of TVA power. These consumers are members of a cooperative organization in Alcorn County, Miss. About 500 of the favored consumers are farmers served by 100 miles of rural power lines built by the cooperative.

The new rate is two and one-half cents per hour on the first 50 kilowatt hours of power used per month by residential consumers. The old rate was three cents. A similar reduction is made to commercial users. The minimum monthly residential bill, however, is still 75 cents.

The reduction, which may be extended in the near future to eight or ten other small municipalities or cooperative organizations, Lilienthal said, applies only to the rate charged consumers. The wholesale rate of from four to six and one-half mills which the TVA charges the municipality or cooperative is not changed.

The Alcorn County co-operative put the lower rate into effect August 1, Lilienthal said. It took the initiative, since it was earning "too much money on its investment." It was able last summer to repay the TVA the money it had borrowed to set up business.

Since other municipalities are earning enormous returns on their investment, Lilienthal declared, the TVA board decided to make the rate general. It will be applied to other retail organizations as their earning situation permits.

When the new rate is applied to all consumers of TVA power, Lilienthal said, the saving will be about $1,500,000 a year.

Big Towns to Wait

It will not be applied in the immediate future, however, to consumers in large centers like Memphis, Knoxville, Nashville and Chattanooga. Power properties in these cities controled by the Electric Bond and Share Co. and the Commonwealth and Southern Corporation in the last year have been taken over by the municipalities under an arrangement with the TVA.

Lilienthal said that since the old rate was announced in 1933, power rates throughout the country have been reduced by about one-third.

The new rate, Lilienthal declared, will result in a bill of $2.25 for the consumer of 100 kilowatt hours in a month. This compares with $2.85 in Washington, $4.72 in New York, and $3.65 in Chicago.

Bergdoll and Wife Sued Here By Mother for $434,000

U. S. Officials Also Defendants With World War Draft Dodger; District Action Parallels Suit Started in Philadelphia

Mrs. Emma C. Bergdoll sued in the District Court yesterday to collect $434,000 and interest out of money the Government seized from her draft-dodger son, Grover Cleveland Bergdoll.

Charles A. Brawn, another son, who changed his name after his brother was involved in scandal, filed the complaint as trustee for Mrs. Bergdoll. Named defendants were Bergdoll, his German born wife Berta, Attorney General Murphy and W. A. Julian, Treasurer of the United States.

The complaint, drafted by Attorney Henry A. Craig, of Philadelphia, said Bergdoll began going in debt to his mother in 1914, when she bought a house for him and earned an $18,000 commission.

Other debts claimed included:

A total of $60,000 due Mrs. Bergdoll for six years' salary, at $10,000 a year, for looking after her son's property while he was a fugitive in Germany.

A Christmas gift of $125,000 Bergdoll gave his mother in 1920, but which she never received because the son's property was seized by the Alien Property Custodian before she could collect the money.

Fines totaling $23,000 paid by Mrs. Bergdoll for herself and others for conspiracy to help her son elude American authorities. The complaint asserted that Bergdoll promised to repay the fines.

Loans ranging in size from $500 to $50,000.

The suit closely paralleled one filed by Brawn in Philadelphia Wednesday. Both followed an announcement of Murphy that Bergdoll would be able to recover approximately $300,000 of $525,000 the Government seized from him while he was a fugitive.

Bergdoll has been sentenced to serve eight years in the Governors Island Military Prison, in New York.

Wires Are Ordered Closed To Racing News Services

Joint Action by Illinois and U. S. Imperils M. L. Annenberg's Network; Phone Companies Announce Compliance

Chicago, Nov. 2 (AP).—The Nationwide racing news empire dominated by M. L. Annenberg was menaced tonight by a Federal-State move designed to sever its life lines.

U. S. District Attorney William J. Campbell and State's Attorney Thomas J. Courtney of Cook County (Chicago) sent letters to the American Telephone and Telegraph, Western Union and Illinois Bell Telephone companies demanding that they "immediately" stop renting wire facilities to the Annenberg horse race information services.

A spokesman for the A. T. & T. in New York stated compliance with the unprecedented ultimatum was likely. He explained a definite decision had not yet been made but added:

"We want always to co-operate with the constituted authorities."

The other firms did not disclose what action they would take.

Campbell told reporters the edict covered only activities in the northern district of Illinois but opined that, if the communications companies complied, the Annenberg race news interests would suffer a death blow because the contracts between them and the utilities were executed in Chicago.

He expressed the belief Federal prosecutors in other jurisdictions would act if the parties attempted to draw up new agreements outside this State.

The letter to the Illinois Bell Telephone Co. requested immediate termination of services to Annenberg, Nationwide News Service, Inc., Illinois Nationwide News Service, Inc., or any other individual or corporation engaged in similar activity. The company said it would comply Monday.

A. T. & T. to Comply

New York, Nov. 2 (AP).—The American Telephone & Telegraph Co. announced tonight that in compliance with the request of Federal and State prosecutors in Chicago it would discontinue one week from today its service to the Nation-wide News Service of the M. L. Annenberg racing news organization.

The intruder boarded a street car. Keefe telephoned police, who arrested the man. He had Mrs. Fries pocketbook containing $8.

Oil Strike Starts Four-State Boom

Falls City, Nebr., Nov. 2 (AP).—Discovery of a small producing oil well in the four-State Forest City basin started wavelets of a new oil boom lapping through parts of Missouri, Kansas, Iowa and Nebraska today.

Major companies and "wildcatters" have leased an estimated 3,000,000 acres in the region this year, starting with a geologist's finding of oil traces in a WPA rock quarry.

Opie Read Dies; Writer, Friend Of Mark Twain

'Arkansas Traveler' Editor Succumbs After Long Coma

Chicago, Nov. 2 (AP).—Opie Read, gallant "last man" of the Nation's rough and tumble literary epoch, died today, seven weeks before his eighty-seventh birthday.

His fatal illness was brought on by a September heat wave. He lay in a coma most of the time in recent weeks.

Always a bon vivant, and rarely excelled as a spinner of yarns, Read was bone and sinew of that writing era in which flourished such figures as Mark Twain, Eugene Field, James Whitcomb Riley and Bill Nye.

Read composed 52 books and scores of short stories, but his fame rested chiefly upon his editorship of the Arkansas Traveler, a humorous paper, from 1883 to 1891; "The Jucklins," a novel published in 1895; his autobiography, "I Remember," and his knack of telling stories and coining epigrams.

Sympathetic to Satan

In his last years he wrote "The Autobiography of The Devil: Satan's Side of It." This book exemplified his friendly, tolerant philosophy and was a transcript of "just what I imagined Satan would say of manners and morals, as dictated to a sinner."

In part, on the platform and spicing the camaraderie of conversation, the bulky raconteur, standing six feet and three inches, told in salty idiom of associations with Mark Twain, Field, Clarence Darrow and several Presidents. As a Chautauqua and after-dinner speaker, he visited, as he said, every county seat in the forty-eight States.

Philosophy and humor were his defenses against worry, fear, boredom, age and the doings of his unpredictable fellow-creatures whom he liked even as he roasted them.

Believed in Books

He believed in books, music, philosophy, poker, fun, a hearty drink and a good dinner. "If it weren't for books," he confided, "I would have gone insane years ago." Shakespeare was the first on his list of indispensable writers.

He was ever the connoisseur of feminine looks. "I still respond to grace and beauty," he declared on his eighty-fourth birthday.

His stories had native flavor, whether they concerned celebrities or unknowns. One of his best-liked anecdotes joined him with Eugene Field on a Missouri River fishing trip. "We had some champagne along," he related. "Gene didn't drink much of it. I had had quite a bit. Suddenly a buzzard flew over us. Gene looked up quizzically and addressed the bird, pointing toward me the while: 'No, he's not quite ready yet.'"

Excited Citizens Fear Dancing Blimp in Peril

The Goodyear blimp got a couple of citizens very much up in the air yesterday.

The citizens were actually on the ground but seeing the big silver bag dancing about in a bouncing November breeze they supposed something was wrong and feared it might be blown to sea.

One got in touch with blimp officials and the other called The Post. Both were told blimps have dancing ways, and this one would come down with ease. It did, without pilot or passengers even knowing there had been a ripple of excitement.

House Votes To Abolish Arms Sale Ban

Majority of 66 Thrice What Administration Leaders Expected

prohibit any credit extensions to belligerents by the R. F. C., the Export-Import Bank, or other Federal agencies. The Wolcott amendment, the first to fall by the wayside, was defeated 228 to 196, a majority of 32.

All business disposed of, the House adjourned at 4:50 p. m. and ten minutes later the Senate, which last week overwhelmingly voted repeal, convened briefly to send the bill to conference and name conferees.

Garner Names Committee

Vice President Garner designated a six-man conference committee, headed by Chairman Pittman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, author of the Senate bill. To serve with Pittman, Garner named Senators George, of Georgia, Connally of Texas, and Wagner of New York (Democrats), and Borah of Idaho and Johnson of California (Republicans). The first four of these six favor the Administration bill. Johnson and Borah together led the Senate fight against repeal.

Speaker Bankhead appointed Chairman Bloom of the House Foreign Affairs Committee to head the House conference group. Other House managers named were Representatives Johnson of Texas and Kee of West Virginia (Democrats), and Fish of New York and Eaton of New Jersey (Republicans). All of the House conferees except Fish favor repeal.

Bloom immediately called a preliminary meeting of House conferees in his committee room to discuss in advance of today's conference the House position on various items in the Senate bill.

The bill as passed by the House last session contained none of the drastic "cash and carry" features written into the Senate measure, and even would eliminate authority for the President to create and curtail American travel in "combat zones."

Leaders considered yesterday's House failure to "instruct" any changes in the Senate measure as tantamount to approval not only of repeal, but of other main features of the Senate bill. Only minor adjustments in the Senate measure were expected in conference.

But open to possible conference modification were some of the provisions of the Senate's shipping section, which bans American ships carrying any goods to European belligerents, blacks out American ship voyages to the Canadian Atlantic coast and empowers the President to bar travel in other danger zones.

Bland Asks Modifications

A series of proposed modifications were turned over to House conferees yesterday by Chairman Bland of the House Merchant Marine Committee. Bland seeks to give American ships sailing for belligerent ports before the law's enactment a longer grace period. (The Senate bill would turn them back unless they sail seven days before enactment.)

The Virginia House chairman also asked fewer statutory restrictions on American ship travel, and sought to lift the Senate requirement that title must be transferred to the belligerent purchaser before cargoes are shipped in non-neutral vessels.

When the bill becomes law, the President will be required to lift the embargo on arms shipments to belligerents. But warring purchasers must transport the American munitions they acquire in their own or non-American vessels.

Allies Chief Purchasers

Belligerents, such as England, France and even Germany, could purchase any weapon of war in this country, pay the equivalent of cash, and arrange for their own transportation. Actually, as pointed out in debate, Britain and France, in control of the seas, would be the chief war purchasers.

Relied on as America's chief safeguard against war involvement was the curb on American shipping and travel direct to belligerents. This section alone was expected to bring the withdrawal of 92 American vessels from areas affected, force abandonment of eight foreign trade routes in which the Government has invested $195,061,000, and cause a gross revenue loss to the American Merchant Marine of $52,500,000.

There was no demonstration as the House turned thumbs down on any form of an embargo. Leaders, who had overturned last session's adverse margin of 41 to bring this result, exchanged felicitations. Chief source of comment was the size of the majority. The sole official forecast, by Majority Whip Boland, had placed the "minimum" favorable margin at 20. Rayburn had privately guessed a minimum of 40.

"The majority for repeal exceeded by at least 25 votes the fondest hopes of any of the poll takers, of which I was one," commented Representative Warren (Democrat), of North Carolina.

Molotoff Mentioned

The swell in the repeal total was variously attributed to a Republican swing believed influenced by Wadsworth, appeals by the Speaker and Majority Leader, and adverse reaction to Soviet Premier Molotoff's criticism of the repeal move.

The chamber hushed, then broke into loud applause as Speaker Bankhead faced the House to make the Administration appeal.

"It is almost impossible," said the Speaker, "to put an embargo against the natural processes of a man's mind and heart. We still have the right to think in this country, though in some lands a man cannot act as he thinks. I cannot find myself in sympathy with the totalitarian system of government."

Bankhead said the bill was designed for America's own neutrality and security, but said he frankly admired the democratic governments of England and France, and added: "I cannot complain if France and England gain a temporary advantage from this legislation."

Speaker Quotes Wilson

The Speaker denied some opposition charges that munitions makers influenced America's entry into the last war and quoted President Wilson's references to German submarining of American vessels and loss of American lives as the determining cause.

Representative Fish (Republican), of New York, leading House opponent of repeal, concluded his case with a challenge to the leadership "to show why the arms embargo should be repealed."

"Repeal the arms embargo," said the New York Republican, "and the word will go out that we have taken sides, that we have lined up on the side of the Allies, that their fight is our fight."

Rayburn Warns of Impasse

Majority Leader Rayburn earlier took the floor to warn that instructions to conferees to retain the embargo might result in an impasse between House and Senate on neutrality legislation that would leave America without safeguards against sinking of its ships and loss of American lives aboard. He said he trembled to contemplate what might be the reaction in this country should that occur.

"Is it immoral to sell munitions of war to somebody who was not the aggressor, who did not want war, who did not prepare for war?" asked Rayburn. "Is it unfair to sell them even a musket to defend that sacred place known as their fireside and their home and their inalienable right to liberty?"

Like Bankhead, Rayburn struck indirectly at the totalitarian states and declared:

"I cannot help but feel and believe that the individual, the nation or the civilization that forgets and denies God is doomed and damned, which I believe it should be."

Shanley Speaks

Representative Shanley (Democrat), of Connecticut, author of the original motion to retain the embargo, said the President should not take Congressional action as a "green light to intervene in European affairs." Representative Vorys briefly took the floor to charge that a vote against the Shanley embargo or his own limited embargo would be a vote to sell "bombs, poison gas and liquid fire to kill women and children."

Wadsworth's speech for repeal, credited by many with influencing a Republican swing-over, received a standing ovation from both sides of the aisle.

Wadsworth quietly admonished the House to "be calm" that "we have been a little jittery in the last two or three weeks," that "there is a realistic side to all this."

"No Man So Mad"

"It may be that mad men are loose in Europe, but as America stands today in all her might and with all her potential power, I cannot conceive of any man so mad as to deliberately invite the United States to be his enemy."

Wadsworth, who voted against the original arms embargo and for its repeal last spring, said he had no faith in legislation which establishes rigid rules for governmental conduct "in the face of an unpredictable event."

He said the embargo "operates to the advantage of heavily armed aggressors and to the distinct disadvantage of the little man."

"Not Wildly Enthusiastic"

"I favor the Senate bill as an alternative, a preferable alternative to the present law," he said. "I confess I am not wildly enthusiastic. Already we have found the difficulty of writing a neutrality act, already we are guilty of inconsistencies; and yet I do not object to those inconsistencies, because most of them I believe arose from commonsensical considerations."

He mentioned the Senate bill's exemption of outlying belligerent territories from its shipping bans as an example of these "inconsistencies," but said the Senate approached the problem realistically "and if legislation can keep us out of war this (cash and carry) provision will do more than any other that can be drafted."

Wadsworth concluded with a note of admonition that "those in high authority should refrain from scolding other nations."

"Nothing is gained for us in the interest of peace and liberty by exciting enmity," he said. "I think Theodore Roosevelt expressed this very well when he said: 'Speak softly and carry a big stick.'"

Bus Route Protest To Be Reviewed

The Public Utilities Commission today will review the protests lodged yesterday at a public hearing against a change in the northbound route of Chevy Chase buses.

Several merchants along I street, between Thirteenth and Fifteenth streets northwest, the proposed route, had objected to it.

Clarence J. Shaffer and Julius M. Sauber, representing the I street merchants, suggested that if a change is made the buses be routed through K street. This suggestion was opposed by the transit company.

Arlington Road Work Near End

Arlington residents who go home over Memorial Bridge to avoid construction delays at Key Bridge protested angrily yesterday when their route was made still longer by resurfacing work on the Virginia side of the river.

But their distress will be short-lived, the Bureau of Public Roads explained. Half the job is done already, the road will be opened to incoming traffic from 7 a. m. to 9 a. m. today, and tomorrow it will all be over. Key Bridge or no Key Bridge, the repairs had to be made before winter, the bureau added.

Secret Defense Parley Studies Arms Boosts

House Leaders Called By War Department For 'Important' Talks

By John G. Norris.

Secretary of War Woodring called leaders of the House Military Affairs and appropriation committees to the War Department yesterday for what was described as a "highly important" conference on national defense.

The committeemen would not discuss their meeting with the defense chiefs, saying that Secretary Woodring had sworn them to secrecy even as to the general nature of the parley. Plans for further examination of the Army formed only part of the discussion, one member indicated.

Chairman May, of the House Military Committee, however, said last night that his group would begin an immediate study of the War Department's expansion program. The plan, he declared, contemplates enlargement of the Army to its peacetime strength of 280,000 men, much greater mechanization and probably increase of the air force from 5,500 to 6,000 planes.

Hope to Limit Cost

"The cost next year will run about a billion dollars," he stated, "We want to keep it from running much above that if possible."

The Military Committee, May said, probably will not meet until January, but members will study the War Department's proposals individually meanwhile.

During the recess, the group, with members of the Senate Military Affairs Committee and the Army appropriations subcommittees of both houses will make an extensive tour of points where defense expansion is proposed.

Senator Townsend (Democrat), of Oklahoma, chairman of the Senate military appropriations subcommittee, said the trip would begin about November 10, and include a flight to Panama and possibly Puerto Rico. The tentative itinery, he said, includes Fort Knox, Ky., Denver, Seattle, southern California, Fort Leavenworth, Kans., and a number of points in Texas.

Other Moves

Other defense developments of the day included:

Senator Pittman (Democrat), of Nevada, said the Administration may ask Congress in January to curb the export of essential raw materials to prevent the depletion of defense reserves and the inflation of prices here from war buying.

The Public Roads Administration began assembling detailed data on strategically important highways for the War Department. The latter, it was said, will then make recommendations to the Administration and State roads commissions as to what improvements are needed from the viewpoint of national defense.

Senator Barbour (Republican), of New Jersey, introduced legislation for a $250,000,000 naval base development program, including new submarine and air establishments at Dutch Harbor, Alaska, several mid-Pacific islands and numerous points in the United States. His bill would generally carry out the recommendations of the Hepburn naval board of last year.

Coulmore Safe, Search Called Off

By the Associated Press

The British freighter Coulmore, which was believed to be a victim of a submarine attack within the American "neutrality zone," was reported safe yesterday and authorities here called off a search for her.

Coast Guard headquarters was advised by the cutter Bibb yesterday that a Canadian radio station at Camperdown had been informed the Coulmore was safe. Later the cutter Chelan received similar advices from the United States ship American Trader.

The Coast Guard and Navy, however, did not abandon the search until still further confirmation was received at midafternoon.

Bells Ring as Nazis Take Over Posen

Posen, Nov. 2.—While the bells in all this city's churches rang out and Nazi flags waved from every window, the new Province of Warthe, which has Posen as its capital, was handed over to its governor, Arthur Greiser, erstwhile president of the Danzig Senate, in a ceremony in Posen Castle today.

"means of maintaining and possibly expanding trade" with Balkan countries. A diplomatic and economic struggle in the Balkans between the Allies and the Soviet-German camp thus shaped itself up as a potentially vital factor in the outcome of the war.

Though he expressed his displeasure with Molotoff's parliamentary speech of Tuesday, accusing England and France of aggression in order to maintain their imperial interests, Chamberlain nevertheless took note of the fact that the Soviet premier announced no outright military alliance with Germany.

Terming Molotoff's address "the most important international event of the week," Chamberlain referred to it as "the speech which had been eagerly awaited in Berlin, but which, I imagine, has occasioned some disappointment in that quarter." He added:

"The speech is being carefully studied by His Majesty's government which have noted with interest its definition of the Soviet government's future aims . . .

Recalls Peace Pledge

"I remember that in his earlier speech on May 31, Mr. Molotoff issued a warning that his government will not be drawn into international conflicts. Mr. Molotoff said also on that occasion, 'We stand for the cause of peace and the prevention of any sort of development leading up to aggression.'

"That is also the position of His Majesty's government."

(Lord Samuel, a Liberal, told the House of Lords that Molotoff's speech had shut off military aid to Germany, according to the Associated Press. He said the Soviet official's address "clearly and definitely showed that Germany in this war was now isolated militarily."—Editor's note.)

Referring to Molotoff's accusation that the Allies pursue imperialistic objectives, rather than the democratic aims they profess, Chamberlain remarked

"I am not disposed to disturb myself over the flights of fancy in which Mr. Molotoff indulged when describing the aims of the Allies. We have stated those aims ourselves in plain terms. I am confident they are fully appreciated by the great majority of the nations of the world."

Turning to hostilities, Chamberlain pointed out that poor weather, with its low visibility, restricted all types of operations. He said:

"We have continued to take a toll of the enemy's submarines. On the other hand, we have lost a certain number of ships. . . . But nothing has happened to shake our confidence in our ability to overcome the submarine menace."

Norse Halt British Ship

Bergen, Norway, Nov. 2 (AP).—A Norwegian destroyer halted a British steamer in Norwegian waters by firing a warning shot after signal flags had been ignored, the newspaper Dagbladet reported today.

The British ship was permitted to proceed, the newspaper said, after an inspection which established that she was a mine sweeper.

Scandinavian bloc of four nations and give, if not an open, then a discreet warning to the Soviet Union.

Sweden could easily put 650,000 men in the field. Her air force is weak, as is her navy, but she has an excellent trained army and first-class artillery and she produces probably the best anti-aircraft gun in the world. Without Denmark, the Scandinavian countries are in a position to put about 1,000,000 men in the field.

Finland has informed all her neighbors, including Russia, that all her coastline is mined and all her ports closed, except Helsinki and Turku.

Helsinki Expects Results

Copyright by New York Times.

Helsinki, Nov. 2.—It is generally assumed here that the negotiations in Moscow will bring decisive results.

Premier Molotoff's precipitate presentation of Soviet demands—shock though it may have been—cleared the atmosphere for an exact evluation of the position and its implications after too long a period of rumors and guessing.

The opportunity was quickly grasped, both by Finnish Foreign Minister Erkko, in his speech last night and by most newspapers today, to analyze—though with certain restrictions—the main points in Premier Molotoff's address. Erkko made a strong appeal to the country by his declaration that Finland was prepared to accept an arrangement aimed at protecting the safety of Leningrad and the Gulf of Finland. This point is taken up by the newspapers, which make perfectly clear that Finland intends on no account to surrender territory vital to her integrity and neutrality.

For this reason the Soviet claim to Hanko or any other part of the south coast of the Finnish mainland as a naval base must be unreservedly rejected. A Russian naval establishment there would add nothing to the safety of Leningrad, which the Soviet government earlier declared to be sufficiently safeguarded by the acquisition of bases on the Dago and Oesel islands.

London, Nov. 2.—Russia has demanded of Bulgaria the right to establish Soviet naval and military garrisons at three Bulgarian ports on the Black Sea, it was stated tonight in a Bucharest dispatch to the Daily Express.

This was the first report of any direct Soviet demands affecting Bulgaria and the Balkans.

The dispatch said the Soviet Union called upon Bulgaria to lease to Russia military sites at the ports of Bourgas, Varna and Anhialo.

Roosevelt Eschews Snuff Before Lunch

By the Associated Press

A snuff dipper tried, but failed, to recruit President Roosevelt to the habit yesterday.

Jerry Sadler, Texas railroad commissioner, who wouldn't be without his tin of snuff, told reporters after a White House visit that he offered the President a "bit," but was turned down.

Mr. Roosevelt told him, he said, that he never dipped snuff so soon before lunch.

Embargo's End To Free Billion

Presumably, it will mean immediate reinstatement of export licenses for planes and other munitions which were canceled. The impounded orders were valued at $14,660,607 for Great Britain and $58,205,739 for France.

Thus far, the British and French purchases apparently have not been coordinated as were the Allied purchases toward the end of the 1914-18 war, but measures to avoid competition between the two buyers are anticipated shortly.

A British purchasing mission headed by Lieut. Col. J. H. M. Greenly, an official of the British industrial firm of Babcock & Wilcox, Ltd., has been at Montreal, but is expected to transfer its principal activities to New York.

While Congress debated the neutrality issue, the British appeared to be withholding purchases, but France's representatives are known to have placed quietly many orders whose fulfillment was subject to repeal of the embargo.

Most of the foreign orders are welcomed officially as an aid to American national defense. It is pointed out that they will mean expansion of industry's capacity to produce munitions of all kinds. Aircraft industry officials have insisted that American plants could handle the additional contracts even though they are turning out more than 4,000 planes for the Army and Navy.

American military orders have priority over foreign contracts, and the Army and Navy are in a position to exercise direct control through the licensing system of the State Department.

Other Exports to Suffer

London, Nov. 2 (U.P.).—Revision of the United States arms embargo, while opening the way for large British arms and munitions purchases, was expected tonight to lead to a drastic curtailment of British imports from the United States such as industrial and agricultural products.

One authoritative source estimated that British imports of certain American industrial products and foodstuffs may fall off as much as $150,000,000 a year.

Importers of American products said Britain's anticipated heavy purchases of war supplies from the United States would be offset "to a substantial degree" by curtailing imports of non-essential industrial and agricultural products, to protect exchange and permit purchase of arms and munitions.

The transportation of many American commodities, including tobacco, automobiles, women's apparel, shoes, hosiery, dried fruits and barley already has been reduced drastically since the outbreak of the war.

party was given considerable written and pictorial publicity, declined to reveal whether he would attend or had an invitation.

Numerous high-ranking administrative officials who were invited but didn't want their names mentioned with the party said they will not be able to be present.

The embassy, will not be graced with the wit of Senator Connally (Democrat), of Texas, or the suavity of the chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, Senator Pittman. Pittman said he had a prior engagement, and Connally merely remarked that he could not attend.

Dies Will Be Away

Representative Bloom, chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, said he didn't know if he had received an invitation, but in any event he "will have to be in New York to vote."

A check of several members of the Dies Committee revealed that they had not received invitations.

The ranking Democratic member of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, Representative Luther Johnson, of Texas, said with a twinkle that he hadn't received an invitation and he guessed he is "on the black list, not the Red list."

Senator Murray (Democrat), of Montana, a member of the Foreign Relations Committee, said he "didn't think it would be appropriate for me to go," while Senator Ellender (Democrat), of Louisiana, commented, "I never go to any of these embassy parties."

House Minority Leader Martin observed that "I'm a plain American and go to very few embassy parties. I don't see any reason to make an exception in this case," and Representative Taber, of New York, ranking Republican member of the Appropriations Committee, wasn't sure whether he had had an invitation.

Schafer Is Sarcastic

Several members of the House "liberal bloc," including Representatives Coffee (Democat), of Washington, and Geyer (Democrat), of California, received invitations but do not intend to go.

However, among the "liberal bloc" members who failed to get the beautifully engraved R. S. V. P. card with the gold seal of the U. S. S. R. was Representative Marcantonio, of New York, sole American Laborite in Congress.

Most caustic comment came, as usual, from Representative Schafer (Republican), of Wisconsin, vociferous foe of Reds. When he was asked if he was sent an invitation, he guffawed into the phone and said, "You'd better call up the White House to see if he got one. He congratulated them on their twenty-first anniversary, didn't he?"

'Built-In Safety' Keeps Plane From School Market

The Civil Aeronautics Authority wants planes manufactured with "built-in safety," but embryo pilots still have to learn what to do in stalls and spins.

In response to recommendations by CAA officials, plane manufacturers developed airplanes which practically eliminate stalls and spins, have good visibility "and which stay on the ground after the pilot lands them, regardless of gusty or other unfavorable wind conditions."

A producer of the "fool-proof" plane has found, however, that the CAA's training program requires instruction in counteracting stalls and spins. Since his aircraft will neither stall nor spin he can't sell them to instructors training private pilots. To entice buyers he had to make his planes more dangerous by installing devices to make them stall and spin.

British Repulse Nazi Bombers Over Lille

3 German Planes Reported Shot Down In Separate Actions

Paris, Nov. 2 (INS).—An attempted German air attack upon the French industrial city of Lille was repulsed today when British pursuit planes shot down one of the Nazi attackers and drove the other two back to the Reich.

W. W. Chaplin, International News Service correspondent with the British expeditionary force, reported the shooting down today of two Nazi planes on the Western Front, one by British airmen and another by combined Anglo-French antiaircraft fire.

The pilot of the German plane was killed, and his observer was wounded. Two other members of the German plane's crew were captured unhurt.

[No bombs were found in the machine, the New York Times reported. An eye-witness stated that it dropped all its bombs before falling, but no trace of them could be found in the area where the fight took place.—Editor's Note.]

The civilian populace of Lille, only about 10 miles from the Belgian border, fled to bomb shelters when the German planes were sighted.

Instantly British pursuit planes took to the air and engaged the Germans at an extremely low altitude over the city. The fight was brief, the Britons firing only a short machinegun burst before one of the three Nazi planes hurtled groundward, to strike a telephone pole. The plane carried no bombs, it was reported.

When the first plane went down, the remaining pair of German ships swung around and with the English airmen in pursuit, sped back to Germany.

Young Shock Troops Attack

Paris, Nov. 2.—Young Nazi assault troops, similar to shock forces which led German attacks in the World War, have entered action anew on the Western Front, military dispatches disclosed today.

German long-range guns, simultaneously, were continuing a spasmodic fire.

These elements injected new vigor into operations which have been gaining some momentum since Monday, when a respite from autumn storms freed infantry, artillery and air force units for action.

French advices said German patrols were scouting all along the front, particularly around the French border town of Ohrenthal, where the frontier forms a salient into Germany between the Moselle and Rhine rivers.

Farther east where the front joins the Rhine, German patrols also had penetrated the forbidding terrain of the Vosges Mountains.

German artillery gave the town of Forbach, two miles inside the French border facing Saarbruecken, a brief violent shelling yesterday.

At least 50 shells also were hurled on French positions on the west bank of the Blies River, southeast of Saarbruecken.

Several German prisoners were reported to have been 18 and 19-year-old youths trained to strict discipline for dangerous action. They belonged to elite units of the army, the French said.

Reich Accuses U. S. Of Aiding Allies

providing the Allies with a reservoir of arms and ammunition. The French feel themselves armed with immense new potential strength if Chancellor Hitler should attempt to break through their defenses.

French observers believe the war must remain a diplomatic struggle.

The American Congress has given enormous added strength to the diplomatic force of the Allies. Repeal is interpreted here as meaning that American good will is on the side of the Allies and all who are standing armed at their frontiers ready to defend their homes, and that Germany now is practically cut off from the world.

Fuehrer Hitler, with his narrow conception of Germany's vital space as a geographic and not a spiritual one, has occupied half of Poland and lost for another generation, at least, that long-nurtured German dream of a road out to the East. He has lost the possibility of developing that dream through Rome. On the west there is a solid barrier against him. Now that the American market has been opened to all those who can go and fetch their requirements, that madness of any attack in the west would be greater than ever.

Manassas Youths Jailed on Charges Of Arson, Robbery

Special Dispatch to The Post

Manassas, Va., Nov. 2.—Accused of robbing and setting fire to a local feed store, two young men were held today in $2,500 bond each in the Prince William County jail.

Lee England and Gaskie Withers, both 21, are charged with entering and burning the Sadd feed store on the night of October 16. The loot was estimated at $400 in cash and $300 in checks. They also are accused of robbing another store, also owned by Walter C. Sadd, on the night of October 1.

Both young men were employees of Mr. Sadd. Their arrests followed deduction by E. H. Howe, state trooper, and F. Gibbons, fire marshal, that the crimes were inside jobs. Neither of the safes having been broken, the investigators were led to believe that they were robbed by some one who knew the combinations.

County Court Settles 62 Cases in 13 Days

Annapolis, Nov. 2 (AP).—The Anne Arundel County Court, with Circuit Judge Ridgely P. Melvin on the bench, set a record for prompt handling of criminal cases since the term opened October 16 by disposing of 62 cases in thirteen working days. State's Attorney Marvin I. Anderson said convictions had been obtained in 48 cases, twelve resulted in acquittals, one case was dropped and three were remanded to other jurisdictions.

Analyst Says Hitler Pays Well for Lies

$300,000,000 Yearly Propaganda Cost, Lindeman Asserts

Eduard C. Lindeman, president of the Institute for Propaganda Analysis, said yesterday that Hitler is paying the best brains in Germany $300,000,000 to disseminate falsehoods.

The German propaganda machine is "cheap at that price," said Lindeman.

He said that a recent study of the institute had shown that the German propaganda ministry has 25,000 persons on its pay roll, 80 per cent of them college graduates and 30 per cent holding post graduate degrees.

He quoted a definition of propaganda by Goebbels—propaganda knows neither truth nor falsehood, neither right or wrong, only what it wants—and he warned that this idea would be highly dangerous for a democracy.

"In a democracy it is essential that a scientific, liberal, tolerant attitude be maintained, based on truth in so far as it can be ascertained," Lindeman said.

An important test of democracy, he said, is the ability of the people to deal with facts, to distinguish what is true, and what is false, and to make independent judgments in a detached spirit. He said that the growing number of columnists and commentators in America are a symptom that the ability of the people to make judgments has been weakened.

Warning that the present world crisis is focused on democracy, Lindeman said that the center of the conflict will come in America. He said that the concept of democracy must be understood by everyone, since anti-democratic forces and organizations constantly use appeals to democracy as a propaganda device.

He contrasted the balance between opposing forces in a democracy, and the uniformity from which totalitarianism derives its strength, and said:

"Conflict is the essence of democracy. If we give up our differences and attempt to impose uniformity, we sacrifice our essential strength."

Smuggler Fears Return to Germany

Hellmuth Schoenfeld, 30, pleaded with the District Court yesterday to save him from being sent back to Germany when he finishes his jail term for smuggling.

Attorney Myer Koonin said Schoenfeld was afraid he would be confined in a Nazi concentration camp. Schoenfeld, a waiter, came to America eight years ago and went home last spring. On his return to the United States he smuggled in a number of cameras and other articles. He pleaded guilty and on October 12 was sentenced to four months to a year and a day in Lorton.

C. of C. Asks U. S. Not Renew Japan Treaty

National Chamber Tells of Tientsin Plea; 'Humiliations' Cited

By Harry Wilson Sharpe.
United Press Staff Writer.

The American Chamber of Commerce in Tientsin cabled the State Department yesterday urging that the United States refuse to negotiate a new commercial treaty with Japan until the latter ceases oppressing American business interests in North China.

Text of the cable was released here through the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, which is working closely with American businessmen in the Orient.

It was made public shortly after Representative Fred L. Crawford (Republican), Michigan, introduced a resolution in the House asking the Treasury Department to inform Congress on details of the reported demand that a United States customs official salute a Japanese sentry before being permitted to board a visiting Japanese naval training ship at Honolulu.

Point to Humiliation

Crawford said that "if it has reached the point where American officials are compelled to pay tribute to the rank and file of armed forces of foreign governments in our own ports, it is time we made some new stringent regulations relative to these ports. Personally I feel we have always been too liberal with our port courtesies, but with all courtesies we grant we should not countenance humiliation of our own Federal officers by alien guests."

He said he would seek unanimous consent for action on his measure before Congress adjourns.

The Chamber of Commerce protest, couched in vigourous terms, came while Secretary of State Cordell Hull was debating Japanese overtures for a renewal of the 1911 treaty of amity and commerce which he abrogated in July after Japan blandly ignored repeated protests against mistreatment of Americans.

The pact expires on January 26, unless renewed. Hull to date has declined to discuss publicly a renewal but it is known that he and President Roosevelt intend to let it die unless there is quick and favorable reversal of Japanese policies in conquested areas of China.

Whether this will occur is conjectural. Latest reports from Tokyo are that the powerful military element is determined on complete subjugation of most of China and establishment of a new order on the Asiatic mainland even at the sacrifice of amicable relations with the United States and Great Britain.

Molotoff's Gift Horse

The conclusion last August of an agreement between the Third Reich and the Soviet Union was a staggering blow to Japan from which the island empire has not yet recovered.

It meant that her one remaining friend of importance—Germany—who had also been her partner in the anti-Comintern bloc, had joined forces with Japan's great potential enemy—Russia. Thus, at an extremely critical moment in her history, Japan found herself friendless and alone.

No wonder, then, that Japanese civil and military leaders have been frantically casting about for an alternative to the shattered Berlin-Rome-Tokyo triangle.

One such alternative, a most attractive one in the eyes of a great many Japanese, was a rapprochement with the United States. But in his forthright speech of October 19, Ambassador Grew made it very clear that American friendship demands abandonment by Japan of policies and practices which pointedly infringe on American rights and interests in China.

The present indications are that Japan is extremely reluctant to meet these conditions, the reason being the opposition of the army chiefs to any abandonment of their ambitious program of domination in China.

Indicative of this attitude is the perceptible decline in the government's eagerness to approach the United States for a discussion of Japanese-American problems and the announced intention of proceeding with the establishment of the "new order" in east Asia. Specifically, the latter means the establishment of a puppet central Chinese regime under Wang Ching-wei.

But what about Russia? The continued hostility to Japan of the Western powers has real elements of danger to the island empire, as the moderates in Tokyo clearly realize. These dangers would be multiplied if Russia, freed of the threat of an attack on her western borders, now chooses to pursue a forward course in the Far East.

No matter what Russian leaders may say, Japan can never be certain that such a development will not take place. The suspicion of Russia is too deep-seated to be obliterated overnight. Yet even a temporary modus vivendi with the Soviet Union has its attractive aspects to Tokyo at this time. That is why Premier Molotoff's suggestion that Russia will "look with favor on Japanese overtures" for an improvement in Russo-Japanese relations may have an answering echo in Japan.

Yet it is certain that, however tempting this offer, Japan will carefully look the Muscovite gift horse in the mouth.

Art For Everyone

The current exhibition, at the Corcoran Gallery of Art, of painting and sculpture designed for Federal buildings is of great interest from several viewpoints. Sponsored by the Fine Arts Section of the Public Buildings Administration, the exhibit centers around the successful entries in the recent open competition for postoffice murals in each of the 48 States.

Edward Bruce, head of the Fine Arts Section, freely admits that not all of the exhibits are masterpieces. But he emphasizes that the paintings and sculpture now displayed at the Corcoran constitute a healthy and representative manifestation of current American creative activity in the fine arts. The requirement that each mural should portray a dominant interest of the community for which it is designed has helped to produce an excellent cross-section of typical American scenes. The subjects range from Indian scenes to electrification projects, from the threshing of wheat to a mine rescue, and from the plains of Kansas to fishermen on the Chesapeake.

Some of the paintings are designed for little towns in which many of the inhabitants have never seen a painting of any kind. For these people they will provide a pictorial representation of scenes heretofore taken for granted. A new, and true, conception of art is likely to become much more widespread as a result.

Whether the section of fine arts is helping to create a cultural renaissance in the United States remains to be demonstrated. But to see the work that Mr. Bruce is developing is to realize that it is exciting and alive, at a time when artistic development in much of the Western World has ceased. As a national experiment of profound significance this exhibit at the Corcoran Gallery should draw unusual attendance.

Ham And Eggs

Next Tuesday the voters of California will go to the polls to ballot on a proposed amendment to the State constitution giving every unemployed person over 50 years of age a pension of $30 weekly. The plan resembles the social credit scheme which plunged the Province of Alberta into grave financial difficulties. But its advocates refuse to be discouraged by such warning examples.

Economists, bankers, alarmed business groups, conservative and liberal politicians alike, have united in condemning the California "ham and eggs" scheme as economically infeasible, conducive to dangerous inflation and a potential menace to the credit of the State and local governments. Nevertheless, the vote on this crackpot scheme may be very close, with a fair chance that the plan will be approved. The strength of the pro-pension group lies in the assumption of self-interest which has made many supporters enthusiastic crusaders, impervious to the appeals of reason and common sense.

A speaker for the California plan recently said to an audience: "Remember, when you go to the polls November 7 you will be voting for yourselves." That cynical argument calls attention to a rapidly growing menace to the democratic form of Government—namely, the increasing opportunities afforded the people to vote themselves benefits and gratuities or to vote for representatives who promise to secure such benefits for them.

So long as governments possessed or exercised only limited powers the danger from fantastic pension proposals was practically nil. But today it is generally believed that the government should assume responsibility for the care of the needy and the aged and use its good offices to assist workers to make systematic provision for old age. This humanitarian attitude has the support and approval of the great majority of our citizens. Unfortunately, there are many people who are either unable or unwilling to distinguish between economically sound proposals for taking care of the aged and utopian plans for bestowing bounties upon individuals still in the prime of life.

It is not necessary to analyze the California plan in detail to realize how impossible of accomplishment it would be. Estimates of the number of individuals who could qualify for pensions in that State range from 500,000 to 1,000,000, entailing an annual cost of from $780,000,000 to $1,560,000,000. The ingenious scheme for financing these pension outlays by supposedly self-liquidating stamp currency would put a large amount of paper money into circulation that would doubtless produce a runaway inflation if it circulated. Should the new currency fail to circulate, as is probable, funds would have to be provided by a huge tax on gross income.

It is known that banks outside California are either considering or have already decided to sell their holdings of California State and municipal issues for fear the "ham and eggs" plan will be approved. That is an eloquent commentary on the disastrous effect of such proposals upon the public credit.

The results of the special election in California, and also in Ohio, where a more modest but nevertheless very onerous pension plan is to be voted upon, will be awaited with great interest. The outcome of these ballotings is likely to affect the attitude of other States toward similar proposals.

A mere defeat of the "ham and eggs" plan is not enough. A close vote is certain to encourage the pension grabbers speedily to renew their efforts. What is needed to put a decisive quietus upon fantastic pension schemes is an intensive campaign of education. The elementary principle must be driven home to the public that it is to nobody's interest, old or young, to divert a large proportion of the community's income from productive employment to the maintenance of the aging and aged unemployed.

The fewer the number who work and the more they are forced to contribute to support of the idle, the less the amount of wealth created, and the smaller the income to be divided. Only in Utopia would it be possible for everybody over 50 to live comfortably without labor. California has not yet reached that happy state.

The Free Lance

The most interesting thing about the case of Charles Conner, the 14-year-old stowaway, is not that he wanted to be a spy in the European war. After all, it has not been unheard of for an imaginative boy to run away from home in search of adventure. The fact that Master Conner's ambition ran to espionage rather than to circus riding or cattle punching merely proves that even romance must keep abreast of history.

Young Conner said he didn't care which side he did the spying for as long as he got paid for it. He had, it seems, a slight theoretic bias in favor of the French and British cause, but it was scarcely enough to amount to a scruple. If the Nazis were willing to pay the higher price for his secret services they could have them. Fortunately, the matter never reached the point of actual bidding.

Anyway, the first thing young Conner did was to hide himself on the Dutch steamer Zaandam in New York. He remained undiscovered until the Zaandam lay at anchor in the English Channel. Then he bolted out of his hiding place, jumped overboard and struck out for the shore some 2 miles distant. But he soon tired and was rescued by the crew of another Dutch ship.

A few days later he found himself locked up at Rotterdam in the company of a real spy, from whom, perhaps, he learned that the spy business is neither as romantic nor as lucrative as he had supposed. Anyhow, when the boy was repatriated the other day he admitted that his appetite for adventure had now been fully quenched and that he was quite willing to settle down to some humdrum career like aviation.

News dispatches state that young Conner's father is the manager of a movie theater in Chicago. Doubtless, then, it was the recent epidemic of spy films that started him off on the road to international adventure. But young Conner's indifference as to whether he served Ormuzd or Ahriman cannot but cause anguish to Messrs. Hays and Breen. For whatever its faults, Hollywood is always on the side of the angels and never has any difficulty in distinguishing which side that is.

Common Sense Wins

Those who wished to see the arms embargo retained set great store by the House vote. In spite of the smashing Senate verdict for repeal they were optimistic right up to the balloting yesterday afternoon. It was argued that the House, subject to complete replacement every two years, would be more responsive to propaganda than the Senate. And nobody knows the strength of the propaganda against repeal better than those who were made its victims.

The large majorities by which the bill was yesterday hastened to final passage therefore possess a significance even greater than that of the legislation now happily on the verge of enactment. They show that the House is no less a deliberative body than the Senate. They show that Congress as a body cannot be stampeded by feverishly whipped-up pressures. Those ballots yesterday show, in short, that the American system of representative government is still functioning. Our democracy has not yet degenerated into mob rule.

Unquestionably the great majority of those who opposed embargo repeal did so with perfect sincerity. But the arguments used by this side were for the most part emotional rather than rational. Without a scintilla of effective evidence it was asserted that repeal is of itself likely to involve the United States, to prolong the war, to "put the blood of millions on our heads," as a group of self-styled "peace organizations" asserted no later than yesterday. This sort of outcry is virtually hysteria.

What the legislation actually does has been almost lost to sight amid the shrieks and shouts, the groans and moans, with which it has been enveloped. Actually the United States is about to put into effect a sweeping self-denying ordinance, scrapping the doctrine of the freedom of the seas, abandoning traditional and unquestionable neutral rights, all for the sake of strengthening the safeguards against war. As a small offset to this wholesale surrender the Administration is mildly reasserting the right of American nationals to sell munitions, provided they are bought for cash and shipped in foreign bottoms.

Because there is a point at which the country does not propose to surrender its sovereignty in behalf of belligerents a furious and wholly emotional storm has been whipped up by organizations whose antecedents are in some cases of dubious character. The pacifist propaganda is understandable. There are some people, and they are wholly honest, who would rather see the United States destroyed than take arms to defend it. The complete isolationist viewpoint is also understandable. But these and other honorable groups alone did not account for all the sound and fury of the embargo advocates.

Included in the strange line-up against repeal were all the Communists, all the bund adherents, all the quasi-Fascist groups, all the professional Anglophobes. Together they made a formidable if chaotic assortment, sufficiently numerous to bring to their side many of the disillusioned, the ignorant, the credulous and the self-seeking. Not by reasoning, but merely from its own momentum, the embargo movement gained many adherents who could not have advanced a single cogent argument against repeal.

Like "Ham and Eggs" in California a movement of this sort, partly emotional, partly wishful and partly self-seeking, can easily become a serious problem for a democracy. The effective arguments—legal, moral, patriotic and economic—always favored repeal. But it almost seemed for a time that common sense might be overwhelmed and the vital Congressional function of analysis subordinated to an essentially ridiculous mass emotionalism.

That danger has happily been averted. But it was more threatening to the United States than any of the bogies conjured up by the opponents of repeal.

If Einstein wants to be of practical value to the human race, let him devise a way to park cars in the fourth dimension.

Reply To E. C.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

One of your correspondents signing himself "E. C.," in The Post of November 1, has gone out of his way to impugn a legitimate business enterprise.

His letter is so twisted that it would be unnecessary to ask you to print an answer, were it not for the fact that the Bookshop is the one bookstore in midtown Washington (or for that matter, in the city) which sponsors regular meetings in its art gallery.

The Bookshop, located at 916 Seventh street northwest, is Washington's only cooperatively operated bookstore. We arry a large stock of current books of all types, magazines from the New Masses to Esquire, with special emphasis given to inexpensive books. The books featured as monthly special book selections have been: "Jobs for All," by Mordecai Ezekiel; "Betrayal in Central Europe," by Gedye; "Industrial Valley," by Ruth McKenney; "Main Current in American Thought," by Parrington; "The Pressure Boys," by Kenneth Crawford; "These Are Our Lives," a Federal Writers Project Publication, and "Grapes of Wrath," by Steinbeck.

The store is affiliated with the D. C. Cooperative League and is owned and operated by its members, according to the time-honored Rochdale principles of cooperation.

The meetings referred to so inaccurately by "E. C." take place every Friday evening at 8:30 and are open to the public. Speakers have included Kenneth Crawford, Frank Rhylick, Stephen Raushenbush, Ruth McKenney, Albert Maltz, David Cushman Coyle and many other well-known writers and authors.

Announcements of all legitimate Washington organizations, ranging from the American League for Peace and Democracy to the Junior League and local church groups are posted on the Bookshop bulletin board.

The activities of the Bookshop are widely publicized through handbills, folders, in the public press, and in the Coop-Consumer, the monthly publication of the D. C. Cooperative League. The remarks of "E. C.," therefore, are misleading, since all this material is available to everyone who visits the Bookshop.

"Badly Fooled"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Wasn't it Benjamin Franklin who said: "Honesty is the best policy?"

And if we were wise today in our stand in the neutrality question that is the course we would pursue.

But is it honesty to talk loudly about wishing to remain neutral and to reassure the people who are almost unanimous in their wish to keep out of this war, and then gradually take one step after another which we know, and possibly hope, may lead us into war in the more or less distant future?

However, this is exactly the policy being pursued by many today. Not only is this the policy of most of the newspapers (whom we have never considered very honest in any case), but it is probably consciously or unconsciously the policy of some of our legislators, who know well enough how we were gradually drawn into the last war, step by step, and realize that all that is necessary to repeat the process is to begin taking initial steps to weaken our position of neutrality.

The American public is being badly fooled today (almost as badly as is the British and French public), but it won't be for long, we venture to predict. KARL S. ROBINSON.

Communist Appeal

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

With the communistic trend and the fact that such a trend is destructive to the Government of the United States in mind, let us view the causes and try to remedy them in a sane and logical manner. The Dies Committee has published names of persons in the Government who belong to this party, but just because certain people belong to this is an effect and not a cause of its existence.

Dorothy Thompson writes that "Communism has attracted the youth of America for the simple reason that they want to do something energetic about real evils and about real problems, and it is very difficult for them to find any political group with which to align themselves for fundamental attacks on fundamental issues."

How true that statement is.

I speak here as a youth of America, with the thought that if the Communist Party had convinced me that it would fulfill my ambitions, and its growth would benefit others in my circumstances, it may find a new member. But with the results of communism clearly before me, I take no such step. We will not try to enumerate these results, but take it as a fact that they are not what is desired by the people of this country.

It is to these people that we must prove this fact by giving an outlet to the energetic youth through more worthy channels, for without the youth to back the Communist Party it would be as helpless as a general without an army.

So instead of persecuting those who are leaders, it may be worth our while to undermine them by presenting a worthy substitute to the American youth, so that they may see how empty and unreal the ideals of communism really are.

Niemoeller For Hitler

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I just read Harlan Miller's column of September 15 and agree with the German peace proposal. For one thing, you cannot stamp out Nazism in Germany by replacing Hitler with Goering who is a worse Nazi than Hitler himself.

Please let me suggest a man whose popularity with the German people and the Christians of the whole world is so great, that Hitler keeps him behind prison bars. He is the Rev. Martin Niemoeller, a World War hero, who exchanged his uniform for the dress of a fighter for God's teaching of love and kindness, instead of the hatred and persecution of Nazism.

If the Rev. Niemoeller could take Hitler's place, besides Mr. Schacht who is one of the greatest living financial geniuses, Germany would be on her way to peace, happiness and freedom.

Hitler, Goering, Goebbels and Hesse must be banned from Germany for good, if the world wants to get rid of Nazism, and maybe someday Mussolini can be replaced by the Crown Prince of Italy.

"Golden Opportunity"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

The United States Senate's vote to lift the arms embargo has focused the eyes of the world on Washington. If the House of Representatives, before acting upon the embargo matter, could persuade President Roosevelt to invite representatives of all nations to Washington for the purpose of discussing the feasibility of establishing democratic world government now it is possible that the present world war could be brought to an end and future wars be made impossible. If the Government takes no steps in this direction many people will believe the Government is dominated by groups that want war profits.

Should any nations now at war refuse to send representatives to such a conference, and to suspend hostilities pending the outcome of deliberations, they would prove themselves to be the aggressors in the present war, and would readily incur the ill will and combined opposition of practically the entire civilized world.

It would prove their avowed desire for peace is not sincere and their refusal would automatically force the United States to repeal the arms embargo. A golden opportunity, with the welfare of all humanity at stake, is before the House of Representatives. Will they grasp it?

Differs With Miss Sadler

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I have been reading with interest the articles appearing in The Post by Christine Sadler about the various sections of Washington.

As I am a voter and lifelong resident of Georgetown, besides having published a book entitled "A Portrait of Old Georgetown," I naturally was especially interested in her article of October 27. In it she questioned whom Georgetown was named for.

She said, rightly, that it could not have been named for George Washington, as in 1751, when the town received its charter, George Washington was only 19 years old, and had acquired no reputation. So she argued, as others have done, that it probably was named for the two men, George Beall and George Gordon, from whom the land for the first lots was bought.

In the Encyclopedia Britannica, under the name of Gen. Braddock, is a quotation from a letter written by him from Georgetown in 1755, four years after the incorporation of the town, in which he speaks of the hospitality rendered him by the citizens while he was here preparing for his fateful march to Fort Duquesne. He ends by saying: "For never have I attended a more complete banquet, or met better dressed or better mannered people than I met on my arrival in Georgetown, which is named after our gracious majesty." Gen. Braddock was from Perthshire, and so was a Scotchman. He evidently was convinced that the town was named for George II.

This Georgetown was then in Maryland, but there were many other Georgetowns in the 13 original colonies, as well as Charlestowns, Jamestowns, Williamstowns and Williamsburgs, all of them, of course, named for the Kings of England.

I must say that I, for one, consider this evidence as conclusive.

Roller Derby

IT'S NICE now to remember the time, only two months ago, when the Roller Derby seemed one of the more important and certainly one of the funnier things in life. Everybody told me, as soon as I got to Minneapolis, that I just had to see the Roller Derby. The people who said this were not known as lavish patrons of wrestling matches, the dance marathon and similar art media. That made the proposition confusing enough to be rather attractive, and admission was only 15 cents, if you had one of the promotion tickets put out by the drugstores.

I may as well say now that I went to the derby three times before leaving Minneapolis. It was not time enough to master all the niceties of the sport, but I submit that any reasonably sensitive spectator, after three sessions, can grasp the fundamental spirit of the drama.

As a student of the derby, I found myself in the company of 6,000 to 8,000 citizens in the city auditorium, some seated as far as 100 yards from the hardwood track. The track, oval-shaped and steeply banked at each end, is the austere stage on which 20 heavily padded young men and women make unbelievably generous display of their emotions and, incidentally, do some fancy roller skating.

The governing elements in the drama are the distance of the spectators from the track and the derby management's essentially pessimistic view of the human intelligence. Thus, if one player jostles another on a curve, the offended party makes no pretense of waiting for reprisal until he is masked by other skaters. It is not enough that he should glare at his opponent and growl a profane threat from the corner of the mouth.

No, he raises his arm in an extravagant gesture of menace, throws it almost from the socket in pointing an accusing finger at the transgressor, and then with head, hips, shoulders, arms and legs all brought into play, demonstrates to the referee the enormity of the indignity he has suffered. By this time, almost everybody, even the spectators a short city block away, have got the idea. Just in case anybody has not, the announcer confides: "These boys and girls are mighty anxious to win out there tonight. They're skating hard, and there seems to be a good deal of feeling."

Even the referees are not immune to the powerful emotions that sweep the track. It was my privilege to be in the audience the night that half a dozen skaters, taking a sharp curve, piled up against the railing. They came up swinging. At least 100 uppercuts, left jabs and roundhouse rights were uncorked. One or two blows may actually have been struck. Two green-shirted referees raced over to the melee, made brief but flamboyant gestures of appeasement and then started swinging themselves.

The entire cast in the pantomime, still brawling, slowly edged across the track toward the seat of final authority, a streamlined box labeled in letters 2 feet high, "Official Judge." This gentleman, with athletic delivery, issued one ultimatum after another. He was, as anyone in the second gallery could see, a man restoring order. He succeeded, not too soon, of course, and the players straggled back into position, portraying various stages of dejection and injured honor.

Heads hung, the referees returned to their work, men who had betrayed a trust. Justice was stern, but impartial. Over the loud-speaker system came the announcement: "All the players involved in this scene and both referees have been fined $5 apiece."

When the derby comes to Minneapolis, the skaters are divided into Minneapolis and St. Paul teams. On the West Coast it's San Francisco and Oakland. And so on. Trainer, announcer, official judge and referees travel with the troop.

The night's sport is divided into some two dozen heats. This was the part I never understood very well, so I won't go into it too deep. First the five men on the Minneapolis team would skate for two minutes against St. Paul, and then the two women's teams would take over the track. If a Minneapolis skater could gain an entire lap on the rest of the pack, coming up from behind and overtaking the slowest St. Paul skater, that meant one point for Minneapolis. The matches invariably ended 11-10, or some such score.

My first night at the derby I was startled by the storm of booing which marked each appearance on the track of a Miss Gertrude Scholl, No. 4 on the St. Paul women's team. I was told that this was "Dirty Gertie" and that it was my duty to boo her every move. This I did—until the popcorn made my throat too dry—but I couldn't help wondering how this one young woman, who looked so much like everyone else down on the track, had given such a monstrous affront to Minneapolis.

I asked Miss Scholl herself, but she didn't know. "I don't skate any dirtier than any of the rest of them," she told me in a brief interview during intermission. She said she had gotten used to the booing, though, and really didn't mind.

Miss Scholl has been with the derby since 1937. Her older sister went into professional skating the year before, but gave it up in 1938, Gertie said, "when romance came into the picture." I gathered that romance and the Roller Derby don't mix, but it seemed indelicate to pursue the matter further. Miss Scholl had to be going anyway. During the intermission, she explained, the skaters are expected to circulate through the crowd and sell autographed postcards for a dime.

She skated off up the ramp, a package of photographs in each hand. A little boy and girl, brother and sister, apparently, and not more than 10 years old, came up to me in the crowded lobby. They had been watching the interview from a few yards away, and there was awe and wonder in their eyes. "Mister," the boy asked, "was she fun to talk to?"

Fair Enough

California's Putsch

THE CRY of "dictator" has been raised so often that just now, when a real dictatorship is proposed for California by constitutional amendment, it is necessary to cite chapter and verse to prove the real purpose of a political putsch disguised as an old-age pension plan. This can be done with quotations from the official proposition, but the pension fake is such a raw, dirty imposition on the fears and hopes of vast numbers of poor people that it is difficult, nevertheless, to present the proof in a word.

The proposed amendment is 1,500 words long and is largely incoherent. It is delirious stuff, and the authors—whoever they may be—appear to have studied the confusion of such masters of obfuscation as Adolf Hitler, Father Coughlin and Father Divine. Yet the binding clauses are there, scattered among twisted language which will be read from beginning to end by only a comparative few and will not be understood by any of those few.

Authors Discredit Their Own Money

THE PLOT begins to reveal itself in section 3, which says the Governor must appoint either Roy G. Owens or Will H. Kindig, of Los Angeles, as administrator until a successor shall be elected and qualified in 1944.

Then there follows a long, unintelligible description of the dream-bucks or pension warrants which will be worthless. At the end of this laborious stretch of reading there occurs a paragraph requiring that the warrants, must be accepted at face value by all State, county and city governmental bodies in payment of taxes and other obligations—which means, incidentally, that the counterfeit money may be used to pay for gas, water or electricity bought from publicly owned public utilities. It is provided, however, that public employes need not accept the counterfeit money for their wages, but another provision requires that anyone who sells equipment to the State or any of the inferior governing bodies must accept dream-bucks to the extent of half of his claim. In these two provisions, close together, the authors discredit their own counterfeit money 100 per cent and 50 per cent, respectively.

Promoters Allot $700,000 to Selves

SECTION 16 establishes a State bank, whose chairman shall be the administrator, with an initial kitty of $20,000,000 in real money, to be raised by a bond issue, and section 20 confirms the difference between real money and dream-bucks by referring to the one as "lawful money" and the other as "retirement compensation warrants." The administrator would have authority to hire an unlimited number of employes, and now the promoters really begin to go to town.

They appropriate for themselves $700,000 in real money for administration expenses, of which $200,000 must be spent advertising the ham-and-eggs plans to people who, already having voted on it, would legally be presumed to know all about it. It just happens that among the promoters of the plan there are two men, the Allen brothers, who run an advertising agency.

Section 36 empowers the administrator to call a special election at any time on any amendments to this amendment which he may deem necessary, and section 37 says that no injunction or other writ shall ever be issued to interfere with any act of the administrator. This is the one which places him above the courts and all other laws with supreme power.

A Sure Source Of Mob Action

THE DICTATORSHIP over labor is provided for in a section which says that "no capacity to produce goods, services, conveniences or comforts shall be curtailed, limited or rendered nonproductive by any means whatever," followed by a declaration that such curtailment or limitation or destruction of production be only by constitutional amendment. And that is why it is so interesting to note that the State C. I. O. and the San Francisco Labor Council of the American Federation of Labor indorsed the plan, nevertheless.

Their ostensible reason was that they owed the adventurers behind the ham-and-eggs plan a debt of gratitude for their assistance in defeating an antipicketing law. This might be true as to the San Francisco Labor Council, but the reason why the C. I. O. indorsed it is that the Communists dominate a sufficient number of C. I. O. units to control such a decision. The Communist Party of California has recognized the scheme as a dictatorship and a sure source of public disturbance, probably mob action or revolution, and approves it for that reason. The Communists in control of the C. I. O. voted to support the antistrike amendment in obedience to the party line from Moscow.

Sikorsky Refuses To Give Navy Data

Igor Sikorsky, aeronautical engineer and plane manufacturer, yesterday refused to divulge confidential Navy Department information on aeronautics and was sustained by C. Edward Leasure, Civil Aeronautics Authority examiner.

In a brisk exchange with Pan American Airways attorneys, the plane builder declined to reveal the weight distribution in a plane intended for transatlantic service by American Export Lines. The hearing at the Raleigh Hotel was on the application of American Export Lines for permission to fly the Atlantic.

Exposed Neutrals

By Barnet Nover

The Plight Of The Weak

AT THE MOMENT, only three European countries, all of them, as it happens, great powers, are actively engaged in war. Aside from Great Britain, France and Germany, the nations of the Old World are nominally at peace. Yet that peace has its casualties no less than war, as witnessed by the plight of the little neutrals.

Indeed, neutrals have been much harder hit by the war than have the present belligerents. They have had to keep their armies fully mobilized, at a terrific cost to their national exchequers. The Allied blockade has operated to cut off essential supplies without which their industries cannot properly function. The U-boat campaign has made serious inroads into their shipping. Some of the little nations already face short rations.

ALL THESE deprivations would not matter to them, could they be really certain that they could stay out of the war. But of this there is no certainty.

The neutral nations that are, at the moment, most immediately threatened are Finland, the Netherlands, Belgium and Rumania. The fact that one of these four lies north of the Baltic, that two are on the North Sea and that one is a Baltic state shows the widespread ramifications of danger. Nor does it make any particular difference that while the potential threat to the Netherlands and Belgium is from the direction of Germany, the danger to the independence and neutrality of Finland and Rumania is of Russian origin.

ALREADY three neutral nations, Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania, have been placed in "protective custody," as it were. The treatment they are receiving may be good and it may be bad. But good or bad they cannot ignore the fact that they are now occupants of a Russian concentration camp.

The little Baltic republics cannot be blamed for having obeyed the bidding of their great and powerful neighbor. They had little choice in the matter. But their capitulation was tantamount to a defeat in war. They are real casualties of Europe's chaos.

FINLAND now faces the same fate. The Finns have so far refused to capitulate. They have given strong indications that rather than compromise their independence and neutrality they will fight. That show of determination may save them. Stalin has proved an adept pupil of the German Fuehrer. He has successfully applied to the Baltic republics the technique which Hitler used to encompass the destruction of Austria and Czecho-Slovakia. But it is still very much an open question whether he is prepared to go further and adopt the tactics Hitler used against Poland when mere bulldozing failed.

With the fate of Finland is wrapped up the fate of Sweden and Norway. They, with the Netherlands, Switzerland and Belgium, are Europe's traditional neutrals. They have been at peace for decades and in that period have built up a civilization which the rest of the world may well envy. They want to remain at peace now. They have gone out of their way to do nothing to offend any of the belligerents. They have put up with all manner of indignities. But despite every effort they may be forced into war anyway.

PERHAPS THE plight of the Netherlands is, at the present time, the most serious of any. The stalemate on the Western Front operates unevenly for the opposing combatants. The Allies can afford to wait. Germany cannot. And with a frontal attack on the Maginot Line fraught with the gravest danger, the Reich may seek to break the deadlock by means of an invasion of the Netherlands.

By breaking through that kingdom, two purposes might be accomplished. In the first place it might make possible a flanking attack on France. Secondly, it would give the Reich a closer base of operations for an air and submarine attack against the British blockade. No wonder that the Dutch have already flooded large areas, have declared martial law in many places and are preparing to meet any onslaught.

FOR THE TIME being, Germany is cut off from the Balkans by the Russian advance into eastern Poland. That fact has not reduced the perilous situation in which the Balkan states find themselves. Molotoff's ominously vague reference to Turkey shows that some kind of bitter concoction is being brewed in the Kremlin. Yet it is not Turkey but Rumania which today is in the position of greatest danger in southeast Europe.

Russia has never relinquished her claim to Bessarabia which since 1918 has been under Rumanian rule. And Bessarabia cannot easily be defended by the Rumanian army.

The curious stalemate in the present war is too good to last. It may not end with the opening of large-scale hostilities on the Western Front. The first victims of "war in earnest" may be the neutrals.

Hester Predicts Boom in Aviation

Aviation is destined to be the next great American industry, Clinton M. Hester, administrator of the Civil Aeronautics Authority, asserted yesterday. It will partly solve unemployment just as the automobile did, he told the Cosmopolitan Club at the Carlton Hotel.

Hester revealed that official records show a 240 per cent increase in the number of miles flown per passenger fatality in the first nine months of 1939 as compared with the same period in the previous three years.

Roosevelt's Early 'Bias'

IN JUSTICE to the President I want to take back one statement about his preparation for handling foreign affairs which I made in a recent column.

I said that "from his earliest years his closest and most pleasant connections were with Great Britain and France." I cited the fact that as a boy he spent some time in Germany, and during two summers attended school at Nauheim. I added: "But in his later years he made it plain by his comments that he did not look back upon Germany with the same friendliness that he felt for Great Britain and France."

These statements were based on brief notes of conversations held with Mr. Roosevelt, Louis Howe, and others while I was writing a biography of Roosevelt more than eight years ago. But in that book and in later books on the President and his career I added up the facts to a somewhat different set of conclusions.

Ancestors Fought Against British

THERE ISN'T ROOM here to go over the whole ground, but here are two salient points:

1. As a boy, Franklin D. Roosevelt had a robust aversion to Great Britain. It was probably more acute than the dislike of Great Britain engendered in the minds of many schoolboys in that period by our American history textbooks. For Roosevelt's own family history, about which he began to learn at an early age, and of which he has always been proud, was replete with incidents in which Britain was the enemy. His ancestors had struggled with the British in the West Indian trade and competed with them in China. They had taken an active part in the Revolution. At about the age of 12, young Roosevelt began to show a decided interest in American naval history. John Paul Jones still ranks as one of his heroes.

2. Roosevelt looks back with pleasure on the four summers he spent in Germany as a boy. The Germany he experienced was the old Germany—the Germany of the salubrious Rhineland in that benign period at the outset of the reign of Kaiser Wilhelm II. But a transition was already under way. In the school he attended at Nauheim, young Roosevelt came into direct contact with one sign of the trend. Courses in topography and military map reading had only recently been instituted. He took them and enjoyed them immensely. (Thus his skill in reading maps and sketching them owes something to his German experience.)

Youthful Bias Not Anti-German

ON A CYCLING TOUR young Roosevelt ran afoul the German military. He was arrested for trying to cycle into Strasbourg, a fortified city, after sundown. He was let off without a penalty and was given a glass of wine and a piece of cake before he was sent back with instructions to enter the city by train.

Young Roosevelt had a happy time in Germany. But in later years he could—and did—recall from his experiences there the symptoms of the Prussian influence. This influence he came heartily to dislike.

Roosevelt's bias in his boyhood was anti-British, and certainly was not anti-German. As for many others who had known and loved the old Germany, the switch probably came during the World War.

During the ten years or more I have known him, Franklin D. Roosevelt has seemed to me to have a rather strong pro-British and pre-French bias. His training would have been much better rounded, I think, if he had been able to renew his contacts with Germany during the post-war period.

In 1936 ("Halfway With Roosevelt") I wrote: "Mr. Roosevelt certainly did not lack realization of the plight of Germany, but he had the typical American antipathy to what used to be called the 'Prussian tradition,' and he never evinced an intimate appreciation of the economic and psychological factors which resulted in the rise of Hitler."

Unlikely To Be Pawn Of British Policy

IN THE SAME analysis of Roosevelt's training for the conduct of foreign affairs, I wrote:

"Mr. Roosevelt could not be a Walter Hines Page or a J. P. Morgan. He is too familiar with the British to be a gullible pawn of British policy like his old friend, Col. House. He feels no more inferiority in the presence of a British title than in the presence of an American big banker or industrialist . . .

"Nevertheless, Mr. Roosevelt has lived all his life on the Eastern seaboard, where people are always conscious of what is going on in Europe, and by education and association he is the type of person who looks on Western civilization as an essential unity and accepts unconsciously the ties of language, law, and similar political institutions."

In 1936, I cited also Mr. Roosevelt's penchant for helping democratic and liberal movements generally, his exuberant energy, his love of dramatic actions, and his reluctance to say "That is none of my business."

My anxiety about Mr. Roosevelt's tendencies in foreign affairs is nothing new. I have been writing about it for years. More than three years ago I wrote: "The gravest question concerning Franklin D. Roosevelt is whether or not he will follow the tragic course of Woodrow Wilson."

On The Record

Revelation Through Molotoff

ONE'S FIRST impression on reading Molotoff's speech is that it is a remarkable piece of satire—a successful attempt to imitate and surpass the rationalizations to which we have become accustomed in the speeches of Hitler, Ribbentrop and Goebbels.

It is, in fine, a Nazi speech, in support of a Nazi policy, and for mendacity and cynicism it has seldom been equaled.

One must consider the speech against the background of Soviet policy as it has been pursued since 1933 until the conclusion of the Russian-German agreement in August last.

In 1933 the Soviet Union, considering itself menaced by the Hitler government, revised its previous foreign policy and went out for collective security and the popular front, instructing the Communist Party in all countries to collaborate with "liberal" and "progressive" political groups and adopting as its parole the war against fascism.

Communist speakers declaimed against Nazism from lecture platforms and in public halls throughout the world. Communist cartoonists pictured Hitler as enemy No. 1 of the working classes of the world. Communists organized and entered anti-Nazi leagues and leagues against war and fascism.

'Naziism' Blamed For Soviet Purges

THE ATROCITIES of Nazism were used to cover and to justify the purges in Russia, whereby thousands of persons were summarily "liquidated" as "Trotzkyists, saboteurs, wreckers, and Fascists."

Communist Russia was threatened, according to the Stalinists, by a gigantic Nazi plot, involving Leon Trotzky, and the salvation of the world's socialist fatherlands, and the world's hope demanded ruthlessness.

The movement reached its peak at the time of the Munich Pact, when the Communist organization, press and speakers denounced Chamberlain's "appeasement" as the greatest sell-out in history.

The Communist press warned that after Czecho-Slovakia, Poland would be the next to be attacked. Nazi Germany was denounced as the permanent menace to European peace. "As long as Hitler rules Germany there will be no peace and no security for any small nation" was the cry. Hitler's claim to lebensraum was denounced as ruthless imperialism.

During this period, however, there were many opponents of Nazism—among them this columnist—who warned that the course events were taking in Russia bore a startling resemblance to the Nazi dictatorship and fitted into no conceivable picture of democratic socialism.

Analysis of the much-touted "democratic constitution" revealed to any unprejudiced mind that it was a fake.

The cases in the "trials" were completely unacceptable to anyone who could read, and remained obscure to all who are unable to follow the rationalizations and deviations of the conspiratorial mind.

Parallel Course Of Reich, Soviet

THE LATER PURGES dispensed with even the pretense of trials. The cult of the Fuehrer reached and overtopped that of the Nazis. The obsequious and servile worship of Stalin was as Byzantine as the similar Hitler cult and attended by the same manifestations—the ubiquitous picture replacing the ikon and the crucifix, the hysterical hymns to the mangod.

The political systems developed along almost exactly similar lines. The dictatorship of a party became the dictatorship of the secret police, and, eventually, the despotic rule of a single tyrant, moving according to the machinations of conspirators.

The economic developments paralleled each other. In Russia the institution of private personal property was restored, with a steady retreat from the idea of economic equality, while productive property, theoretically "socialized," was actually the property of the state, which, in fact, was the property of one man and the clique around him, to be used as they desired.

In Germany productive property theoretically retained its ownership, but the controls and restrictions became such that the owners and managers were all reduced to servitude to the state, which in turn was the instrument of one man and the clique around him.

At the same time, cultural developments, always the clearest mirror of life and the key to an understanding of trends, approached each other. All "modern" trends in art, the theater, music and literature were suppressed in Germany as "cultural bolshevism," and suppressed in Russia as "bourgeoise formalism."

What was called "Jewish" in Germany was called "decadent" in Russia. The point is that the same things were suppressed! In music, Shostakovitch, Hindemith, Schonverg—the very same composers!

Stalin's taste in art is a blood-and-soil taste, combined with a love for the vapid chromo, and, like Hitler's, which is similar, became the criterion for the nation.

Both Showed Jealousy Over Religious Life

THE SAME jealousy over the cultural and religious life manifested itself in both countries. The personalized state demanded the exhaustion of the emotions in its service. The state as cult left no room for any transcendental values. The Wotanism of the Nazis was paralleled in Russia by atheism divorced from skepticism. Atheism itself became an religion—the religion of the anti-Christ.

What was happening was clear to many formerly ardent Socialists and to the most intelligent Marxians, for the revelation of which they were denounced—fantastically, in the light of present events—as "Fascist" or "Nazi" stooges.

What was happening in both Germany and Russia was the death of both Communism and National Socialism, even as ideas, and their substitution by social nihilism, brigandism and Caesarism.

What was left to recommend the Soviets to the peace-loving was only the belief that they had no territorial aims outside their own vasts borders.

Now that illusion, too, has gone.

While the Russian tendency approached the Nazis, the Nazis approached the Russian. The political power of all tyrants inevitably and invariably depends upon the elimination of the "nobles"—whatever class, traditional, intellectual, clerical or economic, has the power and the will to stand between the leader and the masses.

Hitler Has Been Forced To Ban Opposition

THEREFORE, HITLER has been forced, by the very nature of his personal cult, to eliminate all the elements which might dare to stand up against him—because of an inherited tradition and custom of participation in rulership, or because of wealth to defend, or because of intellectual convictions strongly held, or because of religious faith.

They, and not the masses, menaced the power. For the masses are, first of all, inherently weak and helpless when deprived of their leadership. Since they have little to start with, it is always possible to conciliate them for a time at least with the political jobs and economic spoils taken from the nobility.

"Bread and circuses" were always Caesar's promise and gift.

Thus Stalin and Hitler are revealed as the Janus faces of the same thing—one an Eastern face; one a Western face; two proconsuls of the same will to universal disorder, universal terror and universal destruction of all standards and values.

All this is revealed in the speech of Molotoff, as we shall point out in the next column.

Hitler Can't Wait Long to Stake His All in Attack, Says Augur

By Augur.

Copyright by New York Times.

London, Nov. 2.—The third month of the war finds the combatants confronted with the following situation:

It is now clear that Adolf Hitler, by starting operations in Poland, missed his only chance—if he ever had it—to disturb the Anglo-French marshaling of forces on the Rhine.

It is equally apparent that if the German air force had been as powerful as advertised, Hitler would not have hesitated to have used it.

The result of those negative factors is a stalemate on the Western Front because the Anglo-French entente considers that time is on its side and therefore is in no hurry.

Determining Dates

Military experts consider that the destinies of war largely are determined by two dates: The first coincides with establishment of such predominance by the Allied air force that the Germans will be forced to give up any idea of large scale attack by air. The second indicates the moment when Anglo-French predominance reaches dimensions permitting overwhelming invasion of Germany from the air.

Before the first stage is reached and certainly before the second arrives, Hitler will be obliged to stake his all on a desperate attempt to crush the allied forces.

Another weighty reason driving Hitler not to delay his fateful decision too long is the effect of the naval blockade, which in spite of Russian aid is bound in the end to strangle German economic life.

Holes still exist in the wall built around Germany by the British navy. It is Hitler's business to see that the holes remain open or are even enlarged. Unlike the World War these loopholes are not The Netherlands or Scandinavian countries but the southeast of Europe.

Italian ports let through a steady trickle of contraband but Hitler's main hope is concentrated on Rumanian ports in the Black Sea and the Danube through which he hopes to obtain a large stream of essential supplies.

Would Solve Problem

Russo-German negotiations are proceeding with a view to establishment of regular transport facilities between Batoum and the Danube estuary. Through Batoum, Russian oil from Bakou arriving by pipeline can be pumped to tankers for delivery direct to Braili or Galatz, where it is pumpable from river barges to its destination in the upper reaches of the Danube. Through Batoum, also comes manganese from the Thiatouri mines of Georgia and cotton from Russia.

Sea transport would solve the problem of delivery of large quantities of raw materials which the dilapidated Russian railways are unable to tackle. Maintenance of a sea route, however, depends upon tight closure of the Dardanelles. That would become impossible if the British and French, free of all concern on the Western Front, were able to direct their attention to the Balkans.

Thus it is seen that good reasons exist why Hitler, in spite of his preconceived idea of the difficulties of winter operations, may undertake an attack on the Maginot Line. But contrary to the generally accepted view, experts point out that an attack would be restricted to a narrow front and would have slight prospect of success, while certainly imposing immense sacrifices on the German army.

Therefore, the Germans would logically be obliged to develop an assault on a large front, including for example a powerful air attack on Britain with the object of distracting attention from invasion of the Netherlands and then Belgium, which would be needed to outflank the Maginot Line while at the same time, the British and French would be prevented from concentrating large reserves in the direction principally menaced.

A few experts forecast the possibility, however, of Hitler breaking out in a different direction altogether. While maintaining a screen on the Rhine he can throw large forces into the Balkans challenging the loyalty of Turkey to the Anglo-French alliance and using Bulgaria as a tool to disrupt the Balkan neutral block. The advantage of such a move from the military standpoint would be to secure for Hitler a Black Sea supply route permitting a prolongation of the struggle without reducing the present low standard of life in Germany.

The Once Over

Alcoholic Melons

Elmer Twitchell, the eminent botanist, amateur gardener, tree surgeon and liquor expert, insists that those experiments being carried on in transfusing the flavor of brandies and wines into honeydew melons are old stuff. "I've been doing this for years," sneered Elmer today. "In fact, I thought my Three-Star Grapefruit, Bottled-in-Bond Alligator Pear and 90-Proof Avocado were known to everybody."

Elmer insists he is on the point of success in his lifelong desire to make an olive taste like something else. He claims that what can be done for fruit can be done for vegetables, and is anxious to determine what can be accomplished in the matter of crossing a radish with an old-fashioned cocktail. A turnip with a little Benedictine flavor would be quite a hit, too, he thinks.

"All my life I have thought something should be done about melons," exclaimed Elmer. "Eight out of ten have no taste at all. Twenty years ago I tried growing them in a hothouse and transfusing certain liquors into their veins during their growth. I called my first melon of this type the Twitchell Alcomelon, and it was the best melon I ever drank.

"The trouble was that it was a little too strong for any fruit. I am sorry to say that during the experiments I became a melon addict.

"At first I could take a melon or leave it alone, but after a while I just had to have 'em. It was a terrible thing for a man to realize that a melon is his master, that he is the slave, so to speak, of the fruit basket.

"At first I went to the hothouse only to check up on my experiments two or three times a day. Then I found myself making six or eight trips. Ultimately I was neglecting my family, home and business. I had developed a melon appetite!"

Mr. Twitchell wept softly at the horrible memory.

"Things reached a stage where I would hang out with the melons day and night. Finally my wife took things in hand and sent me to an institution where I managed to break the habit. When I came home I could join a group of men drinking melons anywhere and to cries of 'Oh, come on, Elmer, join us!' just say firmly, 'No, thanks, boys. I'm not meloning any more.'"

It seems Mr. Twitchell also once managed to transfuse wine into a tomato. "It was the first vintage tomato ever attempted," he boasted. "But it gave me plenty of trouble.

"A tomato is an easy vegetable to handle up to the time liquor gets into its blood," he continued. "Then it's a nuisance in any company. Time and again I would go out to my tomato patch, after I began my experiments, and find the tomatoes had left the vine. They would turn up away off in the cornfields.

"One stewed tomato like this can wreck a cornfield. I once had to call the police to get a brandied tomato out of a row of Indian corn, and Indian corn can be tough, you know," concluded Mr. Twitchell.

Okay Here

When the Molotoffs cease toffing

It will be a change tremendous——
But it will not make me sore.

Mussolini has shaken up his cabinet and it is just possible that it represents a desire to see where he is going rather than to be reminded constantly of where he has been.

The New York World's Fair closed owing $24,000,000, which is alone sufficient, under modern economic theories, to establish it as a colossal success and one of the best investments to come along in years.

Alexandria Will Become Port of Call

The 6,200-ton steamer Markland, largest ocean-going vessel to dock at Alexandria in years, unloads its cargo of more than 1,000 tons of newsprint for The Post

Civic leaders of Alexandria yesterday looked beyond the battleship gray hull of a 6,200-ton freighter, tied up at the foot of Wolfe street, to a day when the venerable Virginia city will regain its rank as a great maritime port.

The twin-screw steamship Markland, largest ocean-going vessel to dock at Alexandria in years, yesterday unloaded more than 1,000 tons of newsprint, a cargo that will be spread over the greater Washington area in a month's editions of The Washington Post.

Owned by the Mersey Paper Co., Ltd., of Canada, and carrying the ancient Norse name for Nova Scotia, the Markland is one of the few craft in the world designed exclusively for newsprint transportation. Its home port is Liverpool, Nova Scotia.

The Markland will make Alexandria a regular port of call, unloading there once every six weeks. To receive the Markland's cargo, the Robinson Terminal Warehouse Corp. has constructed a $45,000 steel and concrete storehouse at Wolfe and Union streets. The terminal facilities also will be available to other shippers.

Mayor Richard Ruffner, of Alexandria, yesterday predicted that completion of the terminal and arrival of the Markland will prove "a stimulating example."

"I hope the history of Alexandria, as a center of deep-water activity, will repeat itself," he said. The 190-year-old town seal, local historians recalled yesterday, is "a ship in full sail, with a balance equally poised above."

Sailing under the British Admiralty's wartime regulations, the Markland mounts a 4-inch gun. Sandbags protect the navigation bridge.

Capt. Charles F. Williams said he experienced no difficulties in navigating the Potomac, though a light fog mantled the river for his first trip. When fully loaded, the Markland's draft is 24 feet. Minimum depth of the Potomac channel is 26 feet.

The Mersey Paper Co., Robinson Terminal and The Washington Post will be hosts at a party aboard the Markland, from 4 to 6 p. m., today.

Guests will include R. Walton Moore, Counselor of the State Department; Assistant Secretary of War Louis Johnson; Lauren Christie, Canadian Minister; Mayor Ruffner; R. C. Brehaut, president of the Alexandria Chamber of Commerce; T. A. Sommers, Deputy Collector of Customs for Alexandria, and George K. Bender, John D. Matter, Charles Stump, Charles Burgess, Paul L. Rabbit Born Sans Male Has Science Agog

Method Begets Only Females, but Humans Are Still Immune

By the Associated Press

New York, Nov. 2.—All day long doctors crowded into the Academy of Medicine today to peer at a lively doe rabbit, fathered by a solution of common table salt and born to a female rabbit to which it was no relation.

She was the first mammalian creature brought into the animal kingdom by fatherless birth. But none of today's doctors believe the phenomenon had any bearing in relation to the human race.

"This synthetic birth makes perceptible fundamental principles of reproduction," they agreed. "As to synthetic birth among humans—none can tell."

Close by the cage of his "creation" hovered Dr. Gregory Pincus, of Clark University, who launched his work at Harvard. The rabbit he exhibited, he said, was produced by fertilizing the ovum of a female rabbit with a saline solution instead of male cells.

The egg also could have been fertilized by subjecting it briefly to a temperature of 45 degrees centrigrade, Dr. Pincus recently discovered. That's the equivalent of 113 degrees Fahrenheit, or almost 15 degrees above normal body temperature, however, and no human could long survive such a temperature.

The fertilized ovum then was transplanted to another female rabbit where the embryo developed normally to birth.

This method can produce only female offspring, he said, since the sex determinants contained only in male cells would be necessary to produce males.

'Birth of Native Art' Hailed at Corcoran As Collection of 458 Works Goes on Exhibit

By John Chabot Smith.

A milestone in American art was hailed at the Corcoran Gallery yesterday by a Senator, the chief of the Federal Works Fine Arts Section, and throngs of painters, sculptors, students and amateurs of art.

With the pride of a father, Edward Bruce, who for five years has labored to make the decoration of public buildings a stimulus and inspiration for young America's art, offered a collection of 458 statues, murals and designs to the Nation.

"Here spread before you is the birth of a great native art," he said. "It is a panorama of America triumphant, clear-eyed and unafraid."

He was echoed by Senator Robert M. La Follette, of Wisconsin, who saw in art "a creation of the spirit" common to "each one of us," and saw in the decoration of "the people's buildings . . . a splendid opportunity" for the enrichment of American life and the preservation of American culture for future generations.

"Here is before my very eyes an American saga," he said. "I for one am proud of it."

Among the artists who crowded around Bruce to congratulate him in his triumph was Louis Slobodkin, sculptor of the "Young Lincoln" (The Rail Joiner) which had been destroyed in plaster at the New York World's Fair in April. A smaller cast of the statue in bronze was at the exhibition, destined for the new Interior Building.

There was no lack of praise for "Young Lcinoln" among visitors. Senator La Follette sought out the sculptor to congratulate him, calling the statue a "beautiful piece of work."

Bruce beamed with pride as he talked of the pictures, singling out Symeon Shimin's "Contemporary Justice and Child," cartoon for a mural in the Department of Justice Building, and John Steuart Curry's two Oklahoma murals for the fifth floor of the Interior Building for special praise.

"I think they are the best Curry has ever done," he said. "But practically everything here is the artist's best work—certainly much better than five years ago."

When Bruce made his opening speech at 3 o'clock the galleries were well filled with visitors. In the court below the string section of the Navy Band played chamber music.

"In a very real sense this is an exhibition of the national art of our country," he said, pointing out that every section, class and age is represented among the artists.

"It is free from decadence and is as clean as a new field of clover. It is a monument to our civilization of which any nation may well be proud."

Both Bruce and Senator La Follette praised President Roosevelt for lending Government aid to the progress of art, and La Follette added that if the Government is to be thanked for creating an opportunity for American artists, the artists are more to be praised for being equal to it.

Bruce read a letter from the President congratulating the Fine Arts Section on its work and wishing it success in the exhibition.

Treasury Plans To Borrow Half Billion

$1,378,364,200 Refunding Operation Also Scheduled

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau yesterday revealed tentative plans for borrowing $500,000,000 in cash and refunding $1,378,364,200 of March note maturities before January 1.

Consideration is also being given, he said, to borrowing between $50,000,000 and $60,000,000 for the Tennessee Valley Authority to repay the Treasury money advanced to enable it to buy the Tennessee properties of the Commonwealth & Southern Corporation.

This would result in total financing before the end of the year of nearly $2,000,000,000. The new cash borrowing and the note refunding are planned for December 15, an income tax installment date.

The Treasury is able to go ahead with financing plans, Morgenthau declared, now that the money market has recovered from the effects of the sharp break in Government bond prices at the outset of the war.

Borrowing Increased Indirectly

The projected borrowing for the TVA will be an indirect way of increasing the amount of Treasury cash borrowing, since the proceeds are to be used to reimburse the Treasury for money previously advanced.

The Treasury recently offered for sale $250,000,000 of RFC notes to enable the RFC to repay a $258,000,000 debt which it owes the Treasury. Thus the Treasury, by handling financing on behalf of other Government agencies and by direct cash borrowing, will increase its cash balance by about $800,000,000.

This total is swelled to nearly $1,000,000,000 by cash borrowing, now in process of being concluded, in the amount of $150,000,000 through sale of discount bills.

Public Debt Increased

By refunding the $1,378,364,200 of 1½ per cent notes, which mature March 15, the Treasury will continue a policy of refunding note maturities three months in advance.

The $500,000,000 cash borrowing will increase by this amount the public debt, which is now at a record total of $41,036,045,763. The Administration is expected to ask Congress at the next session to increase the statutory debt limit, which is $45,000,000,000.

The TVA notes, like the RFC notes, will be Government-guaranteed, and will be part of the Government's "contingent liabilities," which now total $5,356,255,898. This is not part of the public debt. The deficit for the present fiscal year, which has made the proposed borrowing necessary, totals $1,419,006,599.

Telegraph Head Hits NLRB Order

New York, Nov. 2 (AP).—R. B. White, president of the Western Union Telegraph Co., tonight declared that an examination of the National Labor Relations Board order to disestablish the Association of Western Union Employes "has convinced us that the order will not be sustained by the courts."

A few hours before White's statement, the board said in Washington it had asked the Second Circuit Court of Appeals here to enforce the order, which also directed the company to reimburse employes for dues deducted from pay envelopes since July 5, 1935.

U. S. Tightens Sabotage Defense

By the Associated Press

The Justice Department made known yesterday that it is prepared to crack down on saboteurs if repeal of the arms embargo brings an increase in subversive activities.

Attorney General Murphy said there already had been some sabotage at industrial plants and added that "there may be considerable more."

Murphy praised J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, who he said had set up a protective system which was operating "very effectively."

Hoover Calls Isms National Thuggery

New York, Nov. 2 (AP).—Herbert Hoover tonight asserted that "cunning organization and organized thuggery are the foundations" of the spirit and method of "the groups who now control both Russia and Germany."

At a fund-raising dinner of the Y. M. C. A., the former President declared "this same gangster spirit expresses itself in the political machines which control some of our municipal governments, plundering their taxpayers and controlling elections by corruption and intimidation by gunmen."

Dr. Leiby Delays Taking D. C. Post

Dr. George M. Leiby, appointed last week to head the District's venereal disease services, has requested one month to consider the offer, it was revealed yesterday. Health Officer George C. Ruhland has wired the North Carolina physician to forward a definite "yes or no."

The position pays $5,600 yearly from social security funds. The present director, Dr. Thomas Thompson, has been working on a half-time basis. He was offered the job, but declined.

Japanese Go After Whales in Big Way

By the Associated Press

The Commerce Department said yesterday that Japan was going after whales on a bigger scale than ever, even though the Japanese have not been enthusiastic about the government-sponsored idea of eating whale meat.

Since the war is expected to eliminate England and Germany from competition in Antarctic whaling waters, the Japanese are preparing to send out six whaling ships.

Although "whale steaks" fell flat on Japanese menus, the government still hopes to make money from whale oil and whale leather.

Boys' Clubs Draw Most Visits, With 2,000; Southwest Neighborhood House to Be Open; Children Will Take Part in Rally Monday

The three-week "go-and-see" period at Community Chest agencies, ending today, attracted nearly 5,000 persons, the Chest headquarters announced.

Two thousand persons visited the four branches of the Boys Club of Washington. Other agencies attracting large numbers were the Phyllis Wheatley Y. W. C. A., with 600; the Washington Welfare Association, with 150; the Washington Society for the Hard of Hearing, with 200; the Children's Protective Association, with 100, and the Seventeenth and K Street Y. W. C. A., with 150 visitors.

The Barney Neighborhood House, serving children in the Southwest, will receive visitors in afternoon and evening today. The Council of Social Agencies and Social Service Exchange will have open house hours from 2 to 4 p. m. today in the Chest headquarters, 1101 M street northwest. Emergency Hospital will be open to visitors between 4 and 6 p. m.

Widespread civic co-operation in the Community Chest mass meeting to be held at 8 p. m. Monday in Constitution Hall as the opener of the twelfth annual Chest campaign, is announced by Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, chairman of the committee of sponsors.

Speakers will include the Rev. Edmund A. Walsh, head of the Foreign Service School, Georgetown University, and Federal Security Administrator Paul V. McNutt. A chorus of 400 children, drawn from Chest agencies, will appear. The United States Marine Band, with Capt. Taylor Branson directing, will play.

Mass meeting headquarters in the Willard Hotel will be open until 8 o'clock tonight, until 1 p. m. tomorrow and on Monday until 5 p. m., where free admission tickets will be issued.

Murphy Says Hatch Act Wasn't Violated by Littell

Attorney General Murphy yesterday said he did not consider that Norman N. Littell, his assistant in charge of the lands division, had violated the Hatch act by helping to organize a conference of Western progressives, allegedly for the purpose of furthering a third-term boom for President Roosevelt.

John L. Lewis, C. I. O. president, made the charge this week, in a letter to Gov. Olson of California, that Littell was one of those active in organizing such a meeting for Salt Lake City in January. He suggested also that Littell was violating the Hatch act.

The political significance back of the Lewis letter was his refusal to permit labor's Nonpartisan League to participate in the gathering.

Murphy said he considered Littell a policy-making official and therefore immune from the act.

Methodists Plan Picnic

The Dumbarton Methodist Church will sponsor a strawride and weiner roast, starting from in front of the church at 7:30 o'clock tonight. The church is at 3139 Dumbarton avenue northwest.

Molotoff Lied, Vatican Paper Columnist Says

Copyright by New York Times.

Vatican City, Nov. 2.—Premier Molotoff's speech contained "some truth and a long series of lies," writes Prof. Guido Gonella in his column in today's Osservatore Romano. He makes a sharp attack which is symptomatic of the bolder tone which the Vatican City organ is taking these days.

Even the "truths" are handled in a sarcastic vein as when he writes: "Molotoff says that the definition of aggressor and aggression have come to asume a new significance. Exactly, at least so far as Soviet morale and policy are concerned where an aggressor is the attacked and the attacked is the aggressor."

Among the "copious lies" Gonella lists the statement that "Russians entered Poland when that state had ceased to exist."

Another "lie" he lists is that "Russia intends to respect the independence and territorial integrity of Finland."

10% Wage Increase

Philadelphia, Nov. 2 (AP).—J. H. Vogel, new general works manager of the York Ice Machinery Corporation, has announced a 10 per cent increase in the hourly wage and a 40-hour week for employes in the corporation's plant at York, Pa.

Dr. McHale Urges Better Education Of the Women

Champaign, Ill., Nov. 2 (AP).—Dr. Kathryn McHale, Washington (D. C.) director of the American Association of University Women, said tonight that better education of women could remedy most national and personal problems.

At the thirty-fifth annual University of Illinois High School Conference, Dr. McHale said:

"Educate a man, and you produce a doctor, lawyer, et al. Educate a woman, and you have educated every son and daughter that graces her fireside."

Dr. McHale's formula for improving women's education included the study of government, finance, feminine emotions and the science of human relations.

There's No Trick to Turning Out Delectable Cheese Dishes

Popular Dairy Staple Rich Source of Protein

Recipe for Golden Fluff, One of the Most Delicious and High in Building Material, Is Among Those Sent in by Readers

The Post Food Editor.

IF YOU THINK it's some trick to turn out delectable quick cottage cheese dishes, change your mind. Ways to use this highly nutritious food—whose chief virtue is its concentrated source of protein—are, like the auctioneer's cry, "too numerous to mention." But out of the deluge of recipes submitted in this week's Post recipe contest, we will mention five winning ones.

Miss Ryan

Golden Fluff

One of the most delicious dishes as well as one of those high in building material is a well-made omelet. The fluffy cheese omelet recipe submitted by Miss Martha Ryan, 1627 Thirty-fifth street, is a savory combination of cheese and eggs, flavored with pimiento. The following is Miss Ryan's recipe for which she wins a $3 award.

Fluffy Cheese Omelet

Beat 4 egg yolks until thick and light. Add ½ teaspoon salt and a dash of pepper, ¾ cup milk and 1 cup cottage cheese, and 2 tablespoons finely chopped pimiento. Fold into 4 stiffly beaten egg whites. Turn into a hot 9-inch frying or omelet pan to which has been added 1 tablespoon butter and cook over low heat for 3 to 5 minutes, or until omelet puffs up and is browned on bottom. Test by raising edge of omelet with spatula. Place in a moderate oven, 350 degrees for 10 to 15 minutes, or until top springs back when pressed with finger. Cut about 1-inch incisions at opposite sides and crease down through center in line with cuts; then fold carefully on crease by slipping spatula under half of omelet to fold over. Slip on to hot platter and garnish with parsley. If an omelet pan is used, merely fold over; omelet will shrink slightly when removed from pan. Serve at once.

Cheese Wonder

No cottage cheese story would be complete without a fascinating cheese cake. This is a food that seems to baffle a great many. Mrs. Arthur Rhoads, 520 Elm street, Frederick, Md., has a delightful new version of cheese cake. For this recipe Mrs. Rhoads wins the second prize of $2. Her recipe follows:

Mrs. Rhoads

Cottage Cheese Cake

Soak 2 tablespoons gelatine in ½ cup cold water for about 5 minutes. Cook slightly, 3-egg yolks, slightly beaten, with ½ cup sugar and ½ cup water for about 3 minutes. Add the softened gelatine. Add 1 pound of cottage cheese which has been put through a sieve, the juice and rind of 1 lemon, ¼ teaspoon salt and then let cool. When cool, add 3-egg whites, which have been beaten stiff, and 1 cup cream whipped stiff.

To make the top and the bottom of the cake, mix ½ cup melted butter, 2 cups corn flakes, crushed very fine, 4 tablespoons sugar and 1 teaspoon cinnamon. Put ½ the mixture into spring form or torte pan. Fill with the cheese mixture, sprinkling the remainder of the crumb mixture over the top and place in refrigerator

Country Special

Designated as a farmer's dish, the winning recipe of Miss Jean Frantz, Farmer's Chop Suey, is sure to be appreciated by the city dweller as well. Miss Frantz writes that this dish may be served in a large salad bowl, using one large or four small molds of cottage cheese, as well as in individual service. And served with pineapple juice and salted wafers, she suggests it as a complete luncheon or light supper dish. A $1 award goes to Miss Frantz for her distinctive dish featuring cottage cheese.

Miss Frantz

Farmer's Chop Suey

Chill thoroughly before preparing all ingredients. Mix gently with fork to avoid crushing, 1 peeled diced cucumber, ¼ cup finely sliced radishes, ¼ cup finely sliced spring or Bermuda onions, 2 firm tomatoes, chopped, and salt and pepper to taste. Shred 1 head of lettuce and arrange in nests in individual bowls. Fill a small mold with creamed, salted cottage cheese and turn out on lettuce nests. Arrange chopped vegetable around cheese and pour over all, 1 cup soured cream, whipped and flavored with 2 tablespoons lemon juice. Garnish with green pepper rings and paprika. Return to refrigerator a short time to complete cooling.

Artist's Version

Although much has been said about food fantasies such as a ham mousse that looks like a pineapple, a chocolate pudding that resembles a baked ham and blancmange that comes out of a fish mold, to deceive the eye and discourage the appetite, yet such concoctions need not discourage one to make a delightful cottage cheese loaf. Mrs. E. Drew Conklyn, 5-F Parkway road, Greenbelt, Md., suggests a cheese loaf to be served with dainty tea sandwiches. For this suggestion Mrs. Conklyn wins a $1 award. The following is her recipe:

Mrs. Conklyn

Cottage Cheese Loaf

Combine 3 cups cottage cheese, ½ teaspoon salt and ½ cup pecan meats. Whip 1 cup whipping cream until stiff and fold in the cheese mixture. Divide 3 cups cottage cheese into thirds. In one third, add 1 cup pineapple cubes and enough green coloring to make it a pastel green. In the second one-third, add 1 small jar maraschino cherries chopped and the pink coloring. Leave the last third of cottage cheese white. Place in a large refrigerator tray, the cheese with the pineapple and flatten out. Add the cheese which is plain and smooth out on top; add the cheese which has the cherries in it, and smooth out. Place in freezing unit for 5 to 6 hours. When ready to serve slice in ¾-inch slices. Serves 10 to 12.

Par Excellence

Often a well-seasoned, skilfully compounded "made" dish will be more appealing than the original form in which its key ingredients appeared. Such is a dish made by Mrs. Alice P. West, Shipman, Va., when she uses left-over meat in combination with cottage cheese and bread crumbs as the main ingredients. This thrifty concoction wins a $1 award for Mrs. West. The following is her recipe:

Mrs. West

Cottage Cheese Balls

Boil 2 small sweet peppers in salt water until tender. Cut into small pieces. Put into a mixing bowl, 1 cup cottage cheese, 1 cup grated bread crumbs, 1 cup ground beef or ham, ½ cup broth, ¼ cup cream, 2 tablespoons butter, 1 teaspoon salt and ¼ teaspoon black pepper. Add peppers to this mixture. Form into balls, put into a buttered dish and bake 30 minutes in a medium-hot oven. Serves 6 to 8 persons.

Cottage cheese in the form of a dumpling is very simple to prepare, but the results are truly delicious. When served with spinach, as shown in the picture above, it makes not only a wholesome service but also an attractive one

Brisk Fall Days Call for Cider Cookery

Used as Glaze, Enhances Taste Of Baked Ham

By Martha Ellyn.
The Post Food Editor.

SPEEDING ALONG a lovely Maryland road ablaze with gold and crimson, I was returning last Sunday from my weekly exodus to the open spaces, with some friends, when we saw a battered shingle on a roadside "store" painted in great zigzag letters—"Cider for Sale." We stopped, and immediately the store keeper, a freckeled farmer lad, produced some shiny tin cups asking if we would like "some of the best cider you ever tasted." This Huckleberry Finn knew his business—for the cider was so refreshing that we had seconds and left, taking with us, in addition to a two-gallon demijohn of cider, some acorn squashes, Jonathan apples for pies and Roman Beauties for baking.

Martha Ellyn

Since all the cider couldn't be drunk, I began to think of ways to use it in cooking. There's a goodly assortment of dishes to be further enhanced with cider. In fact, this cider became the starting point for a buffet supper served to Halloween guests. I buy the kind of ham that is as tender as a plump spring chicken, cured in the mild way and smoked by a special method in an oven, which gives a combination of flavor and tenderness which is incomparable.

Economize With Whole Ham

It is real economy to buy a whole ham. If you bake the whole ham, you may serve slices later—either cold or pan broiled. Or if preferred, the ham may be divided before baking so as to bake the butt end, pan broil the center slices and simmer the hock end. Of course, you don't have to buy a whole ham, for your market will sell you a half as well as a whole one. The following are directions for baking the whole or half-ham, with the cider glaze and several others.

Baked Ham

Wipe the ham with a damp cloth. Wrap loosely in the glassine wrapper. Place fat side up on a rack in a pan. Do not cover pan or add water. Bake in a slow oven, 325 degrees. If a meat thermometer is used, place the thermometer so that the bulb is in the center of the thickest part—not touching a bone. Bake until the thermometer registers 150 degrees. Remove paper and all rind. Cover with desired glaze. Bake in a hot oven, 400 degrees, for 15 minutes or until the desired brown.

If the ham is very cold, the cooking period will be longer. If the ham is allowed to come to average room temperature, about 70 degrees, before it is put in to bake, the cooking time will be approximately 15 minutes per pound for large hams—over 12 pounds; 18 minutes per pound for small hams—under 12 pounds, and 22 minutes per pound for half a ham.

Cider Glaze—1 cup sugar and ½ cup cider.

Filled With Sweet Potatoes

This particular Halloween ham was served with apple cups—made from the Roman Beauties we brought home from the roadside market and filled with sweet potatoes. Boiled tongue served with Cider Raisin Sauce is also delicious.

Our grandmothers added cider to their homemade mincemeat and plum pudding. They would boil down large amounts of cider, to one-half the original quantity and store for winter use. Nowadays, we do not make such elaborate preparations, for at the neighborhood stores we can find delicious prepared mincemeat and plum puddings on the canned-goods shelf. But there is still a grand use for cider in the dessert course. Take Cider Pecan Sauce to serve with plum pudding, or the old familiars, such as hot apple dumplings, old fashioned rice pudding, and even bread pudding would take a new lease if served with a cider-flavored sauce. The following is a recipe for a cider sauce:

Cider Pecan Sauce

Blend 2 tablespoons cornstarch and ¾ cup sugar together. Add ½ cup boiling water and boil 5 minutes. Cool. Add 1 cup cider and 4 tablespoons chopped pecans. Serve warm or chilled. Just before serving, add 1½ teaspoons grated orange peel.

As a Sauce For Puddings Also Zestful

Cider Cup

Add 2 tablespoons orange Curacao to the rind of half an orange and half a lemon and ½ cup sugar. Cover and let stand for 2 hours. Add 1 pint cider, strain and stand on ice to chill. Add 1 pint chilled soda water, mint leaves and orange slices and serve immediately. The success of any cup depends upon adding the charged water just before serving.

Apple butter is another old-time delicacy that gains zest when cider is used as one of the ingredients in making it. There are delicious pure apple butters available at the stores, but just in case you want to try your hand at making the old-fashioned kind, the following recipe is given.

Old-fashioned Apple Butter

Pare, core and slice 4 quarts apples. Boil 2 quarts sweet cider until it is reduced to one-half, adding apples as soon as boiling starts. Cook slowly, stirring frequently to prevent burning. When mixture begins to thicken, add 2 cups brown sugar, 1 teaspoon each of ground allspice and cinnamon. Cook until it remains in a smooth mass when a little is cooled. Place in sterilized jars and seal with paraffin.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Two Men Love Girl and She Loves Them; Would Wed One but Other Would Be Heartbroken; What to Do?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have a problem that only you can solve. I am a girl 19 years old. I left the country three years ago, leaving my first boy friend behind. I had promised to marry him if he came to the city where I am, but he couldn't leave his mother. So he asked me to wait for him.

Well, about four months ago I met a town boy, who is 25 years old. (The country boy is only 20.) Now we are very much in love with each other and he has asked me to marry him. I was in the country about a week ago and I explained to the country boy that I was going to get married. He wants me to break my engagement to the town boy.

Both of them are very much in love with me and I am also in love with them, but I would rather marry the town boy. But I hate to break the country boy's heart. He said he'd never forgive me if I didn't marry him. Please give me your advice. What would you do if two boys were loving you? E. E. W.

Grateful Affection Mistaken for Love

DEAR E. E. W.: The truth of the matter, I daresay, is this—you are not really "in love" with either young man. You have found each one to be an enjoyable companion; you have become fond of each as a result of his earnest attentions; and, to cap the climax, you are grateful to each for loving you so much. All this adds up to an emotional reaction of warm and perhaps even tender affection which you mistakenly call love. But so long as you sincerely feel that you "love" both boys equally well, you may depend upon it that your heart is still unclaimed.

You say, of course, that you "would rather marry the town boy." But this, I assume, is because you think he is better prepared, because of age and financial situation, to assume the responsibilities of immediate marriage than is the country boy. Or perhaps because you believe that life with him would offer more attractions, on the social side, than would life with the other chap. Yet it would be my opinion that you are scarcely old enough to weigh such considerations wisely, as a more mature woman might. I have a feeling that, as a result of these two proposals, you are in too much of a hurry to get married.

In strict fairness to the situation, however, I must admit that I could be mistaken in these deductions, since your statement of the case leaves overmuch to the imagination. The "town boy" may be far and away your best matrimonial bet; he may be fully entitled to your devotion; he might make an excellent husband; and you might fall lastingly and single-mindedly in love with him, if you could get your childish pledge to the other boy off your conscience. If such is the case, then I submit that you have every right to marry the "town boy," even if in so doing you break the "country boy's" heart.

His heart will mend, if his character is sound; and if he is such a weakling that he cannot survive a romantic reversal, it would be foolish of you to sacrifice your happiness in order to serve his selfishness. In conclusion, the best advice I can give you is to follow the dictates of both heart and head in choosing a husband; and don't be actuated by sentiments of pity or duty, or a vain desire to be married. Marriage should be entered into happily and wholeheartedly, with no emotional reservations or qualifications. M. H.

Indorses Advice Given High School Girl

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am entirely in sympathy with the advice you gave in your column of October 31 to the high school girl who is "faced with the serious problem of whether to surrender to the boy she loves." I have known of two similar cases, in which the two girls made different choices, with vastly different results, which I will relate.

In the first case, the girl surrendered. The boy dropped her as he would have dropped a coal of fire. The other girl refused. The man married her, and years afterward he told her that had she surrendered, he would never have married her.

My advice to this poor innocent is to follow the second girl's example. If the boy loves her as much as she thinks he does he will not drop out of the picture. He will think far more of her . . .

M. D. C.

Man Appraises Love's 'Surrender'

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: The "serious problem" described by the high school girl in your column of October 31 would not have been considered much of a problem to a girl who had been brought up in a Christian home. The solution would have been very simple to her. Being a man, let me give the man's point of view.

Before I married, years ago, I had too much respect for myself and the pure, sweet and beautiful girl who became my wife, to think of making improper suggestions to her during our courtship or engagement. Had I done such a thing, moreover, I feel sure that our engagement would have been broken forthwith. I certainly could not have respected a girl who would have tolerated such sordid compromise.

What a grand thing it is to look back on courtship with a clear and clean conscience! I feel that your wise advise is of great help to many young people who have become perplexed by fast and sometimes foolish examples of behavior.

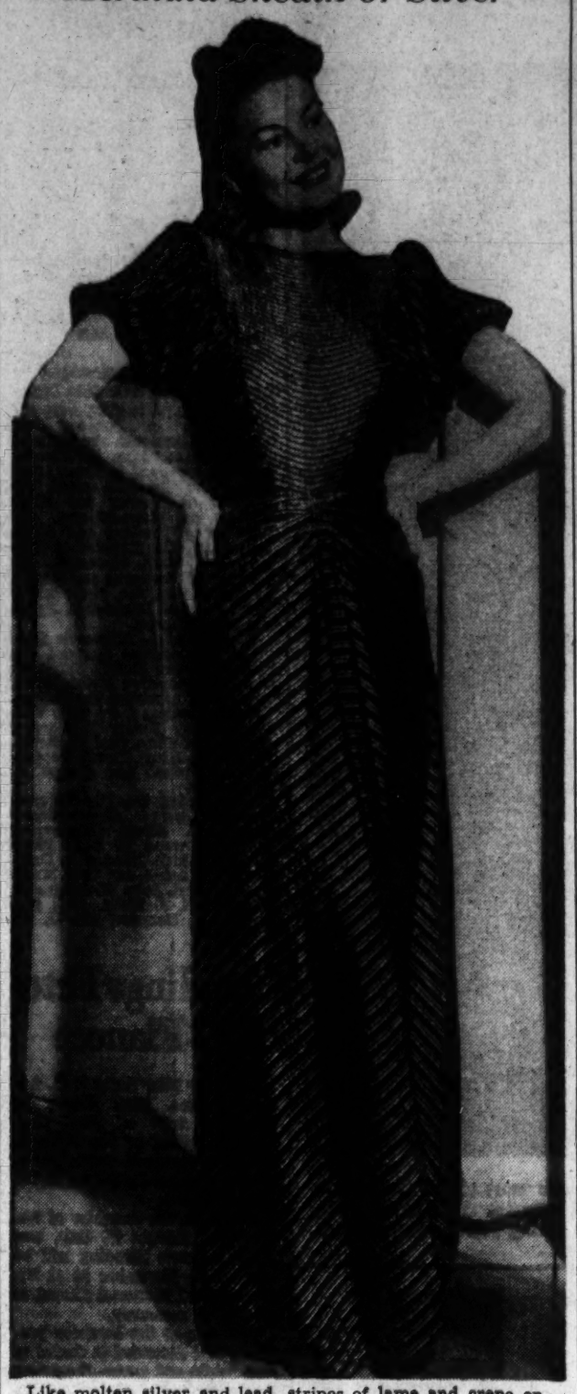
Mermaid Sheath of Silver



Like molten silver and lead, stripes of lame and crepe encircle this gown. The black, or off black—almost a leaden color, and the silver stripes, brilliant and eye-catching, combine to make an interesting pattern for this slim sheath. The sides of the bodice and waistline are shirred to give extra meaning to the simple, high neckline, which woud be a good foil for baroque colored jewels. The back of the bodice is enticingly slit, to display a lovely back. This mermaid gown, along with many gracious matrons' evening costumes, was shown at a recent luncheon fashion showing at the Shoreham Hotel

All-Pretzel Diet Called Crazy Idea One-Food Regimes and Rapid Reducing Are Dangerous; Protective Foods Necessary

WHERE'S MY apoplexy medicine! The latest is an all pretzel diet! Someone writes to tell me she is on it. All she eats is pretzels and those only once a day. She is wondering if they are fattening! She ought to wonder, at least once, whether pretzels alone will keep her alive.

Curiously enough, this reducer had already done an excellent job of cutting down weight before she went off on this novel tangent. She had brought her weight down from 174 pounds to 137 pounds on the balanced menus. But she tired of a varied reducing diet and adopted the suggestion of a friend that she try this pretzel stunt.

Not Only Screwball

If this were the only letter of its kind, I would toss it aside and try to forget it. But although these dietary experiments are fortunately not the rule, neither are they the exception. By the same mail, someone else wrote that she was planning to go on an "all tomato juice diet for at least a week" and she wanted to know, "Do you believe you can truly lose 1 to 2 pounds a day on the all tomato juice diet?"

That I wouldn't know! But I do know that anyone who recommends such a diet should not be running around loose.

This reducer gave the explanation that "I've got to get down to 130 pounds as quickly as I can. I do absolutely nothing. My time is my own to take the air and sunshine so a starvation diet wouldn't affect me as it would a working girl." Well, sun and air don't take the place of food!

This classic explanation, however, was given by the lady who wanted the Hollywood 18-day diet even though she knew it was not safe. She said she always ate more than a diet allowed, couldn't possibly stay on one anyway, and therefore thought it would be all right for her. But it wouldn't have been all right! Since this particular diet is an extremely poor one to start with, merely adding calories indiscriminately would not improve it. She would have been on a poor diet without losing any weight.

Peril to Health, Looks

Please don't ask my opinion about these one-food diets or my co-operation in taking off 20 pounds in a month! Anyone who stayed on such abbreviated fare would wind up a nervous wreck minus the slightest pretension to good looks. Then people would go around saying that's what reducing does to one!

Today's Social Notes

(From The Truthtown Torch)

Mr. Reginald Puffer, of Stagcrest estate near here, is at Big Doctors' Hospital as the result of a slight heart attack he suffered early today. Mrs. Puffer attributed her husband's collapse to overwork. Yesterday he had a particularly strenuous day. After riding to the hounds in the Pink Jacket Hunt and attending the hunt breakfast that followed, he and Mrs. Puffer drove into town to attend the Swagg-Gilderlyly wedding.

Following the wedding day, they entertained a party of friends at the races and later dropped in at the Mortimer Silos for cocktails, going from there to the Mark Stepp's open house. Then they dashed home, dressed and returned to town for the dinner given by Mr. and Mrs. Adam Stalactite preceding the supper dance at the Plush Sofa club. They were being driven home from the dance by their chauffeur about 3 o'clock this morning when Mr. Puffer collapsed. Physicians have ordered a six-month rest.

Mr. Chuck Flitter has flown to Chicago to speak at the pep rally tonight preceding the Spookem-Hokem University football game and to attend a reunion dinner of the Alpha Zany fraternity. Mr. Flitter was graduated from Spoofem University in 1903. He has since been engaged in handling his father's estate.

Mrs. Rufus Raven entertained about 30 guests last night at a buffet supper after which she graciously consented to sing for the remainder of the evening.

Crowded Calendar

"Now let's get together and take a nice hike in the country some day."

"All right. What about some day next week?"

"Oh, next week's National Drive a Car week. We might try the week after, though."

"No, that's National Ride a Bicycle week. What about the third week in November?"

"All right—no, wait! That's National Stay at Home week."

"Well, what about the week after that?"

"I'm pretty sure that's National High Heeled Pump week. But we might go the first week in December."

"No, if I remember rightly, that's National Washing Machine week and we'll have to stay at home."

"Well, isn't the week after that free?"

"No, that's National Read Aloud week."

"Oh, yes! And the week after that's National Tap Dancing week."

"Well, I suppose we'll just have to wait until after Christmas when everything quiets down."

Bustle Coiffures Are in Order, Says Perc Westmore

Hollywood, Calif.—Coiffures in the spirit of the bustle are in order, according to Perc Westmore, make-up director for Warner Brothers.

The first rule of the new hair styles is to brush hair up and away from the ears, with airy kiss curls as the only softening detail at this point.

In many bustle coiffures thick clusters of curls fall from the crown of the head to the shoulder-line in the youthful effect achieved by Jane Bryan in "The Old Maid." Sometimes the curls are also held in place at the nape of the neck with wide barettes of jeweled clips.

The cock's-comb hairdress is the best tailored style to tie in with the bustle. Miriam Hopkins shows it in "The Old Maid." In this instance the hair is all drawn away from the face into a roll down the center of the head, where it is secured by little combs or hairpins. Here again kiss curls are softening. It is an ideal style for women who prefer to wear their turbans with no hair showing.

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes

Mrs. Roosevelt Lauded for Smartening Up And Improving Voice; Is Rapid Shopper

New York, Nov. 2.

THAT EXTRAORDINARY feminine phenomenon, Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, plays an ever-growing role in New York's spotlight though her headquarters is actually 1600 Pennsylvania avenue, Washington. It seems to me that in the case of such a remarkable woman, politics is strictly non est. The fact that she happens to be the spouse of a Democratic President is relatively unimportant, save for the fact that her husband's position in a time of tremendous national stress gave her qualities and performances wider, brighter publicity.

ALICE HUGHES

Her activities here, in the past week, have been vivid and widespread. We all remember her unfortunate newsreel appearances in 1933. Never a John Powers model type, she quickly discovered that she must smarten up in every way to fit the larger frame into which destiny had forced her. She has become infinitely better dressed, and this week started her Christmas shopping at the Fifth avenue store which gets the bulk of her Gotham business. Then she bought some things for the newest grandchild, the Boettiger babe, and laid in some winter clothes. Her first new party dress is a white faille satin and gold-striped princess gown. She also laid it on the line for a gold lame dinner gown.

When she was busy smartening up for First Ladyhood, she began a course of voice training, and the other day she made an excellent and well-delivered speech at the great annual forum of the New York Herald-Tribune. Then she got the 1939 medal offered by a magazine "for outstanding service to children." Then she was away again. I often see her charging about our streets with her long, purposeful stride. Whatever her family party label, I prefer to think of her as one of the country's most astonishing women.

GIRLS ABOUT TOWN—How long we have all been wriggling to escape that trite and now almost meaningless word, "glamour." Locally a substitute has been projected for young ladies a bit above the common run—it is the adjective "plus." In short, the kid is a "plus" girl. What do you make of that?

Still speaking of words, I am told that her press-agents have not been ordered to use the vicious "oomph" in connection with screen hot-shot Ann Sheridan. One of that crowd thought it up, and now it has been run deep into the ground. No more oomph. Goodie, goodie, if true . . . But what then?

Helen Claire, the pretty Southern girl who switched on her Southern accent for the lead in "Kiss the Boys Goodbye" and speaks plain Yankee when commenting on newsreel fashions, has a new job. She will play the feminine lead opposite John Beal in the new show, "I Know What I Like." But I haven't yet heard how she's supposed to talk. Maybe a Greenwich Village dialect, since the piece is about Upper-Case Art.

MARLENE DIETRICH and Garbo are being debunked at the same moment. Garbo in her Russian comedy, "Ninotchka," and Legs in the western, "Destry Rides Again," in which she engages in some terrific saloon fighting with Una Merkel. Mar-layna, now a full-fledged citizen of our country, is trying to help her husband, Rudy Sieber, reach the same felicitous state.

Mrs. Jock Whitney, wife of the polo player, horse breeder and movie backer, hasn't been seen awfully often with her wealthy spouse the last few years. Now it is said she is going to sell all her blooded stock and her Virginia estate, too, and try for a movie career. She has had the film bug for some years.

Make New Slip Covers for Fall

But what a "lift" it gives your room—your spirits, too—to hide those durable "old faithfuls" under new slip covers in enchanting color schemes! And so easily you make them the pin-on way.

What fabric? Sateen or taffeta is charming in a formal room. Or choose linen, crash or chintz.

Begin by smoothing three lengths of fabric over the inside-back and seat (wrongside out for welted seams). Tuck it 4 inches into the crevice to relieve strain. Pin along the lines of the old upholstery and for better fit make little darts on the curves. Then cut, leaving 1½ inches for seams.

Similarly fit, pin and cut other pieces—sides, arms and back. Then pin all the pieces together, remove the cover and baste. Try it on. For smart finish insert welting in the seams, as shown in diagram, and stitch from the wrong side. Last of all sew on the flounce.

What kind of flounce? A closely gathered one is perky as grandmother's crinoline and charming in any room. Or use a straight or pleated one if you like that better.

It's just as easy to make slip covers for any type of chair or sofa. Our 40-page booklet, "Making Slip Covers Successfully," has step-by-step directions and diagrams for all kinds of slip covers. Shows how to estimate material, cut, fit and finish. Gives suggestions for materials, styles, trimmings.

Send 15 cents in coins for our booklet, "Making Slip Covers Successfully," to The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth Street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

Lord Lothian Honors Alfred Duff-Cooper

Small Dinner Given for Former British Sea Lord; Mrs. McLean Has Supper Party for Three Stars of 'Leave It to Me'

By Hope Ridings Miller,

TWO DIPLOMATIC dinners, an after-the-theater supper party and a Venison Hunt fete took over a sizeable slice of the spotlight last night as local celebrities by the score were out in top hats and tiaras for one of the biggest evenings thus far this season.

Probably the most significant get-together on the calendar was the small dinner given by Lord Lothian, the British Ambassador, for the Right Hon. Alfred Duff-Cooper, who arrived in Washington late yesterday afternoon accompanied by his wife, Lady Diana Manners, the latter of whom is remembered for her role in "The Miracle."

A small group also has been asked to the British Embassy tonight to dine with the Duff-Coopers, who will be in Washington only two days. The former First Lord of the British Admiralty, who arrived in New York October 22, expects to spend some time on a lecture tour in this country. He will leave Washington either tomorrow or Sunday.

The Netherlands Minister and Mme. Loudon, who are giving a series of dinners this season, entertained at one last night, having 18 guests in their company. They will be off to New York today to spend the week-end, "but it's business—not pleasure," Mme. London said yesterday.

Actors Feted At Supper Party

Victor Moore, Sophie Tucker and William Gaxton, stars of the current musical comedy, "Leave It to Me," were honor guests at the supper party given after the theater last night at Friendship, Mrs. Edward Beale McLean's estate in Wisconsin avenue. As usual at fetes planned by the owner of the famous "Hope Diamond," last night's event drew heavily from the Capital's official circles, and from the younger-set friends of Mrs. McLean's son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Beale McLean, jr.

Still another important party in last night's whirl was the dinner given by Arthur Young, of St. Mauris, Calif., in honor of Dr. W. W. Yen, former Chinese ambassador to the Soviet Union and more recently head of the International Red Cross in Shanghai. The event took place at the Mayflower Hotel, where Mr. Young and his wife are spending several days.

Members of the Chinese embassy staff will give a dinner for Dr. Yen tonight, and on Tuesday he will be honored at a similar event at which the Chinese ambassador, Dr. Hu Shih, will be host.

Hunt Dinner Colorful Event

Colorful was the word for the second annual Venison Hunt dinner that drew dozens of local celebrities to the Pall Mall Room of the Hotel Raleigh last evening. Started last year under the skillful aegis of Col. C. C. Schiffeler, the dinner's initial success prompted the hotel management to make it an annual affair.

Autumnal decorations and a snappy program plus a menu featuring venison cooked up to a queen's taste were accents of the outstanding evening's entertainment.

Bright colored leaves and pine branches were arranged about the Pall Mall Room and accenting the decorations over the orchestra pit was a deer's head. There was a large crowd on hand and the atmosphere was quite in keeping with the hunt dinner—rollicking.

Mrs. John J. Dempsey, wearing a blue sequin and chiffon frock, twirled about the floor with Walter K. Bachrach, while Representative Dempsey guided Mrs. Bachrach about the dance floor. Making up a gay party were the Former Comptroller General and Mrs. J. R. McCarl with Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Barton. There were a number of other guests at the large table, at which the McCarls were hosts.

Peggy Townsend, wearing a stunning all black costume and sporting a bow atop her curls, whirled about the floor with Willis Ballinger. Miss Nancy Hoskinson, who had several beaux dancing at attention, wore a black taffeta frock trimmed with touches of electric blue. The Minister of the Dominican Republic and Senora de Pastoriza were in a party with the Minister of Honduras and Senora de Caceres and Dr. and Mrs. Thomas Cajigas. Senora de Pastoriza, who scarcely missed a dance, wore a turquoise crepe gown.

Still others there were Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, Mr. and Mrs. J. Rowland Hill, Mrs. C. C. Schiffler quite smart in hunter's green velvet; Mr. and Mrs. Prew Savoy, Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Pope, Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Yates, Capt. and Mrs. J. C. Gawne, Mr. and Mrs. Fred MacKenzie and Miss Virginia Flannery.

Miss Dita Davis Will Bow Soon

"A debutante sans wardrobe" is the problem confronting lovely Miss Dita Davis, who arrived in town with her parents, Col. and Mrs. Robert Davis, from Brentwood, Calif., several days ago. By mistake the Davis luggage went to New York, but they have hopes of retrieving it very shortly.

Col. and Mrs. Davis, who will present their daughter to society on November 29, have leased a 7-acre estate on Columbia pike, in Arlington County, Va. Following the presentation of their daughter to society the Davis' plans are somewhat indefinite.

If Mrs. Davis can manage her various interests in California by remote control she would like to make her home here permanently. The place they have taken has lovely grounds and Mrs. Davis has hopes of exercising her gardening talents.

Coming along from California was another daughter, Miss Barbara Davis, who made her debut in Washington several seasons ago. Mrs. Paul Greenhalgh, another daughter, who has been making her home with her sister, Mrs. Raymond Soderberg, in Falls Church, Va., will come to live with her parents.

The John Davis Hatches, on Bridal Tour, To Stop Here for Cocktail Party at the Sangers'

Visitors who haven't been seen around these parts for quite a while will come to Washington for the week-end. Mr. and Mrs. John Davis Hatch, who have been honeymooning in the South, will arrive to visit Mr. and Mrs. Richard Sanger on their way back to New York. Mrs. Sanger has asked a few friends in for cocktails tomorrow afternoon in their honor.

Mrs. Hatch is the former Olivia Stokes, daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. Anson Phelps Stokes. Her marriage took place last month in Lenox, Mass., where her parents, who lived here until recently, are now making their home since Dr. Stokes' retirement as canon of the National Cathedral.

MRS. MARY BRECKINRIDGE, founder of the Frontier Nursing Service, will be here tomorrow on her way to New York for the annual meeting November 14 at the Waldorf-Astoria. Since she started her group of "nurses on horseback" in the Kentucky mountains a dozen years ago, her name is known to every inhabitant over 700 square miles of countryside, and many of the little farm children growing up there are named Breckinridge.

Her cousin, Marvin Breckinridge, who conducted an amateur photography class here last year for the Junior League, was in Germany with her camera when last heard from. She is a former courier for the Frontier Nursing Service and has taken some excellent movies of its work, which she shows at group rallies. Last year she took her films up to Canada for a special showing before Lady Tweedsmuir, wife of the Governor General, who is much interested in the work. Marvin has sold many of her travel pictures to national magazines and writes the articles to go with them.

THE BOARD OF GOVERNORS of the Washington Ice Club will go to Riverside Stadium in a body tonight to get some pointers from the "Ice Follies" show before the first meeting of the season on Sunday morning. Col. William McKee Dunn, chairman of the club, will not attend as he has gone to his place at Hot Springs, Va., for the week-end, but those expected to be present in a party tonight, are Mr. and Mrs. Edward Burling, jr.; Mr. and Mrs. Creighton Peet, Mr. and Mrs John Borton, Mr. and Mrs. Thacher Winslow, Mr. and Mrs. Sanger, who will have Mr. and Mrs. Hatch with them, Mr. and Mrs. John Sternhagen, and Mr. and Mrs. Melville Grosvenor.

FRANNIE CARTER entertained at a luncheon yesterday at her house on Reservoir road for bride-to-be Junia Culbertson. The other guests were the hostess' next-door neighbor, Mrs. Randolph Kidder; Mrs. Cecil Lyon, Mrs. Edward Page, Miss Jane Culbertson, Miss Elizabeth Ogilby and Miss Virginia Cook.

Smith and DeLong Bowman will give a luncheon for Junia next Saturday at their Virginia place and later the guests will go on to the Middleburg races. That evening Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Folger will give a dinner for Miss Culbertson and her fiance, Thomas Luckenbill, at the Chevy Chase Club, and Mrs. Robert Knowlton will fete them at cocktails tomorrow.

THE FORMER Swiss Legation on Kalorama Circle is now the home of Judge and Mrs. D. Lawrence Groner and the latter's daughters, Betty and Marion Shouse. Meanwhile, the newly arrived Swiss Minister and Mme. Bruggmann are still continuing a search for a house, but have not yet found one which is also large enough to hold a chancery.

CLOSE FRIENDS of Senator and Mrs. Hiram Bingham are being given autographed copies of Mr. Bingham's recently published life of Elihu Yale, the first biography ever written of the founder of the university in New Haven. Mrs. Bingham compiled the glossary and lengthy index, almost as tedious a job as writing the book itself.

Parties Arranged For the Thompsons Who Arrive Today

Mr. and Mrs. Phillips Thompson, of New York, will arrive in Washington today to join their son-in-law and daughter, Commander and Mrs. Jerauld Wright. Commander Wright will give a men's dinner in honor of Mr. Thompson tonight at the Alibi Club and Mrs. Dwight Davis will entertain Mrs. Thompson, Mrs. Wright and several other guests at dinner.

Tomorrow Mr. and Mrs. Thompson will return to Annapolis, where Commander and Mrs. Wright are stationed, and will spend the week-end there. Commander and Mrs. Wright will have as their guests at the Navy-Columbia football game that afternoon Mr. and Mrs. Lee Warren, of Washington.

Diplomatic Set Among Those At Ice Revue

Legislators Also Seen At First Show of Kind To Come to Capital

Ambassadors, officials and just people jammed the Riverside Stadium last night for the first musical revue on ice ever shown here. They gasped at the daring skaters and were amused by Mr. Snowman and his three polar bear friends.

Parties had been arranged by ice-minded members of the Diplomatic Corps. Attending were the Ambassador of Ecuador and Senora de Escalante, the Minister of Portugal and Mme. De Bianchi, who was wrapped in silver foxes to keep out the chill winds; the Minister of Norway and Mme. Munthe de Morgenstierne, the Minister of Thailand and Mme. Rajamaitri, the Minister of Bulgaria and Mme. Naoumoff, the Minister of Nicaragua and Senora de Bayle, who, too, chose silver foxes, and the Minister of Egypt and Mme. Hassan.

Members of the Minnesota delegation in Congress attended the revue. Senator Henrik Shipstead and Representative Melvin Maas were noted admiring the skaters.

Mrs. Blanding was gowned in brown with gold and green accessories. Miss Galt wore a black moyen age frock with rose pink ruffles at the wide sleeves and her mother was gowned in black.

Other guests at the luncheon were Miss Jean Lowe, Miss Dorothy Warrington, Miss Randolph Richardson, Mrs. Thomas G. Young, jr. Miss Howry Hostess at Tea In Georgetown

Mme. Ertegun, Wife of Ambassador, Assists With Pouring

By Elizabeth Henney

Receiving her guests during the dusk-to-dark hours in the white satin paneled drawing room of her Georgetown home, Miss Elizabeth Howry entertained yesterday afternoon at tea in honor of Mrs. John Allen Dougherty, Miss Mae Helm and Mrs. Caspar M. Durgin.

Miss Howry was gowned in a navy blue frock embroidered in a silverthread design of stars and mystic symbols. Her sister, Miss Mary Howry, wore a moyen age frock of black taffeta with touches of white. Mrs. Dougherty looked chic in a black and chartreuse print frock with a black redingote and black accessories, and Miss Helm wore dark blue and matching accessories with a jeweled pendant as her only ornament.

Mme. Ertegun Assists at Tea Table

Assisting at the tea table were Mme. Ertegun, wife of the Turkish Ambassador, who wore black with a turquoise necklace and earrings, Mrs. Bruce Kremer in black with gold costume jewelry, Mrs. Thomas Armat, Mrs. Ronald Ransome, Mrs. Goodwin Rhett, Mrs. George Maurice Morris in dubonnet with matching accessories and a sable trimmed hat, Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, Mrs. James L. Houghteling, Mrs. McCeney Werlich and Miss Edna Lonigan, who was gowned in black with silver fox furs.

Guests arriving at the austere gray brick house with the lamp light gleaming in the dusk through half-drawn blinds, were greeted in the hall by the rollicking strains of "The Beer Barrel Polka," played by a red-coated Police Boys Band. Since Miss Howry is president of the Women's Auxiliary of the Police Boys Club; Mrs. Dougherty and Miss Helm are past presidents and Mrs. Durgin is the retiring recording secretary of the organization, it was natural that the boys should furnish the musical program, which they did with great vigor.

Maj. Ernest Brown And Wife Stop In

Early in the afternoon Maj. Ernest Brown and Mrs. Brown stopped in for a while. Mrs. Brown, who was celebrating her birthday, was proudly showing her favorite present, a small platinum watch in the shape of an acorn which was worn as a necklace on a black cord.

A cozy group in the corner consisted of Mrs. Edward Everett (Dolly) Gann, Mrs. Emlen Davies, Mrs. William Laird Dunlop, and the Baroness Von Below.

Others who were noted during the afternoon were Director of the Mint, Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, Mrs. Emil Hurja, Mrs. Lewis B. Schwellenbach, Miss Mary Core, Miss Natalie Core, Miss Elizabeth Scrivener, Mrs. Wallace Dempsey and many more.

U. S. Population Is Increasing In Wrong Places, Baker Says

Agriculture Expert Declares Germany Turned Nazi as Result of Conditions Like Those in Southern Mountains

Nazi Germany sprang from such conditions as exist in the Appalachian Mountain section of the South, Dr. O. E. Baker, population expert of the Department of Agriculture, told members of the Congress of Parents and Teachers yesterday. Addressing the final day's session of the Third Parent-Teacher Institute at George Washington University, he declared the future of the country was threatened by the increase of population in those sections where no provision is made for adequate educational facilities or means of livelihood and its decrease in urban sections among families at the peak of the economic structure.

His talk was at once a warning that those with the benefit of education and security must recognize their responsibility for perpetuating the morality, mental ability and social attainment to which they have been born, and that equal opportunities must be extended to forgotten groups of the American people.

Living standards in some of the mountain sections, said Dr. Baker are comparable to those of the Yangzte Valley in China—and it is there population is increasing. Where there were five or six children in a school in 1929, there are 30 or 40 today although farms which had 11 acres of crop ground in 1929 have deteriorated so there are but 6 or 7 now.

Pointing out the great disparity in educational opportunities, he said South Carolina would be obliged to use every resource at its command to provide for its population opportunities anywhere near on a par with those of California. Young people there are without training for jobs or means of obtaining work. This blot on the country cannot be isolated, he added for people of these sections eventually reach the cities where things look brighter bringing with them the problems bred of poverty and ignorance.

"The salvation of the race lies in quality rather than quantity," said Dr. Baker. "The hope of the future is in those families at the peak of the economic structure who recognize their responsibility to the past and to the future."

Dean James Harold Fox of the university also addressed the session, emphasizing the importance of well-rounded education for the child. "The home," he said, "is still the most important educational institution."

The afternoon session was devoted to talks by Parent-Teacher members on projects of individual units and of the congress as a body. Plans were also announced for a study group for leaders, to be held at the university for ten weeks, beginning December 7.

G. O. P. Women Hold Luncheon

Republican women are on the march, Miss Marion E. Martin told a group of them yesterday. She addressed the first luncheon of the season given by the League of Republican Women at its clubhouse, 1301 Seventeenth street.

Home from trips covering virtually the entire country, Miss Martin, vice chairman of the Republican National Committee, reported a membership of 200,000 in the year-old National Federation of Republican Women's Clubs.

Attacking the plea to "drop politics," she declared that no democracy can work under a one-party system. This, she said, would deny all democratic rights.

Miss Martin was guest at the luncheon of Mrs. Edward E. Gann, league president, who also entertained Miss Alicia Kay Smith, of Augusta, Me. Mrs. Virginia White Speel, founder and first president of the league, had as her guests Mrs. Ernest Humphrey Daniel, president of the District Federation of Women's Clubs and Mrs. Thomas H. C. Reed. Among those in a large party entertained by Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman were Lady Broderick and Mme. Aino de Bodisco.

Among other members who entertained guests were Mrs. Sophie Pearce Casey, Miss Daisy M. Prentice, Mrs. William Walter Smith, Miss Sophie Kent.

Party to Hear Noted Etcher

Mrs. Minnie L. Briggs, Washington etcher and water-color artist, will be the guest of honor and principal speaker at the regular weekly luncheon being held at Opportunity House tomorrow at 1:30 p. m.

Mrs. Robert C. Horner, known in the literary field as Josephine Craven Chandler, and a member of the board of directors of Opportunity House, will serve as hostess.

Mrs. Horner has just returned from Illinois, where she was the honor guest at several functions given by the Illinois Pen Women.

Mrs. Briggs, nationally known for her etchings, will illustrate for her audience how etchings are made.

Sunday she will open an exhibition of prints at the studio of the District League of American Pen Women in the Grafton Hotel, to be on display the first two weeks of this month. She will receive at tea for the opening from 3 to 6 o'clock.

A collection of 30 prints will be hung, including a group of old houses, among which are those of poets and sculptors—Keats at Wentworth House, London, writing his "Ode to the Nightingale" under the mulberry tree, and the birthplace of the sculptor, Daniel Chester French, Exeter, N. H.

There is also one of the tree under which Sidney Lanier wrote his "Marshes of Glynn," and another of old trees at the Chancellor's House, American University.

Mrs. Lawson, Past President of Women's Clubs Federation, Stopping Over Here

MRS. ROBERTA CAMPBELL LAWSON, immediate past president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, is here from her home in Tulsa, Okla., for a brief stay on her way to Plainfield N. J., to be the guest of Harriet Ware, noted composer. Mrs. Lawson and Mrs. Ware share a common interest in music as well as in organization work.

Mrs. Lawson yesterday afternoon entertained the members of the General Federation headquarters staff at an informal tea at the Mayflower Hotel, where she is staying and had luncheon at the A. A. U. W. clubhouse as the guest of Miss Marie Obenhauer.

She has been busy in Tulsa during the last few months, working as a trustee of the new Philbrook museum and art center for which Mr. and Mrs. Wade Phillips gave their $1,500,000 home plus $50,000 to turn it into a museum. A drive was instituted to match the $50,000 in contributions from Tulsa citizens and they made it $60,000—just like that. The mansion stands on a 23-acre plot where the art center will be established.

ON THE WING—Mrs. Sadie Orr Dunbar, present General Federation president, is also concerned with a civic project at this moment. She flew to her home in Portland, Oreg., and, on Wednesday was present for the dedication of a new tuberculosis hospital, which she was instrumental in securing for the city. She will remain for a week's visit with her daughter before returning East.

ANOTHER VISITOR — While we're on federation news, the visit of Mrs. John D. Robinson, of Wallace, N. C., Wednesday, should not be overlooked. She is president of the North Carolina State Federation of Women's Clubs, and was the dinner guest of Mrs. Edgar Briant Meritt, former national radio chairman, on her way home from the Herald-Tribune forum.

Mrs. Hull to Be Democrat Guest

Mrs. Cordell Hull, wife of the Secretary of State, will be the guest of honor tomorrow from 4:30 to 6 at a tea to be given by the Women's National Democratic Club at its clubhouse at 1526 New Hampshire avenue. Mrs. Hull has been active in the affairs of the club for many years, and a large attendance of members is expected.

Receiving with the guest of honor will be Mrs. Sumner Welles, Mrs. Henry F. Grady, Miss Jennie Moore and Mrs. Breckenridge Long. Mrs. John B. Gordon will make the introductions. Mrs. Edward B. Meigs, chairman of the hospitality committee of the club, has asked the following members to be assistant hostesses: Mrs. W. Woodward Cook, sister of Mrs. Hull; Mrs. Henry Coit MacLean, Mrs. Dwight Webb, Mrs. Fulton Brylawski, Mrs. Augustus Lonergan, Mrs. R. C. Fulbright and Mrs. Sarah Major Cook.

Presiding at the tea table during the afternoon will be: Mrs. Preston Delano, Mrs. J. Bruce Kramer, Mrs. Howell Moorhead, Miss Cornelia Bassel, Mrs. Mary Buford and Mrs. James H. Patton.

Club activities scheduled for next week are the membership luncheon on Monday at 12:30 and a dinner Thursday evening at 7:30, with Representative Jerry Voorhis, of California, as guest speaker, and Mrs. Voorhis and Mr. and Mrs. Edward J. Noble and other honor guests. Representative Voorhis will speak on the "Problem of America's Migrant Families."

D. C. Guards Against Harm By Dynamite

Connecticut Avenue Citizens Are Told Of Precautions to Protect Property

Harold Kemp, chief engineer of the Department of Sanitary Engineering of the District, declared last night that "every precaution" is being taken to safeguard dwellings from blasting damage in the construction of the Rock Creek diversion sewer. He spoke at the meeting of the Connecticut Avenue Citizens Association in All Souls Episcopal Church, Woodley place and Cathedral avenue northwest.

Dynamite charges are limited so that ground vibrations are cut to a minimum, "in reality less than the usual street traffic vibrations," Kemp said. He pointed out that air pressure caused by explosion of the dynamite might conceivably cause cracked windows, but that damage to building structures is "practically impossible."

Blasting between 10 p. m. and 7 a. m. has been stopped at the seven points where dynamite is at present being set off, he said. It will continue during the remaining hours for the next six or seven months until the structure is completed.

"Although there is little likelihood of damage resulting, any persons who believe they are suffering property damage should make their complaints to the District government, and investigators will immediately be sent to their homes," Kemp said. He illustrated his talk with a machine for measuring vibrations.

The association adopted two resolutions. The Community Center Department of public schools was requested to continue instruction in social activities after school. The light and power commission was requested to place more street lights in the 2700 block of Macomb street northwest.

Washington Highlands

John G. Juergen was elected president of the Washington Highlands Citizens Association at its meeting last night. John Robey was elected first vice president, and Maury T. Warren, second vice president.

Other officers elected included Mrs. Jesse M. Hildebrand, secretary; Mrs. Roy Clark, treasurer; C. J. Wall and W. E. Mair, delegates to the federation.

A. V. Schreiber, safety engineer for the Capital Transit Co., discussed the importance of pedestrian control.

Bradbury Heights

The Bradbury Heights Citizens Association last night was addressed by C. A. Wood, president of the Benning Citizens Association, who spoke on the smoke nuisance along the Anacostia River.

278 More Needed In Y.M.C.A. Drive

With a total of 922 new members enrolled in the Central Young Men's Christian Association's current membership campaign, an additional 278 are now needed to reach the goal of 1,200 new members by the time the campaign closes next Tuesday.

This was announced at a meeting last night of campaign workers in the Y. M. C. A. Building, 1736 G street northwest, where 271 members were reported signed up since last Friday.

Last night's meeting heard the Freund Singers, led by Robert Frederick Freund, and guitar and vocal selections by Jack Dalton, "Radio's Singing Cowboy." Solos were sung by Miss Norma Calvert and John Wilson of the Freund Singers.

Capital News In Brief

Stork Tempers Justice

William F. Miller, colored, won his race with the stork but not with Motorcycle Patrolman O. T. Disharoon.

In Traffic Court yesterday, Disharoon said he paced Miller October 2 at 60 miles an hour along Pennsylvania avenue northwest, saw him run through two red lights, and then pulled him up to the curb at Maryland avenue northeast. Learning Miller was rushing his sister to an engagement with the stork, he paced him to Gallinger Hospital, where the baby was born 15 minutes after arrival.

Everything considered, Judge John P. McMahon suspended sentence on charges of speeding and passing traffic lights.

Lose a Bird Bath?

Police of Eighth Precinct had an involuntary scavenger hunt yesterday and cluttered up their station house with belongings of citizens scattered throughout Chevy Chase by Halloween pranksters.

Nearly a score of residents reported property missing and many found it at the station, where cruising policemen had taken it. Last night nothing remained but a bird bath and a ladder, both unclaimed.

Rabbi Metz to Talk

"No Fuehrers Need Apply" will be Rabbi Solomon H. Metz' theme for tonight's B'nai B'rith Sabbath services at Adas Israel Synagogue. Seymour S. Guthman, president of the local B'nai B'rith lodge, will lead a forum on "American Jewry Looks Forward."

Loses Purse, $70

A small change purse containing $70 was lost from a pocketbook belonging to Mrs. Thomas O'Brien, of 516 Varnum street northwest, somewhere between her home and Catholic University yesterday she reported to police.

Our Town

Named for Cannon-Maker Foxall, Conduit Rd. Area Became Foxhall in Christening Error

Airview of Foxhall Village—though it spells his name wrong—named for Henry Foxall, confidant of Presidents. (1) Rosalie Hardy School, (2) Foxhall road, (3) Conduit road

By Christine Sadler.

When cannon-maker Henry Foxall wished to get away from the Georgetown din at his home below the C. & O. Canal, on present-day Thirty-fourth street, he called out the horses and rode into what is now Foxhall Village.

He passed his foundry at the edge of town, behind Georgetown College, and kept going "about a mile" to Spring Hill Farm. There, on a hill above the Potomac Palisades, he had a large frame house with long galleries both upstairs and down.

At various times during his long career, Presidents Jefferson, Madison and Monroe sat on the upper gallery with him—looking across at the Virginia countryside and discussed the state of the Union. Occasionally, he and Jefferson tried out some violin duets, and once the tinker-minded Jefferson persuaded him to experiment with an air-tight stove.

Different Spelling

That the name of the illustrious foundryman should be perpetuated in an incorrect spelling does not provoke his pleasant great-great-granddaughters—the Misses Margaret and Ethelyn Shoemaker and Mrs. Horace Walton—but they never have seen why the "h" was thought necessary.

"They told us they went back to the original for the spelling," the Misses Shoemaker said yesterday at their home at 3121 O street, "but we don't know exactly where they went. Henry Foxall came to Georgetown in 1799, and he did not use the spelling."

The great-great-granddaughters are not afraid the memory of their ancestor will be lost to the town. In addition to the subdivision and a road, it is made permanent in the Foundry Methodist Church, Foundry Branch and Foundry Parkway. This is probably the record in all the District of Columbia.

Harry K. Boss, of the real estate firm which pioneered in the Foxhall Village development—which many consider the most charming and completed subdivision set-up in town—recalled yesterday that his company operated its own transportation system into the area from Western High School for five years.

Began in 1925

"We began work in 1925 and it took us five years to get it completed. The area was so situated that at that time there was no regular bus or street car service to the area," he said yesterday. "Traces of the old Foxall home could be seen at that time near the corner of what is now Foxhall road and P street, on the east side of the road."

Approximately 750 residents live in the 200 houses of the compact original village today. They have their own citizens association, headed by R. W. Bell, of 4409 Greenwich parkway, and take considerable pride in the parkway appearance of their neighborhood. If it had not been for the Spring Valley development out by American University, their section might have been called Spring Hill—as it was in Foxall's time.

Foxhall road and another historic thoroughfare, Conduit road, stretch away to the west through a large, wooded, and partially developed area marked by small up-to-date suburban sections and by the more concentrated build-up along Conduit road.

This old road has run out to the Dalecarlia Reservoir ever since the city had a water supply, but only in recent years has it been a top-notch, hard-surfaced highway. It is built with the parkway down the center, in order that automobiles may not run over the conduit run beneath.

Beautiful Scenery

Running parallel with Conduit road, and worth anybody's trip over them, are Potomac avenue and Canal road. Those who travel that way this week-end will be treated to autumn scenery and views that would elicit many "oh's" and "ah's"—if farther from home. The Potomac Palisades are entirely different from anything to be found elsewhere in the city.

Only river, canal and wooded bluffs are visible, with occasional old canal and river houses thrown in for good picturesque measure. Hikers go that way in great numbers to reach Cabin John, but surprisingly few others make the trip except to reach old Chain Bridge and these usually fail to take a ride under the canal to see the river and boat houses at the Potomac's edge. To reach the home across the canal from 4219 Canal road, the visitor must climb steps to the water and whistle for the "skiff" to be brought across for him.

On a choice location above the two lowland roads is the Palisades Playground, in the field house of which the Conduit Road Citizens Association holds its meetings.

"Lettuce Patch" Section

This association, one of the most active in the federation, is approximately 25 years old. It has around 400 members on its rolls and is headed by Grady P. Oakley, of 5042 Conduit road.

"Twenty-five years ago much of our territory was covered by truck gardens and we still have an area we call the 'lettuce patch' section," Oakley said yesterday.

He estimated that the greatest amount of building going on in the community today was in the Reservoir road area from Ashby street to Foxhall road. Numerous apartments have been built and opened along Conduit road within the past few years, and many homes. Klingle road and Norton street are being cut through at the present time.

Schools serving two areas are the Francis Scott Key, on Hearst terrace and Dana place, and the Rosalie Hardy on Foxhall road near Volta place. The Key School bears the name of one of Henry Foxall's early neighbors in Georgetown, and since the Key Mansion is not preserved joins with Key Bridge in being the leading local monuments to the author of the national anthem.

With so many natural advantages in their area and with roads being opened right and left, the Conduit road citizens are worrying most about getting a new library building to replace the old structure on Conduit road near Nebraska avenue.

"Also," Oakley said, "we are trying to have Weaver street opened through to town."

Greenbelt Gets 12-Foot Statue Of Madonna With Child

Greenbelt's first major work of art took shape yesterday as workmen put together a 12-ton Madonna and Child statue in the shopping center of the Government's low-cost housing development.

The sculptress was Miss Lenore Thomas, of 1633 P street northwest, an $80 a month District WPA artist. She spent a year on the task of chiseling the two giant figures out of Indiana limestone. The work was done outdoors in the yard of a friend at Accokeek, Md.

A series of relief sculptures on the walls of the elementary school, depicting the preamble to the Constitution, also are the work of Miss Thomas. A graduate of the Chicago Art Institute, she has been sculpturing about 10 years.

The Madonna is 12 feet high and rests on a 4-foot base. The child, a mere nine feet tall, is depicted being given a drink of water from a glass held in His mother's hand.

Miss Thomas also pointed out that the statue was carved with a view to the climbing instincts of most youngsters—and there are hundreds of them at Greenbelt.

"I had to think of the possibility that children might hurt themselves if there were any sharp points at the bottom. So it was necessary to round off the edges and make it very plain," she said.

The statue arrived in three sections, four cubic feet each. Under the direction of Edward Deline, who supervised the placement of the Unknown Soldier's Tomb and the Ericsson Memorial, the solid blocks of stone were swung into position with a crane.

Greenbelt officials said formal dedication exercises would be held in the next several days.

Baptists Told Salvation Is First Concern

1,200 Hear Dr. Truett Evangelist, Pastor Of Church's Largest Charge, Speak Here

Twelve hundred men and women, including many fellow Texans, last night heard Dr. George W. Truett, pastor of the world's largest Baptist Church, and former president of the Baptist World Alliance, declare soul-saving "the foremost business of Christians."

Overflowing the auditorium of the National Baptist Memorial Church, Sixteenth and Columbia road northwest, they were told of the "glorious results" that would come, nationally, internationally, locally and in individual churches and hearts, "if that ideal were lived up to by Christians."

Pastor of the First Baptist Church, Dallas, Tex., for 42 years, and friend of Vice President Garner, Dr. Truett yesterday offered the invocation opening the Senate's session as guest of its chaplain, Dr. Ze Barney Phillips.

Representative Hatton W. Sumners (Democrat), of Texas, was in last night's audience.

The clergyman is addressing a series of evangelistic meetings in the evenings at National Baptist Memorial Church, and at noon at the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, Saturdays excepted.

The cleric was introduced by Dr. Gove C. Johnson, whose pastorate of 25 years at National Memorial Baptist is now being celebrated.

Girl Victim Of Collington Accident Dies

Miss Hazel Sollers, 17, of 67 Quincy street northwest, died in Casualty Hospital last night where she had been taken by the Glenn Dale Rescue Squad after an accident near Collington, Md., October 2. An autopsy will be held today.

Joseph Koestler, 71, of 4138 Twenty-second street northeast, was in a critical condition in Sibley Hospital after being struck down while boarding a trolley at Twentieth street and Rhode Island avenue northeast. In serious condition in Casualty Hospital was Pascal Barber, 38, of Fayettesville, N. C., struck at Sixth and G street northwest by a car police said was operated by James A. Deal, 26, of 1413 T street northwest.

While chasing a speeding automobile, Motorcycle Policeman Herbert C. Wright, 32, of 616 Quebec place northwest, was hit by an automobile at Fourth and Bryant streets northwest.

Former D. C. Cadet Wins Hero's Medal

The Army yesterday awarded the Soldier's Medal to three United States Military Academy cadets—one a former Washingtonian—for heroism in rescuing a comrade from drowning.

They were Charles S. Brice, jr., son of an Army man who formerly lived at 6709 Georgia avenue; Victor S. Zienowics, and William N. Holm. The three went to the rescue of another cadet last May 28, when their canoe upset in the Hudson River.

Winter's Prelude:

4,000 Thrill to Color, Rhythm Of Capital's First Ice Follies

Washington last night saw a new kind of show, when the swift flash of ice skates was blended with color, rhythm, beauty and all the classic laughs and thrills of vaudeville before nearly 4,000 persons at the Riverside Stadium.

Diplomats, legislators, local and national officials and civic and social leaders were in the crowd that applauded Washington's first showing of a musical extravaganza on skates, the "Ice Follies of 1940."

Favorites of ballroom and stage appeared in the spectacles and specialties, transformed into new grace by the swift rhythm of the skates. There was precise and complicated choreography in "Manhattan Midnight," grace in the "Swing Waltz," staccato syncopation, and romance in Cuban and Gypsy dances, and an ample supply of rhythmic and ridiculous burlesque.

Feast for the Senses

Red, yellow, gold, blue and silver costumes, music and swiftly flying bodies thrilled the senses, and the comic Scarecrow of Oz gave endless satisfaction to the lovers of other's falls.

A trick skater jumped through fire and cleared hurdles by a hair's breadth with legs bent double; acrobats in costumes of the mustache cup days hurled each other mockingly across the ice, and the show took on in turn the flavors of the Army, the college, and the hill-billy Alps.

The show, brought to Washington by its originators, Oscar F. Johnson, Edwin H. Shipstad, and Roy L. Shipstad, is here for as long as Washington likes it, they said. The trio created the first "Ice Follies" in 1932, and still take leading parts in its own productions.

Diplomats Attend

Other skating stars in the show were Ruby and Bobby Maxson, Les Hamilton, Le Verne, Bess Ehrhardt, Osborne Colson, the McKellen Brothers, Harris Legg, Evelyn Chandler, Bruce Mapes, Heinie Brock, Fran Claudet, Karl Zwack, Idi Papez, and Frick and Frack, while five times the ensemble of 25 "ice queens" danced in different moods.

Among the most enthusiastic spectators was Madame de Morgenstierne, wife of the minister from Norway. Sonja Henie's homeland; and the entire Minnesota delegation in Congress appeared, as most of the ice artists in the cast were from that State. Diplomats were also there from Ecuador, Venezuela, Portugal, Thailand (Siam), Eire (Ireland), Egypt, Honduras, Mexico, Panama, Bolivia and Poland, and a score of other Congressmen and Government officials.

Bladensburg Sewage Plant Contract Let

Washington Firm Submits Low Bid Of $678,888.90 For PWA Project

The Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission yesterday announced award of a contract for a sewage treatment plant near Bladensburg, Md., to clear the Anacostia River "to a large extent" of pollution.

The contract was given, subject to approval of the PWA, to the Washington firm of Charles H. Tompkins, which submitted low bid of $678,888.90.

Chief Engineer Harry Hall explained that the plant would take care of the primary treatment of sewage. An additional unit, for secondary treatment, he said, probably would be built within the next two years.

To be located on the east bank of the Anacostia about one-half mile south of the Bladensburg Peace Cross, the plant must be completed by next July 1, under regulations of the PWA, which will furnish 45 per cent of the cost. The commission's share will be financed through bond issues. About $200,000 for the purpose already is on hand, Hall said.

The commission also is studying bids for the construction of two sewage pumping stations, one in Hyattsville on the northwest branch of the Anacostia and the other in Colmar Manor. The following offers have been received:

Peter D'Adamo, of Baltimore, $57,889; W. C. Sptatt, of Fredericksburg, Va., $64,800; the Suburban Engineering Co. of New York City, $67,484, and the Tuller Construction Co., of Red Bank, N. J., $75,440.

Catholic Oratory Subject Chosen

The subject for the eighth annual oratorical contest for students of Catholic schools of the Washington-Baltimore archdiocese will be "My Personal Views on the Vocation of the Priesthood, or the Brotherhood, or the Sisterhood," it was announced yesterday by the Right Rev. Mgr. Louis C. Vaeth, at the meeting of the Catholic University Clerical Conference, sponsor of the contest.

The Rev. John McGee, C. S. G., vice president of the conference, will be general chairman of the sponsor's committee.

Representatives will be selected through elimination contests in schools. The winners in the five districts of the archdiocese will meet in the finals at Catholic University next spring.

Scary Doings Are Afoot on Capitol Screen

'Cat and Canary' Is Mystery Thriller; Jackie Heller Sings

"THE CAT AND THE CANARY." Paramount picturization of the stage play by John Willard, adapted to the screen by Walter De Leon and Lynn Starling, starring Bob Hope with Paulette Goddard. John Beal, Douglass Montgomery, Gale Sondergaard, Elizabeth Patterson, Nydia Westman, George Zucco, John Wray and George Regas. Directed by Elliott Nugent. Reviewed Thursday afternoon. At the Capitol Theater.

Plunking wise-cracker Bob Hope down in a whacky, eerie mansion of the bayou country was a smart idea. The comic is enlivening "The Cat and the Canary" no end in the Capitol's new bill as of yesterday, while Jackie Heller's songs headline the stage program.

Sliding panels, hairy hands and finger nails that would make "The Women" reach for more Jungle Red may merely frighten an audience, but they terrify Bob to the roots of his thatch and he makes no attempt to conceal his misery. He plays himself, a likeable radio actor, a member of a family summoned to the reading of the will of an insane man ten years dead. Bob finds it distasteful and says so.

When strange sounds suggest to the ghastly housekeeper the approach of spirits Bob says, "O. K. with me. Put mine in a glass."

But there are many better than that which we will leave for Hope to spout, but if it should have nothing else in its favor, "The Cat and the Canary" is guaranteed to keep one's mind on the dark, shuttered house in the bayous. Pretty word, bayous, but in the blackness of the night that Louisiana swampside is no place for a retiring soul with a weak heart.

A Jittery Gathering

Paulette Goddard is the heiress with all sorts of allurements, the most worldly of which is the fabulous diamond necklace she and Hope discover in the garden. John Beal is the grumpy young fellow who feels that he has the short end of the wishbone. Nydia Westman is the young cousin who must hold her hand on her nose to keep from screaming. Douglass Montgomery is Paulette's anxious lover. Elizabeth Patterson cackles as Nydia's frightened mother. They are, indeed, a household of jittery bipeds.

Stirring this bundle of nerves, like a witch without a broom, is Gale Sondergaard, peering and appearing with the silence of a submarine. She was at the bedside of the departed Norman and she has kept the old home the way he would have wanted it. He being the gent whom Hope declares was so crooked that when they buried him they had to screw him into the earth.

Elliott Nugent, who was in the original stage production, has directed with an eye to preserving the original blood with the happy addition of the Hope salt.

Jackie Heller Scores

The Capitol stage show is nothing to light bonfires for, but it does present Jackie Heller, proving that some of the songs we have heard again and again still can be made interesting. The minute bundle of vitality whips his tenor into such favorites as "Comes Love," which he introduced in "Yokel Boy;" the "Beer Barrel Polka," which he made as palatable as the real thing, and "Over the Rainbow," with the Heller tones and the Judy Garland gestures. Yesterday's enthusiastic first house lapped up the "South of the Border" it forced him to add to his group.

From the Rainbow Room of Radio City the Intime Ballet brings its choreography for Ravel's "Bolero" and Cole Porter's "Begin the Beguine." The Four Franks offer songs and dances in speed plus, and the Radio Ramblers imitate the famous and infamous. The Rhythm Rockets present three routines.

"Jerome Kern Melodies" is the orchestra's overture, one that will keep the feet tapping. A Fox-Movietone Magic Carpet describes the rugged beauties of the State of Washington. RICHARD L. COE.

Columbia

"The Rains Came" is a title suggesting only a fraction of an overwhelming story. With the tropical rains come earthquake, flood, passion and the plague (last two not synonymous).

The rich quality of Louis Bromfield's best seller has been effectively transmitted to the screen. Certain minor characters do not appear as importantly as in the novel, but practically all of them find their way on the screen. The multifarious life of India, its individual tragedies of white and dark-skinned races caught in the cogs of social evolution, reflect the modern view of what is occurring in the Orient.

The seething, all-devouring flood of "The Rains Came" belongs in the category of the earthquake in "San Francisco" and the tropical storm of "The Hurricane." Again, at the Columbia this week, you see the great dam shudder and crack as the mighty waters burst through, the impact of mighty masses of water on an ancient Indian city, the crashing of walls, the collapse of buildings into the maw of the swirling deluge.

Has Superlative Cast

Unimpeachable acting by Hollywood's finest combines to give the depth and breadth of the Bromfield conception. Myrna Loy, as that exquisite sinner, Lady Esketch enters a new field not to be compared with the brash sirens of her earlier movie days. She's not so much the siren as an elegant piece of deliberate wickedness.

George Brent lightens his role of half-way waster with well-conceived comedy. Also he's better-looking, or has been photographed more skilfully, than in other recent pictures. Tyrone Power is too handsome again in this one, all done up in brocade coats, turbans and even strings of pearls. There's also a newcomer, Brenda Joyce, who's remarkably fine as a confused but determined young girl.

All of the best character talent of the West Coast seems to have been poured into the corollary characters. You'll find the glossy artificiality of Joseph Schildkraut, the polished genuineness of H. B. Warner. Topping the list is that superb old lady, Maria Ouspenskaya, as the poker-playing Maharani. Nigel Bruce is a full-blooded, brutal English financier. Marjorie Rambeau (reduced to a feather) and Laura Hope Crews are a pair of the shallower English ladies.

Bob Benchley's "The Day of Rest" provides a chuckling let-down from the tenseness of the feature. Also serving the cause of comedy are the "Three Stooges." The newsreel is divided between the war and football. MARY HARRIS.

'Hollywood Cavalcade' Brings Back 'Good Old Days,' at Loew's Palace

Alice Faye and Don Ameche Costar In Nostalgic Film Of Movies' Growth

"HOLLYWOOD CAVALCADE." Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of a story by Hilary Lynn and Brown Holmes, adapted to the screen by Ernest Pascal, costarring Alice Faye and Don Ameche, with J. Edward Bromberg, Alan Curtis, Stuart Erwin, Jed Prouty, Buster Keaton, Donald Meek, George Givot, Eddie Collins, Hank Mann, Heinie Conklin, James Finlayson, Willie Fung, Russell Hicks, Mary Forbes, Ben Turpin, Chester Conklin, Marjorie Beebe, Frederick Burton, Irving Bacon and scores more. Directed by Irving Cummings. At Loew's Palace Theater.

It is possible to catch up on almost a lifetime of moviegoing at Loew's Palace Theater this week. "Hollywood Cavalcade" describes itself with fair comprehensiveness by its title. It traces the development of the art—if that is what it is—of motion picture production from the jerky, low-comedy days of the early nineteen-teens to the comparatively recent time when sound and dialogue became an indispensable factor in screen entertainment.

BELL

As a corollary of this nostalgic panorama of the emergence of a new form of "theater," this handsomely executed Technicolor kaleidoscope traces the turbulent romance of the young Hollywood "prop" boy, who became the greatest producer of his day, and the rising young understudy he proselyted from the Broadway stage to the West Coast picture lots. Into the progress of this story of deflected love have been woven strands of the lives of many of Hollywood's great who are never named and never more than thinly disguised. The sum total of effect is that of a long and richly reminiscent vista of the years that are gone, unreeling itself before the eyes.

Founded, at least in part, upon the career of Mack Sennett, the early sequences of "Hollywood Cavalcade" bring back to life all of the factors that contributed to the king of comedy's rise to fame and fortune. There are the priceless, slapstick pie-throwing orgies, the Keystone Kops and their stupendous chases, the bathing beauties and all the rest of the claptrap that was looked upon as the last word in hilarious fun in its day. And it was fun. Better than that, it still is.

Many Originals Survive

A considerable number of the original participants have been recruited again for the resurrection of these Sennett extravagances, but not all in the roles which they originally played. The late Ford Sterling, for example, has been replaced by Jed Prouty as the chief of police, and Eddie Collins fills the shoes once worn by Charlie Murray. Buster Keaton, on the other hand, appears as himself and recalls the lunacy of his heyday by deadpan methods that never have been equaled, let alone excelled. And Lee Duncan occupies his own particular niche, too, by trying to sell Rin-Tin-Tin, jr., as a star, in place of his famous grandpappy. Jimmy Finlayson is another who dates back to the era of the play's disclosures, and makes it still further lamentable that the "good old days" are gone—probably forever. And Marjorie Beebe, as the telephone operator, is another. Heigho.

But there is a more serious side to "Hollywood Cavalcade," too. Through its disclosures, one is able to follow the miraculous development of the "movie" into a towering giant of world entertainment. The technical aspects of film progress are a vital element in the plot of the picture. It amounts almost to a complete course of instruction in technique.

The variant moods of the film find full expression by a cast that has caught the spirit of the piece with remarkable fidelity. Don Ameche, as the ambitious young director, who becomes more or less the cinema's "problem child," and Alice Faye, as the actress who wins her way to the top from a splashy, pastry beginning, are about what any sagacious doctor would have ordered to stimulate jaded celluloid appetites. J. Edward Bromberg, as the "money man" in the production scheme, is equally potent in the dramatics of the play. Alan Curtis is the handsome young "star," who steals Molly Adair right out from under the nose of Michael Linnett Connors, and Stuart Erwin is important as the cameraman, who follows Connors from obscurity to the world's spotlight. There are hordes more who contribute to the effectiveness of a "lowdown" on pictures that is as illuminating as it is interesting, among them Donald Meek, Mary Forbes, Joseph Crehan and the others whose names appear in small type at the head of this column.

Another Technicolor Triumph

"Hollywood Cavalcade," furthermore, demonstrates again Technicolor's increasing capacity for lending realistic beauty to any screen play. The color treatment always is in harmony with the mood and tempo of the scene to which it is applied. In this particular instance, that represents a tremendous flexibility and enormously wide range.

The supplementary attractions at the Palace this week are led by Pete Smith's timely "Let's Talk Turkey"—isn't this the month we have two or three Thanksgivings?—and "A Day at Treasure Island," one of the FitzPatrick natural color subjects, having to do with you know what.

The "News of the Day" is the final auxiliary of a feature that will awaken happy memories in the minds of all who feel that a composite of all motion pictures they ever have seen ought to be an item of major interest and entertainment. You "old-timers" will eat it up—custard pies and all!

The Trail of the Lonesome Pie!

ALICE FAYE

as she appears after having stopped a custard pie with her face in one of the "Mack Sennett" sequences in Twentieth Century Fox's picturization of "Hollywood Cavalcade," which yesterday opened its first Washington engagement on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater. Don Ameche, Buster Keaton, George Givot, the Keystone Kops and many others also are involved in this panorama of picture-making

In Hollywood

Hollywood, Nov. 2.

It's so seldom that relief, instead of grief, comes to you when a great friend passes away. But interwoven with sadness is joy that at last Alice Brady has found surcease from pain. We've had few souls as gallant as Alice. Her mother was a Spanish dancer. You all know that her father is as Irish as a four-leaf clover and is William Brady, a fighter from the moment he opened his eyes.

HOPPER

Alice inherited from both. Could, and did, many times lick her weight in wildcats, except when her heart was touched; then she was as pliable as a new-born baby. For years we've known she was suffering from an incurable disease. We hated to form the dread word cancer even in our minds, and for her sake we carried on the illusion that she wasn't even ill. She hasn't been without pain for years.

Her happiness came from finally getting a few roles she felt suitable to her. One was "In Old Chicago" and the other was her last—"Young Mr. Lincoln." I talked with her just after she'd come back from a p. a. in Springfield, Ill., for opening of that picture. And her indignation over the fact that Marian Anderson wasn't permitted to stop at the same hotel was something to see. Alice had never heard her before, but when she'd finished singing, Alice said: "I just had to get up and shout. She moved me so terribly." And to think that an artist like that was barred because of color!

What a flood of memories come racing through the years. Alice was De Wolf Hopper's prima donna in the Gilbert and Sullivan operas the year I was married. Singing opposite her was John Charles Thomas. You may think the youth of today has it all over those people; but you're wrong. As the shepherd and shepherdess in "Iolanthe" they looked as though they'd stepped from the frame of an old master. And the fact that Thomas' voice today is one of our finest, proves that it was good 25 years ago. Now, after all these years, when her career's finished, he's just about to make his first picture.

Alice was a tomboy. No party was complete without her. She was full of life, fun. Generous to a fault. Her heart was never touched until she met Jimmy Crane, son of Dr. Frank Crane who called himself a reformed minister and wrote a syndicated daily column. Jim always was a wild boy. I knew him in his home and toured a season with him in Edgar Selwyn's "Country Boy." His first wife committed suicide. So when I heard Alice was interested in him (she was starring at the Playhouse in New York), I went to her dressing room and told her everything I knew about Jimmy—wouldn't you know I would? It wasn't complimentary. One week later they were married.

Two weeks later I started a picture with him in which Billie Burke starred. Those were the days when the assistant director came to us and said: "Please don't speak to Miss Burke, unless she speaks to you first." We didn't! Naturally, Jimmy was annoyed with me. I didn't blame him. But when I explained it was my love for Alice that prompted me to do it, he said: "Of course I understand."

After the first year of their marriage, Alice had a son. Believe he's in an institution in Pasadena. He never quite understood that she was his mother, and when he talked, which was seldom, called her Miss Brady. Following the divorce, which happened soon after the birth of the baby, I ran into Alice and she's the first one who ever used this expression. I've read it many times since, heard it in plays. But when I said to her that it was just too bad all this sorrow had happen to her, Alice said: "Listen darling, I had a year of almost perfect happiness. And that's more than most women ever get; I'm satisfied."

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, Nov. 2.

ANXIETY: Opponents of a third term for Roosevelt have placed much store by the declarations of Mrs. James Roosevelt, the President's mother, that she is opposed to a third term . . . What isn't generally known is the fact that the venerable lady was opposed even to a first term, feeling that the worries attendant upon the office always have aged the occupant . . . In November, 1932, after Roosevelt's election, Eddie Dowling visited the family at Hyde Park and asked the President's mother; "Well, how do you like having a son become President?" . . . Mrs. Roosevelt replied: "For the life of me I cannot understand why he wants the job."

ERA: Grover Whalen, in his dispatches to the New York World's Fair from abroad, has confessed to something which will mark the end of an era in New York . . . Starting this week in Switzerland and then forevermore—because of the razzing he received—Whalen never again will wear a gardenia.

WAR: They're now telling of four Britishers who were called before the army officials. The first begged off, because of a bad heart . . . The second asked to be excused from service because he had a broken leg . . . The third claimed exemption because he had a wife and five children to support . . . The fourth, however, said: "Get me a gun and put me in the front lines right away. I don't care if they kill me. Just give me a gun—and put me right in the first trench" . . . "Congratulations, my good man," said the officer, "you'll go immediately" . . . "Immediately?" the man said. "Say—don't you even think I'm crazy?"

MYSTERY: A feature writer for a local newspaper was assigned to write a story about historic events in New York. Among the stories to which he referred was the famous explosion in Wall Street. After hours of search, however, he could find none of the clippings in the newspaper morgue . . . He phoned the paper's librarian and told him: "I've looked everywhere for the clips about the Wall Street explosion. Do you know what happened to them?" . . . "You didn't look everywhere," the librarian corrected. "You didn't look under the section marked 'Mishaps'."

CHATTER: A Federal Grand Jury is investigating a possibility of jury bribing in the early trials of the Barb case—which involved millions of dollars in a using-the-mails-to-defraud conviction. Secretary Ickes' son is in charge of the investigation . . . Harry Sweeny, jr., Park Department aide who helped Commissioner Moses draw his short-lived housing program last year, was mentioned yesterday as a possible choice for the chairmanship of the N. Y. C. Housing Authority . . . a preliminary canvass made in Albany indicates that County Judge Martin will be acquitted in the removal hearing.

LOSS: Jervase Huxley, cousin of Aldous Huxley, arrived from England yesterday bringing with him a copy of the English edition of C. V. R. Thompson's "I Lost My English Accent" . . . When the ship sailed from Liverpool the customs officials told Huxley that they didn't think he should bring such a book to America in times like these . . . "I'm presenting this to Aldous, who is in Hollywood," Huxley explained. "If Mr. Goldwyn hasn't changed his accent, then this book won't."

SIGHT: The clippings of the Washington visit of King George and Queen Elizabeth include reports of sightseeing trips through the entire District and the vicinity—but no mention ever was made of their having seen the Lincoln Memorial . . . As a matter of fact, their Majesties did see the Lincoln Memorial—at 6:30 a. m., long after the capital was asleep . . . They didn't want the President to climb the many steps, and, so, after midnight they went there accompanied by their guards . . . The watchman at first refused to turn on the lights, even after he was told who the visitors were . . . "I can't do it," he informed, "without authority" . . . He called the proper official, related the facts and was assured that it was all right to turn on the lights for the King and Queen.

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, Nov. 2 (NS).—I heard with interest today that RKO is moving Heaven and earth to try to persuade Dolores Costello Barrymore to let her young son, John Barrymore 2d, play "Little Orvie," in the Booth Tarkington story. A delightful story written as only Booth Tarkington can write of youth, it is a natural for a child. If it's a success, a series will be produced around the same character. Edward Ellis is set to play the garrulous grandfather and negotiations are far advanced for young John. Whether his father will consent has not been determined, but Dolores, who has had the actual care and custody of the children, will probably do as she sees fit.

LOUELLA PARSONS

Speaking of John, jr., he continues to take the audience into his confidence on the Chicago stage in "My Dear Children" at each performance, to the delight of everyone. That's what made the play run on and on. William Sistrom is the producer of "Little Orvie" and so far no director has been set, but it will be mighty interesting if John Barrymore 2d, the third generation of this talented family, does make his movie debut.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Ruby Keeler, after bidding Al Jolson a tearful farewell, supped at the Lamaze with Bill Frawley and the John Gallaudets, while Al spent his first night in New York at Leon and Eddie's, watching Gloria Cook, glamorous brunette dancer there; Marlene Dietrich and Jimmy Stewart, who are becoming a habit, dancing every dance at the Beverly Wilshire; Mickey Rooney, every inch the big star, walking into the Florentine Room applauding the young singer in Ray Noble's band, and then walking out; Lana Turner, eyes shining, dancing with Greg Bautzer and acting sooo happy; Bruce Cabot devoting himself to pretty Wendy Inglehart, Harper's Bazaar writer, at a night spot.

Joan Crawford, as pleased with her new cross fox coat as if she were Susie Smith; can't blame her, it's awfully pretty; Joan was sick today and scenes were shot around her in "Not Too Narrow, Not Too Deep." Deanna Durbin, in a new mink coat, also confided to me that it was her first expensive coat; what a cute couple she and that nice boy, Vaughn Paul, are. Deanna looked so smart in a bright red dress, which show'd off the new coat.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow.

Direct British Rule of Indian States Seen

Proclamation of Popular Government Collapse May Be Necessary

Copyright by New York Times.

London, Nov. 2.—In a debate on the status of India in the House of Lords this afternoon, the Marquess of Zetland, secretary of state for India, declared it might soon be necessary to proclaim the breakdown of popular government in the provinces and take their administration into British hands.

This situation has been brought about by the action of the working committee of the All-India Nationalist Congress Party, calling on its ministries in the eight provinces it controls to resign in protest at the British government's decision to wait until the conclusion of the war to define India's permanent status in the British commonwealth.

Lord Zetland admitted that four nationalist provincial governments had resigned already and a fifth was expected to do so soon. (A dispatch to the New York Times from London last Tuesday said news had reached there of the resignation of six provincial ministries.

He vigorously repudiated suggestions of British insincerity regarding dominion status for India but reiterated that racial and communal differences between the Moslems and Hindus must be resolved to give protection to the minorities.

In the present circumstances, he continued, it was the path of wisdom to invite leaders of the two principal communities of India to meet under the auspices of a neutral and attempt to find a solution of their differences. That, he said, was exactly what was being done by the Viceroy, the Marquess of Linlithgow.

Discussion of the Indian problem was opened by Lord Samuel, who emphasized that, while it was agreed in principle that India should have dominion status, there was disagreement on "when and how."

The policy of the British government regarding India, said Lord Samuel, meant the final decision was left to India's Moslems, who, while representing one-fourth of her population, exercised a veto power over nearly three-fourths of her 350,000,000 people.

"Such a situation," he declared, "may easily become a permanent deadlock."

The association, which met in the Capitol Park Hotel, adopted a resolution to invite the National Hotel Sales Manager's Association to hold its next convention in Washington.

Many Children, Women Return To British Cities

Copyright by New York Times.

London, Nov. 2.—Minister of Health Elliot told the House of Commons today that of 1,381,000 women, children and invalids evacuated from British cities in the first few days of the war only about 875,000 were still in the countryside, and that some 3,500 babies had been born to evacuated mothers since the war broke out.

In a general review of the evacuation scheme, which has been much criticized, Elliot said that 78 per cent of the 750,000 school children who left the cities, or 515,000, are still in the safe areas, and that half of the evacuated mothers and children, or about 271,000, remained in billets.

Despite the general feeling that these figures are not as bad as expected, it is pointed out that at least 506,000 people have returned and are living in the danger areas along with approximately a million school children whose parents did not let them leave home in the first place.

Business Favors 'Incentive' Taxes

American businessmen would react to the benefits of incentive taxation by increasing employment and expanding their plants, the Research Institute of America reported to Undersecretary of the Treasury John W. Hanes today, following tabulations of responses to a questionnaire sent by the institute to its members, who employ over 6,000,000 people.

A major recommendation of the institute was one that specific tax reductions be allowed to individual businesses based upon increased employment in each busines.

Bridges Exhorts Pennsylvania GOP To Defeat Guffey

Johnstown, Pa., Nov. 2 (AP).—Senator Bridges (Republican), New Hampshire, listed tonight as the "particular job" of Pennsylvania Republicans the defeat of Senator Guffey (Democrat), Pennsylvania, in 1940.

In an address prepared for a joint meeting of the Cambria County Council of Republican Men and Women and the county's Young Republican Club, Bridges said Guffey "opened up on a third-term tirade on a Nation-wide broadcast as late as last July. He said then that if Franklin D. Roosevelt were not elected for a third term there would be 'dictatorship or civil war.'"

Challedon Won Special With Injured Hoof

Brann Star Has Bruised Fore Foot

'Horse of Year' Hurt Hoof in Stall Before Being Shipped From Laurel to Pimlico

By the Associated Press

Pimlico, Md., Nov. 2.—Challedon, courageous colt who never has asked quarter from any opponent, was running strictly on his heart when he won the Pimlico Special, for he made the grind on an injured hoof that might have caused him serious damage.

It took a lot of courage, too, for Owner W. L. Brann and Trainer Lou Schaefer to enter Challedon in the race that stamped him as the "Horse of the Year." Had any mishap occurred, the 3-year-old champion might have gone the way of Isolator, Johnstown and Eight Thirty, whose injuries put them on the sidelines.

Injures Hoof

Six days ago, before Challedon was shipped from Laurel to Pimlico, he somehow bruised a quarter of his fore foot. For two days he favored the leg and Brann, Schaefer and Alfred G. Vanderbilt, Maryland Jockey Club president, debated whether he should run.

Without Challedon the Special would have been just another race instead of a classic. In a Sunday workout, with the Special in the balance, Clayton Trippy galloped Challendon a mile and an eighth. It was a good effort and Challedon seemed none the worse for it.

Sporting Gesture

Brann and Schaefer then made the sporting gesture of entering their valuable champion. The rest is history. Challedon ran Cravat ten lengths into the ground and stood off Kayak II by half a length in as great a battle as Pimlico ever has seen.

Few knew just what that rousing fight might have cost Challedon or how much heart it took for him to keep going. And few knew just how Brann and Schaefer felt when Challedon was caught by Kayak, then came on again to win a glorious victory.

Cantatrice II Wins Historic Cesarewitch

By the United Press.

Newmarket, England, Nov. 2.—The colors of Sir Alfred Butts flashed to victory for the second time in the historic Cesarewitch Stakes today when his filly, Cantatrice II, won the 100th running of the classic.

Sir Alfred Butts also had a winner in 1935.

Jockey Donald Smith, who finished on the place horse in 1934 and second in 1936, piloted the French-bred filly to a four-length victory over F. J. Haslam's Cheerful Star, which was a length ahead of James V. Rank's Black Speck.

A field of 35 started and Cantatrice II was the favorite at 7-2. Cheerful Star and Black Speck were 20 to 1 shots.

The time for the 2-mile 24-yard race was 3:32 1-5. That was a "wartime" distance run on the summer track, which is shorter than the usual distance of 2 miles 2 furlongs.

James Reardon's Fulano, second favorite at 10-1, finished fourth, while Valedictory, owned by the American, John Hay Whitney, never was a contender.

Sweden Finds Way to Make Grid Betting Pay

That old human trait to bet on the outcome of a football game has been made into a paying proposition in Sweden under a government betting monopoly which last year brought Sweden $4,100,000.

Major portion of the football betting monopoly has been used for promotion of public recreation and athletics, a report from the American commercial attache to the Department of Commerce disclosed. The monopoly has enabled the government to subsidize construction of several hundred sports grounds, indoor and outdoor swimming pools, tennis and gymnastic halls, ski-jumping courses, boat houses and ice rinks.

Since the government established the betting system five years ago the income for Sweden has amounted to 48,000,000 crowns—or about $11,500,000.

Tigers Spurn Nat Bid for Greenberg

Griffith to Resume Trade Talk; Detroit Seeking Travis and Pitcher Is Report

By the Associated Press

Detroit, Nov. 2.—Jack Zeller, general manager of the Detroit Tigers, said today that the Washington Nationals had offered Shortstop Cecil Travis for First Baseman Hank Greenberg without success and that nothing further would be decided about the big fellow's future until the major league meeting in Cincinnati next month.

It was the first official indication that the Detroit Club might be satisfied to go along with Rudy York as its first baseman if a suitable offer were made for Greenberg.

Commenting on the Greenberg trade rumors, Zeller said:

"Personally I don't know of any club that would swap for him except Washington and Clark Griffith would have trouble in satisfying his salary demands."

Griffith 'Interested' In Detroit Deal

The Nats are interested in acquiring either Hank Greenberg or Rudy York from the Tigers, Owner Clark Griffith admitted last night, but added that negotiations have been at a standstill since last June.

"Off and on we have talked trade with the Tigers," said Griffith. "It began during the winter of 1938-39 when Detroit first broached the subject of a trade that would give them Cecil Travis.

Griff "Interested"

"They mentioned both York and Greenberg at various times and of course the Washington club was interested. But nothing has come of the discussions."

Griffith declared that he expected to resume trade talk with the Tigers at the annual big league winter meeting at Cincinnati in December.

"We'll listen to any reasonable offer," he said. "If they want Travis I'd try to arrange a deal. Either York or Greenberg would look pretty good with the Washington team."

Want Pitcher to Boot

The Nats' owner did not make clear the reason which caused the trade talk to stall last summer, but reports were that the Tigers held out for another Washington player in addition to Travis, probably a pitcher.

Reminded that Travis batted only .290 last season, his worst year in the majors, Griffith declared: "Well, Greenberg was benched because he wasn't hitting, also."

To the comment of General Manager Jack Zeller of the Tigers, who suggested that the Washington club have trouble satisfying Greenberg's salary demands, Griffith replied:

"We would have no trouble in coming to terms with any player we wanted to sign."

Cage Team Meeting Off Until Tuesday

The meeting of basketball team representatives scheduled for tonight at the Force School, headquarters of the District recreation department, has been postponed until Tuesday night at 7:30, Dick Tennyson announced last night.

A recreation league will be formed at that time. Reason for the postponement is to avoid conflict with the Clemson-George Washington football game tonight in Griffith Stadium.

Marquart in Line For Ambers Bout

Seven Hoya Regulars Demoted in Shake-up

Five Georgetown linemen and two backs were demoted to the second team yesterday in a sweeping shakeup following the last scrimmage before tomorrow's game at Griffith Stadium with West Virginia.

Those who lost their starting positions are: guards, Augie Lio and Mark Ostinato; tackles, Joe Daniels and Earl Fullilove; center, Jim Reachey, and backs, Jim Castiglia and Jules Koshlap.

Those promoted are guards, Angelo Paternoster and Joe Mickey; tackles, Ed Kowalski and Al Blozis; center, Allen Matuza, and backs, Myron Darmohray and Ben Bulvin

Injury Healed

Darmohray moves back into the line-up for two reasons: (1) because he has recovered from an injury that handicapped him in the George Washington game, and (2) because he has been more impressive in recent scrimmages than has Castiglia.

The second reason also applies to all other changes, Coach Hagerty declared yesterday in explaining the changes.

"I've emphasized since early season that every job on our team is wide open and the work of these boys in the G. W. game has earned them starting calls. Some of our veterans may eventually win their jobs back, but they'll have to show plenty to do it."

The absence of Jules Koshlap from the Georgetown line-up leaves the team without a passer of proved ability. Darmohray, however, has been showing promise as an aerial artist and together with Lou Gheeas should be able to take care of Koshlap's chores.

Constant Improvement

Line Coach Dubofsky is particularly pleased with the constant improvement shown by Blozis, the 6-foot 6-inch, 245-pound youngster who is expected to develop into one of the school's greatest trackmen. He is a shot and discus thrower and holds the national interscholastic record for the former event.

West Virginia's 37-man squad will arrive here early this afternoon and will be quartered at the Ambassador Hotel. The Mountaineers later will step through a light workout at Griffith Stadium.

Tickets for this, the thirteenth game between the two colleges, are on sale at the stadium, and at Spaldings and the Georgetown Athletic Department.

W. Va. Back Returns

Morgantown, W. Va., Nov. 2 (AP).—The return of a hard-running halfback to action today lifted the football hopes of the University of West Virginia for at least a good showing against the undefeated Georgetown team at Washington, D. C., Saturday.

Coach Marshall Glenn announced that Back Harry (Flash) Clark, absent two weeks because of a leg injury, returned to the lineup.

13 Ral Parr Thoroughbreds To Be Sold

By a Staff Correspondent.

Pimlico, Md., Nov. 2.—Thirteen thoroughbreds owned by the late Ral Parr, prominent Maryland sportsman and breeder, will be sold at public auction in the paddock at Pimlico on the morning of Thursday, November 9. The announcement was made today by a representative of the executors of the estate of Parr.

Included in the lot is Victory Morn, one of the leading 2-year-olds of 1939 and winner of $32,240 in 10 races. This colt, a son of Callenger II, the sire of Challedon, outstanding horse of the year, and out of the good mare Bright Luna, has the enviable record of six victories in ten stars, second three times and unplaced only once. In his first start he finished fourth.

Victory Morn's achievements this autumn have ranked him as one of

Central, Tech Clash Today For 37th Time

SCHOOLBOY GAMES TODAY
Central vs. McKinley—at Central, 3:30.
Anacostia vs. Wilson—at Wilson, 3:30.
Gonzaga vs. Western—at Western, 3:30.
St. Alban's at Georgetown Prep—at Garrett Park, 3:30.

By Bill Burnett

Thirty-six years of see-saw football wrangling will be behind the two schools today when, for the thirty-seventh time, Central and Tech take their time-worn but never dead football rivalry out of storage and spread it out for the benefit of alumni, students and players at Central Stadium.

More than 6,000 spectators are expected at the old Thirteenth street bowl at 3:30 when the referee's starting whistle will send the opening kickoff into the air and hurl a pair of the most promising scholastic elevens in the city into deathless combat.

Central and its countless adherents expect to win without a great deal of trouble. And not to be outdone, Tech also expects a triumph. The unfortunate fact is that Central has far greater reason for anticipating a victory than the Manual Trainers. Tentative odds yesterday gave the Mount Pleasanters a 5-2 edge, and if points interested you, 12 were freely offered.

Princeton Star Loses Leg Today

'Hooker' Herring, First-String Tackle, Injured in Brown Game Last Saturday

By the Associated Press

Princeton, N. J., Nov. 2.—Everywhere on the Princeton University campus today echoed the question, "How's the Hooker?"

The answer came from the father of Donald G. (Hooker) Herring, the husky tackle who was injured in the last minute of the Brown game last Saturday. He said: "His left leg will be amputated above the knee tomorrow.

"The reason," said Donald G. Herring, sr., himself a Princeton football star in years gone by, "is that the blood can't get down into his lower leg because the arteries have been destroyed."

"Don won't be a cripple," the Elder Herring said. "He'll be able to walk around just as well as I do. All it means is that he loses a year of football and a couple of years of track."

The surgeon selected for the amputation was Dr. Robert W. Johnson, jr., of Johns Hopkins, Baltimore, a Princeton graduate.

"Hooker" did not know what was in store, his father said.

His misfortune was the prime topic everywhere except in University Field, where his teammates prepared with tightly set lips for the Harvard game Saturday. Neither veterans nor scrubs wished to discuss the amputation which had cast over the campus gloom seldom equalled in recent years.

Wyatt, Dodger Pitcher; In Baltimore Hospital

Baltimore, Nov. 2 (AP).—Larry Macphail, general manager of the Brooklyn Dodgers, said today he "expected" a knee operation would be necessary for Whitlow Wyatt, Dodger pitcher, who is in Johns Hopkins Hospital for treatment.

Macphail said he conferred with Wyatt and Dr. George E. Bennett, but did not know when the operation would be performed. Macphail planed to return to New York late today.

Flaherty, Hagerty Guest Speakers

Fighting Talk

Barcelona, Spain—Max Schmeling en route to America with another Joe Louis fight as his goal. "I intend to continue fighting—and how!" Schmeling declared.

Comment—You said it, Max, when you said "and how." That's what American fans want to know. You took the words right out of their mouths, Max. They want no more of the sort of exhibition you put up against Joe Louis the last time. Remember that one? You were all through 2 minutes after you started.

POVICH

As far as Schmeling bouts in America are concerned the willingness of Schmeling to supply them is far greater than the demand. The Teuton has been a party to two of the worst fiascos in the history of American boxing—each time in title fights. Whenever Schmeling wants to hang up his gloves the evidence is that it will be all right with American fight customers.

He set something of a new low when he won the title from Jack Sharkey 10 years ago. His predecessor as champion, Gene Tunney, had established an unflattering precedent by becming the only man to win the title while his opponent was still on his feet. Schmeling, in the Jack Sharkey affair, became the only heavyweight champion in history to win the title while reposing on the floor. That's where he was when the sympathetic judges decided he had been fouled.

Schmeling did contribute a sparkling chapter to prize fight history when he punctured the bubble of Joe Louis' invincibility by knocking him out. But last year in the second Louis fight Schmeling completely undid himself. He scarcely landed a blow and cowered in a corner while Louis knocked him out in the first round. In wanting a return engagement, Schmeling constitutes a minority of one.

Pimlico, Md.—Challedon and Kayak II run first six furlongs of Pimlico Special to decide Horse of Year title in 1:16 3-5.

Comment—Yes, and if they had been prize fighters instead of race horses any self-respecting referee would have thrown 'em both out for stalling and held up the purse. That six furlongs will stand as the lowest three-quarter mile to be run on any track this season. On the same program, cheap platers were running the distance in better than 1:15. And at Marlboro in the mud they'd be ashamed of that time. The fans weren't getting a run for their money in those first six furlongs. They were getting a slow trot.

New York—Tony Canzoneri, knocked out by young Al Davis for the first time in his career, declares after fight: "They shouldn't have stopped it."

Comment—Everybody but Tony Canzoneri seemingly knew that he was through as a fighter before he stepped into the Garden ring the other night. Well-wishers had pleaded with him long ago to quit the ring. They hated to see a great little guy who was once a great champion, punched around by third-raters who couldn't lay a glove on him in his championship days.

To the everlasting credit of Referee Arthur Donovan who worked Canzoneri's fights when Tony was the best fighting man, inch for inch and pound for pound in the world, he didn't permit the third round to go more than 2 minutes and 13 seconds. He was quick to see Tony's distress. He wouldn't let that sort of a thing continue. He simply took Tony by the arm, playfully ruffled Canzoneri's wet black hair and said: "That's enough, Tony." He also probably whispered, "Five years age, Tony, you'd have belted this kid out in a round."

Baltimore, Md.—Two winning streaks will clash here on November 9, when unbeaten Pat Comiskey, New Jersey heavyweight, faces an unbeaten Maynard Daniels at the Baltimore Coliseum.

Comment—Bill Daly, Comiskey's manager, who has brought the young Jerseyman along carefully and is being told by the experts that he has a coming champion on his hands, doubtless knows what he is about in scheduling this fight with Daniels. But he seems to be taking a fair amount of risk.

Daniels, like Comiskey, has had 23 fights and won them all. Like Comiskey he can't box his way out of a corner, but like Comiskey, he can sock awful hard. If Daniels happens to land first, there is a chance that the estimates of Comiskey will have to be revised. Heinie Miller, a fighting man, man and boy for 40 years, likes Daniels. "He reminds me more than a little bit of Dempsey," says Miller who is careful about permitting himself to be reminded of Dempsey by other fighters, especially young ones.

"Daniels hits with either hand, like Dempsey could," says Miller, "and like Dempsey he takes too many. That may be the rub. He may not be able to take it as well as Jack did. But something is bound to happen if Daniels hits Comiskey on the chin. Washington might have a real heavyweight contender."

This Daniels is something of a character. Four fights after he began his ristic career, he was Washington's Golden Gloves champion. He came to the Capital from Wanchese, N. C., where his forebears have been in the Coast Guard service for 150 years. They are seafaring folks who cope with Cape Hatteras when the waters start to act up and toss ships all over the coast. That's when the Daniels set out in their open boats to battle the sea. On the occasion when the British oil tanker Wirlo was torpedoed by a submarine in the last war, it was the Daniels who rescued the crew from the boiling sea, aflame with the tanker's cargo. But of course that fact won't count when the opening gong sounds at Baltimore.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

Baltimore, Md., Nov. 2.—Seabiscuit could have licked them both. If you don't believe the old guy could have run both Challedon and Kayak II, right out of Al Vanderbilt's horse park, then you don't believe Georgie Woolf. We encountered the dapper, intelligent jockey in the pub of the Lord Baltimore Hotel after the Pimlico Special. He had ridden Kayak II, and had been beaten by a half a length by Challedon, who carried six less pounds.

CONSIDINE

"I'm not taking anything away from Challedon," the little fellow said. "He was a better horse than Kayak II. That's all there is to that. But with the proper underfooting, Seabiscuit would have murdered both of them. I'll go even farther than that. Seabiscuit could have beaten any horse ever bred in this country."

A fellow nearby let out a slight harumph, and said, "there was a pretty good thing around a few years ago, called Man o' War."

"There sure was," Georgie said, "and he never was asked to do the things the Biscuit did," asserted Woolf, who rode the old man from Charles Howard's barn to a victory over War Admiral in last year's special. He was never abused as a two-year-old, nor weighted down, and never ran in those big fields to get the kicks and the bumps that the Biscuit got."

Seabiscuit Had Two Runs

"Snapper Garrison would have loved that Biscuit," an old turf writer spoke up. "Not long before he died Snapper told me that the only horse he ever saw who had two runs was Gallant Fox. Seabiscuit had two runs the day he beat the Admiral."

"What does that mean?" we asked.

"It means he had sprint enough in him to set the pace, and then started running all over again, a kind of a super-sprint, after the Admiral caught him. Challedon did something like that in this Special, but not quite. He was out in front, got caught, and came on again. But when he was setting the pace at the start it was an easy pace. They were just sparring."

"Kayak will be good enough to win the Riggs next Monday," another old timer said, "but War Admiral never was any good after the Biscuit beat him. Yeah, he won a cheap race at Hialeah, but that was all. He never got over the licking the Biscuit gave him. Charley Kurtsinger told me that when the Biscuit passed him on the last turn, the Admiral's eyes began rolling in his head—like crazy, it broke his heart. And I guess it broke old George Conway's heart, too. The trainer didn't last long after that."

The Biscuit is certain to run again. He has been taken out of stud, patched up and will start in his third $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap. He is only $35,000 short of Sun Beau's all-time record earnings of $376,477.

He'll Run Against Challedon i nSanta Anita

Howard's original plan was to start working him this March and get ready for the $50,000 Hollywood Gold Cup in July. But the old boy's right knee and left ankle have healed so nicely that Howard will enter him in the big Santa Anita race against Challedon, Kayak and all the others.

Howard's Sorteado was destroyed Wednesday almost at the hour that his Kayak was losing to Challedon. The Californian paid $37,000 for Sorteado, after it had become the prize horse of Argentina. The colt broke his right fore-ankle at Jamaica last month, and though a Cincinnati dentist swore he could save him for stud service, a group of veterinarians ordered him destroyed. The leg had swollen to three times its normal size and he was in extreme pain.

Lloyd's of London will pay Howard $40,000—which was the amount for which he had insured Sorteado. The colt had a short, but spectacular career. Many think that if he had gone on he would have become an all-time great.

Challedon, in hard training since April, gets his heartily earned rest now. They'll unwind him with a few gallops, let him run wild for a month or so, then send him off to the wars again.

He is a fine, sound colt, though genealogically he should never have been sound. The first foal of his daddy, Challenger II, and his dam, Laura Gal, was a dwarf. The next year Laura Gal was barren, and the next year, she had twins by Challenger—both fifth raters. Then she bore Challedon, and there isn't a horseman in Maryland who wouldn't punch you in the nose if you suggested that he wasn't worth waiting for.

By Jack Munhall.

District college football fans will sample the opening attraction on an unusually attractive week-end schedule tonight when George Washington's improving Colonials meet Clemson's Tigers, one of the country's truly great teams, at Griffith Stadium.

Kickoff will be at 8:15 o'clock. Probable attendance: 9,000, including Gov. and Mrs. Burnet R. Maybank, of South Carolina, and many Clemson Cadets.

With this top-notch game serving to whet football appetites for tomorrow's engagements between undefeated Georgetown and West Virginia at the Stadium, and unbeaten, untied Catholic University and strong Tulsa at Brookland, the week's program promised to be the outstanding of the campaign.

Ranked Nineteenth in Country

Clemson, easy conqueror of Navy at Annapolis last week, was rated nineteenth in the country by the most recent Associated Press poll of sports writers and likewise is given a prominent position by other accredited rankings. The Tigers have scored four victories and have lost only to Tulane, one of the Nation's most powerful clubs, in a 7-6 game.

George Washington, at least twenty-five per cent improved over its early season form, is ready mentally and physically to offer stubborn opposition to the Tigers but will enter the fray a 9-5 underdog.

Regardless ofthe final score, however, this should be a thrilling game, replete with spectacular touchdown runs and daring passes. Clemson, with a splendid group of backs, headed by Shad Bryant and Banks McFadden, is always a colorful, high-scoring outfit.

Last year at Greenville, S. C., the Tigers walloped George Washington, 27-0, with McFadden and Bryant each turning in a touchdown dash of more than 50 yards.

Because the Tigers are a high-powered offensive outfit and because no one has been able to stop Bryant, McFadden and their other fine backs, including Chippy Maness and Chuck Timmons, the Colonials will be forced to gamble in an effort to win the game. They will have to risk giving Clemson touchdowns on long forward passes in order to meet the visitors' fast and sweeping attack which rolled up 28 points on North Carolina State, 27 on South Carolina and 15 on Navy.

This more sensational and daring George Washington offense will center about Billy Richardson, the little package of running and passing dynamite who starred against Georgetown, and Bob Nowaskey, its great all-around end, and Quarterback Sam Babich. Nowaskey and Babich, a converted end, both are gluey-fingered pass receivers and can run like halfbacks after catching the ball, and they are expected to catch the ball often on passes from the stocky Richardson.

Triple-Threat Star

Richardson will not be in the starting G. W. line-up, as has been Coach Bill Reinhart's custom, but probably will be inserted before the first quarter is ended. Because of his small stature—he weighs less than 160 pounds and is only 5 feet 8 inches—Richardson is withheld from the game until the Colonials are in scoring territory. Then he is sent in with a carefully planned series of plays in which he runs or passes or kicks on every down until a touchdown is made or his team loses the ball.

Starting at left half for the Colonials will be their promising sophomore triple-threater, Ed Wilamoksi, who despite his greenness, is touted as a sure-fire bet for stardom. Wilamoksi is being brought along slowly by Coach Reinhart, and is likely to break loose at any time now that he has the experience of four games.

Alternating with Wilamoksi and Richardson at the tailback will be another tough little youngster, Ken Batson, who is best known for his ability to hammer an opposing line. This trio usually splits up the game, so each can go at top speed when he is in there.

Banks McFadden, Clemson's tall and lanky halfback who did not face Navy because of an injury, is reported to be in shape. If this is true, then spectators tonight will get a glimpse of one of the most highly publicized backs in the country. Already he is deemed an outstanding candidate for all-American honors. If McFadden is so honored, he will become one of the few college athletes who have won all-American recognition both in basketball and football. Last season McFadden was picked on the basketball all-American.

A pair of Junior Colonial League 100-pound elevens will meet at 7:30 in a preliminary game.

Banners Fly as Army Football Strategists Plot Downfall of Irish

75,000 to See Army, Notre Dame Tomorrow

Game Sellout Far in Advance Even Though Cadets' Record Doesn't Come Close to Matching That of the Irish

By the Associated Press

New York, Nov. 2.—The "people's choice" in football games will be played again at Yankee Stadium Saturday afternoon and, while you can find few true believers in Army's chances of stopping Notre Dame, there will be the full complement of 75,000 or more addicts in the triple-tiered stands.

It's always that way for Army and Notre Dame, even when there appears to be no adquate reason for the customers to single out this game above all others.

This season, for instance, Army has been beaten by Yale and tied Columbia only in the last two minutes in its major games, and looked bad even in its winning openers from Furman and Centre. Notre Dame, on the other hand, has won successive victories over five major rivals—Purdue, Georgia Tech, Southern Methodist, Navy and Carnegie Tech.

In addition, Army hasn't beaten the Irish since 1931.

Yet ever on that basis the game, twenty-sixth of a series that started in 1913 with Gus Dorais and Knute Rockne combining to shock West Point with their passes, was a sell-out far in advance. The two schools disposed of all their tickets two weeks ago, and the few that got into scalpers' hands already are bringing $6.60 and $8.80 for a surface value of $4.40, and should be worth even more tomorrow.

In the last few days, though, a few factors have arisen to make this renewal of a truly "glamorous" rivalry far more attractive.

Notre Dame, for one thing, came out of its one-point defeat of Carnegie Tech with three of its front-line operatives considerably below their physical par and a number of others showing bumps and bruises. Bill Kerr, regular right end who scored the touchdowns that beat Carnegie the last two years, and Tackle Tom Gallagher are on the shelf, and Tad Harvey, the other tackle, may have to stay there with them.

Special Dispatch to The Post

Chicago, Nov. 2.—Despite the fact that they have found plenty to worry about on their home field this season, 31 members of the University of Chicago football team began a 600-mile journey in search of more trouble this afternoon. In the only Maroon road game of the year, Chicago meets Virginia Saturday in Scott Stadium at Charlottesville.

Chicago's meeting with Virginia is the first in the history of the two institutions and is the first half of a home-and-home series with the Cavaliers. On the basis of this year's record, despite rumblings of a heightened belligerence on the part of Maroon players, Chicago is not expected to beat the Cavaliers, who have won three games and lost two this season.

Indians to Train At Orleans Again

Cleveland, Nov. 2 (AP).—The Cleveland Indians baseball team will return to New Orleans next year for spring training, Vice President C. C. Slapnicka said today, "unless something entirely unforeseen comes up."

Maryland U. Leaves for Penn State

The University of Maryland football squad will entrain today for State College, Pa., and tomorrow's game with Penn State following a light practice at College Park. The Terps will stop overnight at Lewistown, Pa.

Because Penn State employs a five-man line better than any team Maryland scouts have seen this season, Head Coach Frank Dobson has had to make special revisions in his offense. His strategy is expected to call for more line bucking and less passing from husky backs like Pershing Mondorff and John Boyda.

Seeking D. C. Games

The Waynesboro Independents, 120-pound basketball team, would like to schedule games for this season with teams that average between 120 and 125 pounds. They are interested in booking any boys' club in the District. For further information, write to Terry Flanagan, manager, Waynesboro, Pa.

Seeking Games

Navy Concludes Heavy Drills For Quakers

Team Will Have Large Rooting at Philly; Punkin Wood Still Out

Special Dispatch to The Post

Annapolis, Nov. 2.—Navy's gridiron forces today ended hard practice sessions for its annual battle with the University of Pennsylvania on Franklin Field Saturday afternoon. Plans for the trip to the Quaker City also were completed.

The Middies will have a representative rooting section at the game. Two battalions of the regiment and the band and bugle corps, and ranking officers of the Academy and many others also will go along. Philadelphia has always been Navy's favored setting for the gridiron sport.

Forty-eight players will constitute the football group, and with the staff of coaches and others, the party will number more than 60. The delegation of rooters will leave here on special trains at 9:45 Saturday morning. With the football party will be "Billy the Eighth," official goat mascot, and he will be trotted on to Franklin Field in leash to his keepers, Midshipmen Billy Simpson and Jerry Williams.

This afternoon's practice saw the Tars in a protracted session of offensive and defensive passing under the watchful eyes of Maj. Swede Larson, head coach, and his assistants. The linemen had a stiff workout under Edgar C. (Rip) Miller, line coach.

Emmett (Pumpkin) Wood, regarded as ace of Navy backs, came to the field yesterday as a surprise package after two weeks in the hospital suffering from an injured leg, although there is no chance of his playing against the Quakers.

3 Pennsylvanians In Navy Lineup for Penn

Philadelphia, Nov. 2 (AP).—For the second straight week-end, native sons who made good on out-of-State gridirons threaten to plague the University of Pennsylvania's football team Saturday when the Red and Blue meets Navy in the twenty-fourth renewal of their long series.

Three Pennsylvanians—Fullback Harry Dunkle, of Lock Haven, and Paul Severin, of Natrona, and Center Carl Sutheimer, of Suburban Hatboro—helped North Carolina's Tarheels spoil the Quakers' perfect record last Saturday, but the worst is yet to come as far as Penn and Pennsylvanians are concerned.

Nine Keystone starters give Pennsylvania the best representation of any State on the Navy squad, and two of the Middies' starting backs, Cliff Lenz, of Latrobe, Pa., and Harold Hansen, of Philadelphia, stand out as chief Navy offensive threats.

C. U. Completes Home-Coming Plans, Featuring Tulsa Game

Catholic University's plans for an elaborate program to celebrate its thirtieth annual homecoming, which will be climaxed tomorrow afternoon with a football game with Tulsa University, were completed yesterday.

A pep rally on the C. U. campus this afternoon, followed by an informal dance in the dinner hall, are the chief events scheduled prior to the game. The pre-game ceremonies will feature Senator Josh Lee, of Oklahoma, who will throw out the first ball—a golden football.

Arrive This Morning

The Tulsa squad of 33 players, under Coach Chet Benefiel, will arrive here at 7:40 this morning. A light drill is scheduled in the Brookland Stadium this afternoon. The Hurricane is reported at full strength, with the possible exception of Roy Buffalo, shifty Indian halfback who is a doubtful starter because of injuries.

Should Buffalo be unable to play, his absence is expected to make little difference in the Tulsa attack, for Clinton Gearhard, his 165-pound understudy, has been the sensation of recent practice sessions with spectacular long runs. Another Tulsan who will bear special watching by the Cardinals is Charley Johnson, a 200-pound guard, who pulls out of line to block and who also is the squad's best place kicker and conversion artist.

Although the Catholic University squad is tense as it prepares to risk its five-game winning streak against perhaps the strongest foe on its schedule, the players apparently are in the best of spirits.

Cards Confident

Co-Captain and star Guard Al Calabrese expressed the sentiments of the team yesterday when he said: "We think it's just another ball game. I haven't heard any reason why we should be scared. Sure, they'll be tough—every ball game is tough—but we'll win."

The local Oklahoma Alumni Society is showing unusual interest in this game. It will have a welcoming committee at Union Station this morning to greet the Tulsa team and bundle the players into private cars for a sight-seeing tour. On the welcoming committee will be Congressman Wesley E. Disney and Senator Josh Lee, of Oklahoma.

Touchdown Club Luncheon Today

Coaches of the three local teams and the three invading teams which will clash here tonight and tomorrow afternoon will be guests of the Touchdown Club at a special luncheon today at the Lafayette Hotel. The luncheon will begin promptly at noon.

The coaches will be Jack Hagerty, Georgetown, and "Sleepy" Glenn, West Virignis; "Dutch" Bergman, Catholic University, and Chet Benefiel, Tulsa University; Bill Reinhart, George Washington, and Jess Neely, Clemson.

Shoot Tomorrow

Good Chance Wins Battleship Steeplechase at Pimlico

6-Year-Old Repeats Last Year's Upset

Paul Mellon's Gelding Beats Whaddon Chase, Favorite, by Length; Sapelo Finishes 3d

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent.

Pimlico, Nov. 2.—Good Chance, a rather ragged-looking 6-year-old gelding, probably will not have his photograph in the Mellon Art Gallery, but he presented a pretty picture to his backers today. Racing in the Rokeby Stable colors of Paul Mellon, of the Pittsburgh Mellons, Good Chance cut quite a slice in the second running of the $2,500 added Battleship Steeplechase Handicap.

Just as he had done last year, in the first running of this race, Good Chance came off the pace to win, under a drive. C. Mahlon Kline's Whaddon Chase, the people's choice, was second in the gruelling test of 15 fences and at 2 miles. The favorite was beaten a length. Sapelo, flying the French Blue of Montpelier, was third, three lengths from second money.

Only three others competed and there was one mishap, Jockey Willie King falling off Mrs. Arthur White's Bay Dean at the final fence while the gelding was dog tired. King was unhurt.

Good Chance was clocked in 3:58 4-5 as compared to 4:00 3-5 last year. The son of Chance Shot paid backers a $13.20 mutuel and added $2,395 to his earnings.

Perfect racing weather marked the second program of the "stake-a-day" session here. The rack was fast and conditions otherwise were ideal for a crowd of 7,500.

Mistletoe, a 2-year-old filly belonging to Charles T. Fisher's Dixiana Stable, outlasted Toy Foot to win the second race, with Dark Palatine third.

Toy Foot atnd Mistletoe ran out into a long early lead, with Mistletoe taking the lead from Toy Foot turning into the stretch. From there the Dixiana filly hung on gamely.

Rut Coffey's 68 Features Pro-Senior Golf at Chevy Chase

Gen. Coleman, Virginia Pro Win Tourney

Ralph Quinter, Sr., Fred McLeod Second For Second Year; Lewis, Gasser Third

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Rut Coffey bucked such disadvantages as a head wind and heavy course to turn in a scoring masterpiece yesterday at Chevy Chase, a sub-par 68, that enabled the Winchester pro and Gen. F. W. Coleman to win Bob Barnett's annual pro-senior tournament.

Gen. Coleman, superintendent of Soldier's Home, played his home course in 87 strokes and deducted a seven handicap for a net 80, and added it to his partner's 68 for a 148 total, five shots ahead of the field.

McLeod, Quinter Second

Fred McLeod, Columbia's P. G. A. senior champ and Ralph D. Quinter, sr., finished in second place for the second consecutive year, as the latter duplicated his 1938 performance of shooting his best round of the year in the pro-senior event. Quinter had 86—17—69, and McLeod 82 from nines of 44 and 38 for a 153 total. Quinter was out in 41 and had par for a 78 on the fourteenth tee but ran into a 6 and 7 streak.

Third place went to Reeve Lewis, jr., who played the part of a pro due to the seniors outnumbering the professionals, and L. D. Gasser. Lewis had 79 and Gasser 86—10—76, for the 155 score, enough to finish in the money.

Wiffy Cox, Congressional professional, won the pro prize for the lowest score out of the money, a 37—36, 73, while host club golf committee chairman Robert Stead, jr., had an 87 that topped the senior members of the club that finished out of the first three teams.

Only 3 Others Under 78

Coffey's round was all the more remarkable when a count showed only three other pros were under 78 on the par 69 course. Cox's 73, a 75 for Buck Worsham, of the Host Club Golf Shop and a 76 for Gene Larkin, Woodmont mentor.

The Winchester professional, who over the past three or four years, has been a consistent winner in local affairs, gave no indication of his near-course record total when he started by three-putting the first green.

He stuck with par from there to the ninth hole where he rapped in a 35-footer for the first of three birdie deuces in five holes. It was two in a row when he knocked in a 15-footer on the tenth, and the third was a putt all the way across the green on the thirteenth.

Three-Putts Fourteenth

Coffey had a par for a 67 to tie the official course mark set by Ed Oliver in the same tourney last year, from this point. He three-putted the fourteenth and then was short of the green on 15 to lose his two strokes back to par and then completed his putting orgy with a 30-footer on the sixteenth for a birdie. Pars followed on the finishing holes.

The senior members of the Chevy Chase Club that competed included Gen. Coleman, Gen. M. M. Patrick and Gen. F. R. Keefer, Argentine Ambassador Felipe Espil and E. O. Wagenhorst, a former all-American grider at Princeton and head football coach at Pennsylvania.

Reeve Lewis, jr., 79, and L. D. Gasser, 86-165—10, 155.
Buck Worsham, Chevy Chase, 75, and J. E. Ewell, 106-161—23, 158.
Al Houghton, Unattached, 78, and Otto Chase, 90-168—9, 159.
Lewis Worsham, Burning Tree, 80, and L. C. Garnett, 98-178—17, 161.
Gene Larkin, Woodmont, 76, and J. C. Caiquitt, 107-183—21, 162.
A. B. Thorn, Lancaster, Pa., 84, and Robert Stead, jr., 87-171—8, 163.
Bob Barnett, Chevy Chase, 79, and W. P. Meredith, 90-176—14, 164.
John Brawner, Chevy Chase, 82, and Ambassador Felipe Espil, 107-189—24, 165.
Al Jamison, Indian Spring, 80, and Gen. M. M. Patrick, 109-180—23, 166.

Central and Tech To Clash Today

To undergrads and sports page readers that means Central has had too long a victory string.

"The fact that something was wrong," Artie said yesterday as his lads posed for pictures and staged a light passing and kicking drill, "was indicated in Central's game with G. W. High, of Alexandria. The favored Centrals barely got a 7-7 tie with a club totally lacking in reserves. Now my idea is that they've got a big upset due them. They don't expect much of us, but I do. Beyond that my prediction is 'No comment.'"

Like its highly regarded opponent, Tech is at full strength for the first time this season. Angelo Cattucci, blocking and running back hurt in the St. John's game, is in perfect shape and all other minor injuries on the squad have vanished.

Terror's Kick Gives Hader Arena Victory

Dressing-Room Brawl Follows Groan Drama With Golden Terror

It is too bad Promoter Joe Turner cannot sell tickets to the impromptu battles that spring up in the dressing room of his wrestling emporium because the melee staged there after the Golden Terror had been disqualified for ungentlemanly tactics in his feature match with Jack Hader hit a new high in post-bout battles.

Hader and The Terror, striving to keep their slightly rancid feud alive, furnished the best groans of the night for 17 minutes before the hooded Terror resorted to kicking and was ruled out by Referee Casey Berger.

The Terror stood in his corner brooding at the start of the battle, refusing to come out in the center of the ring to receive the referee's instructions. Hader went over and attempted to pull him out, whereupon The Terror came to life and seized the neck of his tormentor in a convincing grasp which brought several Grade A facial contortions from Hader.

After Berger halted the business, Hader spoke disparagingly of The Terror in the dressing room, then became so irked that he seized a satchel and bounced this off the hooded gentleman's head until the latter was in a semiconscious state. Several chairs were broken up during the dispute.

In the night's supporting groan dramas Al Baksh, ordinarily a referee, stepped into the ring as a substitute and lasted only 10½ minutes before Rudy Strongberg sat upon him for the count. John Katan beat Ed Newman in 18 minutes, Abie Coleman defeated Steve Bartes in 16 minutes, and Allen Eustace waltzed to a draw with Hans Kampfer.

Johnny Eleven Beats N.T.S., With Rally, 19-6

St. John's Scores 2 In Final Period as Tom Chisari Stars

A pair of thrusts in the final quarter won St. John's a 19-6 victody over National Training School yesterday on the losers' field, and a new star loomed in the Johnny lineup to replace Frank Cady, injured halfback.

He was Tom Chisari, who ripped off enormous gains against the lighter Trainers and capped his performance with the score that broke a 6-6 deadlock. Starting at his own 20, young Chisari reeled off runs of 30 and 25 yards, paused while Joe Daly picked up 10 more, and finally romped over from the 10-yard stripe. With a 13-6 advantage, the last point realized on Cordui's plunge, the Johnnie attack finally moved. Before the game was over Daly intercepted a N. T. S. pass on his own 40 and ran to the Training 35, from which point he scored a few seconds later on a brilliant sweep through the opposing line.

St. John's started the clash, its fifth of the season and last before an engagement with its bitterest rival, Gonzaga, next Sunday, in high gear. Daly accepted a long pass and streaked over for a goal, but the play was called back because a mate was detected using his hands. It was Chisari who began scoring in the second period with a plunge from the four. He missed the placement, however.

Zopha Rivers, easily the star of N. T. S.'s attack, put his team back in the game in the third period when he took Davis' aerial on the 30 and scored standing up. The tying effort was set up by Rivers' interception of Steve Burns' pass, which he ran from midfield to the Johnnie 30. It was Wingman Hughes who missed the extra point.

Bob Feller, Baseball's Famous 'Kid,' Can Vote Today—He's 21

Tribe's Noted Pitcher Has Been National Figure for 4 Years

By the Associated Press

Van Meter, Iowa, Nov. 2.—Bob Feller reaches man's estate tomorrow but the Iowa farm boy has been doing a man's work for the Cleveland Indians since he was 17.

Baseball's most publicized youngster, who returned from the major leagues to get his high school diploma, will be 21 years old tomorrow.

The event will create little, if any, change in the routine of the Feller family's farm life near here. Mrs. William Feller, the proud, attractive mother of the pitching star, said she hasn't planned a birthday celebration because Bob may not be back from an Eastern trip.

She said, however, he would return by Sunday when the Feller family will have a dinner with relatives at the Roy Manders farm home near Adel.

It's the consensus here that Bob's exploits as a youth are only the beginning of a long career that will rank him with baseball's pitching immortals.

Rice Fullback Lost for Game With Fordham

Indianapolis, Nov. 2 (AP).—Coach Jimmy Kitts unfolded a tale of woe today as he sent his Rice Institute football squad of 36 through a light workout in the Butler University bowl when they stopped off here en route to New York to play Fordham University Saturday.

Kitts said Fullback Don Suman will be unable to play against the Rams because of a knee injury. He said he would shift Ernie Lain to Suman's backfield position. Bert Selman, reserve back, also will not be able to play because of a knee injury, Kitts said.

The Rice mentor asserted his team is "plenty tough" despite its poor record and added, "they just haven't been able to get going but maybe this will be the one."

IF you wanted expert opinion on the taste of Havana tobacco—where better could you get it than Havana itself? So we traveled all the way to Cuba to make certain our new Blended-with-Havana White Owl really had a true Havana flavor. We selected prominent Cubans—men who have been smoking fine Havana cigars for years—gave them some of the new White Owls to smoke. Without exception, they all praised the rich Havana flavor of this new cigar.

The Havana blended in this new White Owl is really a good grade. Matter of fact—we're proud of being able to use such fine Havana. Does it sound unbelievable for a 5¢ cigar? Well, we're America's largest buyers of Havana tobacco, and we know what's good. Fact is, it's the same type Havana used in popular cigars costing 10¢ and more. And if you want the real reason for this cigar's true Havana taste—it's because it has a goodly portion of Havana tobacco in it. Not just a scrap of it. Try one today.

Karcher in Redskin Shake-up

Big Tackle To Be Center On Defense

Jim Parks Will Shift To Karcher's Spot; Two Backs Injured; Masterson Ailing Concerned by the Redskins' defense, as revealed by films of their game with Green Bay, Coach Ray Flaherty yesterday announced a radical change in his first string line.

The important roving center position on defense has been assigned to Guard Jim Karcher by the Redskins' coach, who has moved Center Mickey Parks into the line.

Flaherty explained that Parks' 228 pounds as compared with Karcher's even 200 would give the Redskins much-needed weight in the line, but it was a coincidence that the change was made following the showing of the Green Bay game films which revealed that Parks had missed many assignments while playing the roving center.

One Green Bay touchdown was due directly to Parks' failure to cover his man who came out of a blocking back position to take a touchdown pass unmolested.

"Karcher used to back up the line for Ohio State," explained Flaherty, "and I believe he will give us a good job. Parks' weight will help at the guard position."

There is no disposition by either the Redskins or the coaches to underestimate the Philadelphia Eagles who will invade Griffith Stadium on Sunday. The Redskins barely achieved a 6-0 victory over the Eagles in the season's opener and any cockiness in their own ability was completely dissipated by their rugged play against the Packers.

The Redskins will be without the services of two backs and an end against the Eagles. Ed Justice is nursing a wrenched back, Red Morgan is idle with a slow-healing knee and End Bob Masterson is not yet recovered from a severely bruised back.

Manor Club Looks For Big Stag Day

Manor Club's stag day committee is preparing for a record turnout tomorrow for the day and night festivities that include golf in the morning and afternoon, followed by a dinner, entertainment and presentation of prizes for the year's play.

Between 250 and 300 members and guests are expected to turn out for the annual affair. Prizes for the golf will include low gross, low net, blind bogeys, selective handicap play and other events.

The course will be open to the golfers from 8 a. m. through the day. Club Champion Dick Meyer and other trophy winners will be honored for their year's tournament success following the dinner. Harry G. Pitt, golf committee chairman, is in charge of the event.

$1,500 Prize List Announced For Dixie Pin Sweepstakes

George L. Isemann, executive secretary of the National Duckpin Bowling Congress, has announced an estimated prize list of $1,500 for the Calvert Dixie Sweepstakes here Saturday, November 25. The event is open to all bowlers.

First prize of $500 is guaranteed, plus the Calvert trophy. The distillers are adding $125 to the prize list. The entry fee is $25 per man.

Hokie Smith is defending champion, one of four District pinmen to win the event in its eight-year history. Ollie Pacini has won twice, Joe Freschi and Astor Clarke once each.

ARCADIA

Virginia Calvagno and her R. F. C. No. 1 team swept honors in the Ladies' Federal League at Arcadia and posted two league marks for the season. Miss Calvagno had 141 and 390, the latter a record, while the team had 558 and 1,601, the set a mark.

Harry Penfold was the night's leader in the War Department League at Arcadia, with 151 and 417, while Armies had 611 and Lithos 1,653.

COLUMBIA

Reclamation No. 1 bowlers broke two all-time records in the Interior League last night at Columbia, a 641 team game and 1,786 set, highest in the 16-year history of the loop. The Miscellaneous team was the victim of the record set, losing three games.

Leaders in the totals were Harold Rocker, with 148-394, and Charles Dey, 144-384.

RECREATION

Three teams were deadlocked for first place in the Department Store League at new Recreation, Woodward & Lothrop, Kann's and Garfinckel's. Mike Shugrue's 144 and 370 were high as Lansburgh's won two from Goldenberg's. To create the tie Woody's lost two to Hecht's, Kann's won two from Credit Bureau and Garfinckel's blanked Guy Curran.

LUCKY STRIKE

El Gieb and Lou Jenkins had 402 sets, high for the night in the National Capital League at Lucky Strike. Geib also had a 165 game, while Jenkins had 153. Red Circle had a 651 game in winning three from Lucky Strike Taproom, while Shaffer Flower Shop had 1,831 in winning all three over Ben-Macs.

Louise Anderson's 115 game and a 299 set for Laura Bishop were best in the Ladies Procurement at Lucky Strike, while Larks had 486 and Eagles 1,373 to pace the teams.

the most promising contenders for top honors in the important 3-year-old races next year. His stake victories are the Old Colony Stakes at Narragansett Park, the Eastern Shore Handicap at Havre de Grace and the Richard Johnson at Laurel. In his last stake start he finished second to Rough Pass, the colt regarded as the one to beat Bimelech in the Pimlico Futurity on Saturday.

Other juveniles to be sold include Maestro Sasha by Kantar—Fair Advocate. This colt is a half brother to the stake winner, Legal Light, and in 1938 was judged the best yearling in Maryland. Son Altesse, a promising son of the great race mare Her Grace and winner this autumn, will also be sold.

Bill Ackerman

—On Fishing

ACKERMAN

Strippers are falling for the lures of those anglers who happen to be in the right place at the right time. But certainly not in the numbers nor with the consistency in their rising and feeding which is to be expected at this season of the year. Yet, most old-timers believe there are more and larger fish in the schools than for many many years.

It matters little where one fishes—Solomons, Ridge, or Herring Bay, striped bass are plentiful at all of them, and well worth trying, although it still looks as though a several days stretch of cold weather is needed to bring the going to top form.

The hope is prevalent that it will come soon so that this best of all the bay fishing will run over a period of several weeks, instead of in one grand bust of a few days that is the usual thing when it holds off too long.

It isn't that the stripers are sissies and can't take the cold water, but once the winter cold sets in their feed disappears and there is no incentive to them in rising.

The information most in demand these days seems to be what lures they are taking best? We take the new Rubalure as first choice and a Huntington drone next. However, be wise. Carry both, and Florida feathers as well, with possibly a Junebug spinner and bloodworms in the event the fish are more tempermental than usual.

Pickerel Hitting

Chain pickerel—plain pike to Marylanders—are hitting reasonably well, both on bait and lures, depending, of course, on where you are fishing.

Anglers who have followed them and learned of their haunts—in the Patuxent, South River, and the Severn—often find surface lures, productive in these waters, but for once-in-a-whilers and first-timers, live bait still is the best bet.

For those willing to spend a little time in hunting out one of the back-country or salt-marsh ponds,—and Southern Maryland is liberally speckled with both from Annapolis to Lookout—a top lure of any kind is eagerly accepted.

Boats are to be had at Indian Landing on the Severn for pike fishing, at the Annapolis end of South River Bridge and at Hill Bridge on the Patuxent. Better fishing is to be had on the latter by fishing the Big Bend, reached by way of Leon where boats and bait are usually available from the railbird pushers.

Ed Bowen at Solomons knows his salt ponds as well as anyone. And because they are seldom fished, the ponds offer almost virgin pike fishing. It is hardly likely that it will be possible to break him loose from the stripers right at this time. In another few weeks, however, he will take a flyer at it most anytime.

There was no single activity outdoorsmen enjoyed more last year than the weekly turkey shoots sponsored by the Bethesda-Chevy Chase Ikes. And there isn't anything we would rather call to the attention of Washington sportsmen, for in addition to being thoroughly enjoyable, the funds derived from the shoots are used for conservation work and game-stocking in Montgomery County.

To note the accomplishments of this organization during the year, from the quarters laid on the line for a competitive peep over the sights, would require a column by itself. Just take our word for the fun; the chance to meet, and know better if you will, some of the grandest guys in town; to take home a turkey or two if you are good enough; and with it all—to better your own hunting.

First Shoot Sunday

The first shoot is Sunday, November 5, on the Old Borah Place. If you have never been out, it is just a mile beyond the Bethesda Bank on the Rockville Pike. Rifles or scatter-guns, it doesn't matter. Put down your quarter and take your choice. Guns are lent to those who haven't one. If you do, don't forget—iron sights only.

Last year we had many calls for further information. For that, and dates of later shoots, call Merlin Evans, Wisconsin 2489 or Joe Perna, Emerson 9089.

News of Capital Night Clubs

By Mary Harris.

ANOTHER NIGHT SPOT. Yes, another! And a beauty it will be, Mrs. Lily Santmyer, owner of L'Escargot, has just started construction on her new Versailles. There'll be a realistic reproduction of the front facade of Marie Antoinette's Petit Trianon with room for dining on its terrace. The orchestra, unchosen as yet, will hold forth from a reproduction of the Temple of Love, famed as a romantic rendevouz of the French Court. A fountain, stone balustrade and real (well, almost real) trees will complete the illusion of Eighteenth Century France. So if you hear sounds of hammering while having lunch at L'Escargot, remember it's in a good cause. The Versailles will open during the latter part of December.

BILLIE BAILEY, who'll join the Mayflower Lounge orchestra today

PAUL KAIN, whose orchestra opens in the Lafayette Club tomorrow

BILLIE BAILEY, golden-haired contralto (see picture above), heard often over the air waves of Columbia, will join Dick Koons' orchestra in the Mayflower Lounge today. Billie has also sung with thebands of "RedNichols" and oJe Reisman.

KAIN RAISIN' will be in order tomorrow at the Club Lafayette which reopens for the season after a short "lights out" period. Paul Kain, always a one for clever and refreshing music, has assembled a new and exciting orchestra. Double-piano novelties will be smacked out by Erwin Devron and Kenneth Fay. Songs by pretty Peggy LeBaron and Harry Albertson. The list of reservations is something impressive and promises a fine and topping party.

HALLOWEEN ECHOES. Shoreham. That eccentric fellow in straw hat and overalls who checked his shoes and danced barefoot. Robert raised his eyebrows a bit, but it was Hallowe'en . . . The girl costumed as Kilmer's "Trees." Anyway, she had a nest of robins in her hair.

Metronome. Tables all up and down the Wardman corridors as well as cramming the Metronome Room and lounge. Hundreds turned away. Theon muttering, "If I had any more tables and there wasn't any water in the pool, I'd put tables out there.

Cafe Caprice. Amateur gourmands combining Scotch and soda with big hunks of the luscious Caprice Birthday-Hallowe'en cake. But it agreed with them all, splendidly.

Shar-Zad Room. Din! Din! Din! Only thing lacking was Gunga. But Bill McCune brought it on himself by suggesting that folks keep time to the music by rapping on their glasses. Sounded like a regiment of amateur xylophonists.

Troika. Lola collecting a basketful of nickels, dimes, pennies and quarters during the "Organ Grinder" skit, nearly being beaned by a silver dollar which, we trust, was real. The Halloween influence made the Troika customers bewitchingly loose with their money.

WHEN A FELLER NEEDS A FRIEND. The young man lead of a nudie movie was in town lately, we hear, took a ribbing on his "art" at a local night spot. He just blushed and ordered another Scotch and.

OUR PET ECONOMY is buying champagne cocktails at the Madrillon between 4 and 6. S'elp us, they're just two bits, like the rest of the drinks, taste something scrumptious. We doubt whether Peter Borras will like this.

DANCING AROUND. Pall Mall Room. That rare community dance, the "Cokey-Cokey," as done by all the customers under the leadership of the Arthur Murray Dancers. Will take you back to your ring-around-the-rosy days.

Lounge Riviera. La Conga, the Latin snake dance so much favored by Riviera patrons around midnight. This Latin-American trend is fraught with peril!

Rainbow Room. That rumored tap dance (with trimmings) that one of the waiters can do when he's in the mood. Recommended to us by Manager Patrick McGroary as what you might call a terpsichorean rarity.

HOST WANTED. How are you at hosting? If you're diplomatic, cordial, courteous and about a dozen other things, you might interview Al Simmonds, head man at the Brown Derby. Al wants a smart young man to assist him in hosting.

SWEET SINGERS. Neptune Room. Bert Granoff's caroling of request numbers by the dozen. Highly appreciated by the customers. The apparent pleasure that Bert takes in singing requests also has much to do with the pleasure of his hearers.

Hi Hat. Jack Manning is another excellent singer who always seems glad to do all requests. He confides that it's much easier for him to memorize the music than the words of all the new songs.

Lotus. The swing-stepping of Frieda Sullivan, little banshee from Manhattan. One of these times she's not going to get untangled.

Bamboo Gardens. Daniels and Day stepping their idea of how a couple look coming out of a night club at 4 a. m. Very funny. But we have to step out of night spots around 2 a. m. in this town. Perhaps it's just as well.

Mayfair. Gwen Gary, a new soprano at Mayfair, is a treasure of versatility. She sings not only the new songs and ever-popular ballads, but operatic numbers, too. One of her prettiest is Delibes "Fillies de Cadiz."

Pirates' Den. For real, roaring, he-man singing listen to Peg-Leg sounding off on "Sailing, Sailing Over the Bounding Main." This generally winds up in an orgy of community singing.

BLUE ROOM BULLETIN. Those favorite dancers, Caperton and Columbus, will head the floor show in the Shoreham Blue Room next week. Remember their "Dance Cavalcade," beginning with the bunny hug and winding up with jitter-stepping. Also new will be Magician Sheeler, said to be able to make a steak disappear from before your eyes. We wouldn't like that.

ANCHOR STATISTICS. Matt Windsor, piano-accordion star of the Anchor Room, tells us that not one per cent of the patronage wants jitterbug music. "Don't misunderstand," warned Matt. "Almost everyone wants bright, modern music. What I mean is that they don't care for this crazy jitter-music."

THREE-GENERATION CUSTOMERS. Hall's sea food restaurant is one of the rare ones that can boast three generations of customers. It was opened in 1885 by Frank P. Hall, uncle of Owner Frank C. Hall. You can enjoy lobsters prepared in the same way that your grandpop liked it.

"MY DREAM GIRL," theme song of Bill Mundy's orchestra at the Fat Boy, was composed by Bill eight years ago. He still loves the inspiration of the melody. She's his little daughter, Janet Lorraine.

KNOTTY PINE TAVERN is a great gathering place for lively young folks on the week-ends. Loads of room for dancing. Music in the 1940 manner by Jay Schreiner's orchestra.

"RED" PLYE'S steaming swing is one of the chief attractions at River Bend, attractive dance and dine spot down Alexandria way. Attractive surroundings, good food and good times are certain at River Bend.

OPEN FIREPLACES beam cheerily at the Log Tavern. Dancing every night but Monday to Bill Summers' danceable rhythms. Diverting interludes of special entertainment by pretty Dardanelle, girl pianist and vocalist.

Heavy Orders Will Carry Rise Into 1940

By the Associated Press

New York, Nov. 2.—Large forward orders which will keep many industries busy into the first quarter of 1940 lessen the danger of an imminent serious reaction from the present level of business activity, said the National City Bank in its monthly survey today. Other reassuring factors cited by the bank were:

"The market excitment has been quieted; price advances have been held within moderate limits; and the inventory accumulations that are expected to cause the trouble are still only prospective in most cases.

"It would be unwarranted to say the rise in staple commodity prices to date has harmed the business outlook. The rise has improved the price equilibrium, for raw materials had been too low in relation to finished goods; and many times when this has been the case the signal for business improvement has been given by a rise in raw materials, which starts purchasing power, originating with the farmers and other producers, flowing around the circle."

Caution Advised

The bank held, however, that warnings of danger "are appropriate, not only as a counsel of moderation, but to direct attention to the policies that may keep the drop, if it comes, within bounds.

"Of course, if war exports rise sharply they will absorb the increased production, but business does not want to be at the mercy of uncertain war demands. Continued building up of inventories through further forward buying would prolong the boom, but only defer the reckoning."

"It would be a mistake to assume that the British are easily surrendering their Latin-American markets, or even that the Germans are giving up without struggling to make deliveries through neutral countries, especially Italy.

"Great Britain continues to drive her textile production hard, and British sources declare the intention to give export trade priority over all but vital war industries, in order to obtan foreign exchange and to avert permanent loss of export markets."

Manufacturers' Head Urges Firm Industrial Base

New York, Nov. 2 (AP).—Howard Coonley, president of the National Association of Manufacturers, in a speech today before the State Chamber of Commerce, urged industry to make its foundations too strong to be "eaten" away by "those termites and night creatures who seek to undermine it." He put forfard the following program:

"3. More tools to facilitate expansion and increase jobs.

1938 Oil Output Off 64,805,000 Barrels

Most oil States, the bureau said, produced less crude last year than the year before but several reported notable gains. Illinois' 24,075,000 barrels in 1938 was more than three times its 1937 production. Arkansas gained 55 per cent over 1937.

Bituminous Production

The National Coal Association estimates bituminous coal production in the United States for the week ended October 28 as approximately 10,300,000 net tons. Production for the corresponding week: 1938—8,650,000 tons; 1937—9,347,000 tons. Percentage of increase: 1938—19.1 per cent; 1937—10.2 per cent.

Wheat Crops Under Normal; Prices Rise

Experts Foresaat Sharp Drop in Wheat Yield For Next Year

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Nov. 2.—Fractional wheat price gains were chalked up on the grain market blackboard today as the trade received the most pessimistic fall forecasts of winter wheat production in years.

Estimates that the 1940 crop, which is nearing the winter dormant period, will be sharply below normal stirred no large buying enthusiasm principally because the forecasts were about in line with trade expectations and therefore had been discounted in advance. Nevertheless, selling was restricted and buyers predominated after midsession.

Recovery power in securities, European news and reports of better foreign demand for Canadian wheat helped to stimulate some purchasing. Early losses of ⅝ cent were wiped out and prices rose as much as a cent from the lows. Wheat closed ⅛@⅛ higher than yesterday, December 86⅝@¾, May 85⅞@86. Corn closed unchanged to ¼ lower, December 50⅛, May 52⅝@¾; oats ⅛@¼ higher; rye ⅜@½ up; soy beans 2@ 2⅛ higher and lard 10@15 lower.

Crop experts' tentative forecasts 7 months before harvest said very unfavorable moisture conditions indicate production may fall to 375,000,000 to 415,000,000 bushels, comparing with 550,710,000 this year.

Cotton Futures Work Higher Despite Selling

New York, Nov. 2 (AP).—The cotton futures market gave a good account of itself today in the face of a fair volume of hedge selling and a spattering of New Orleans and Southern liquidation. Final prices were unchanged to 5 points higher.

Bombay buying of March and May got the market off to a good start as narrower price differences between the Indian and New York markets spurred demand.

Official reports indicating sizable sales of cotton aboard under terms of the export subsidy agreement attracted favorable trade comment and, brokers said, might have been the driving force behind some local covering. Steady security prices tempted many professional buyers.

Trade price fixing was rather vigorous at the start but later diminished, which coincided with slackened hedge selling.

Cottonseed Oil

Cottonseed oil futures lost 7 to 10 points today. Much of the pressure was the result of easiness in lard, plus continued slow demand for cash oil.

Crude oil sold at 5¾ cents late Wednesday and early today but at the close was quoted 5¾ nominal in the Southeast and Valley and in Texas, 5½ nominal.

The Commodity Exchange Administration said yesterday that trading in cotton futures on the Nation's three organized exchanges totaled 3,726,150 bales of cotton during October. This compared with 6,065,650 bales traded in September and 3,854,150 bales in October last year.

A total of 3,180,600 bales was traded on the New York exchange, 543,800 bales on the New Orleans exchange and 1,750 bales on the Chicago Board of Trade during October.

Decline Continues for Seventh Day But Total Loss Is Only 0.07 of a Point Aircrafts Strongest and Most Active

New York, Nov. 2.—The decline in the stock market was extended to seven consecutive days today. The volume of trading and the nature of transactions was the same in the previous days of the current decline. Only 845,710 shares changed hands and the composite average was off the insignificant amount of 0.07 point. The entire seven days of irregularly lower prices has brought a net decline in this composite of only 1.51 points.

In fact, since the big bulge of September, when the value of most stocks soared there has been only a narrow movement. The fortnightly report, compiled by the securities and exchange commission, listing the transactions of the so-called insiders, shows that officers, directors and the largest equity owners were, in general, not as bullish during the September rise as was the general public.

This report was made public this afternoon. It did not include any October transactions. It showed that the insiders were the ones who supplied stock when the mad scramble was on at the outbreak of the war. It will be recalled that on a few days during September the rush to buy was so great that some of the lower priced issues doubled and trebled within a day.

The machinery of the Stock Exchange functioned smoothly during this period, and the fears of those who wanted the exchange closed in the crisis were soon quieted. There was also at that time a cry raised in some quarters that the market was too thin on the upside, just as it was too thin on the downside when everyone and his brother wanted to sell stock.

Insider Selling

Those who were disappointed with the mechanism of stock market trading for this reason during September can now realize that the insiders were not to blame. The SEC report shows that the insiders supplied stock in staggering proportions. In these days of quiet trading it is difficult to remember that between one and two months ago there was such a scramble, and that some traders complained because stock could not be bought without raising bids.

There is no intention here to suggest that the insiders were motivated by any benevolent desire to keep the market orderly. Specialists used to do that; but now a specialist is so regulated that he has to appear as Caesar's wife. Before buying or selling stock he has to read a few chapters on the latest rules and regulations, go over his latest correspondence with Washington and be sure he locked the door and put out the cat the night before.

Specialists did their best. A good portion of the selling that took place came because they felt obligated to keep their markets orderly and persuaded holders to sell. But they couldn't take a position such as would have been permitted before the financial world was made honest by legislation.

It is too soon to determine whether they did their pocketbooks any good by their sales, because since September the market has held within a range of approximately two points. It is still there, and the storm is over.

Aircraft Day's Leaders

Trading today was again featured by the aviations, with Curtiss-Wright holding tenaciously to its position as the most active stock. It added another eighth, which meant a new high for the year. Glean Martin and North American Aviation were the next most active issues. Western Union was under pressure. Steel and Bethlehem were lower by minor fractions, while Chrysler lost about a point.

Major commodities held within narrow ranges. Wheat added ⅛ to ½ cent on indications that the drought in the Southwest will make the 1940 winter wheat harvest below normal. Cotton was steady and closed unchanged to 5 points higher.

Enthusiasm for high grade listed bonds was dampened today by the disclosure that the Treasury intends to engage in huge operations, provided marked conditions are favorable. Small recessions appeared in most high grade issues, while speculative bonds were irregular. In the foreign dollar department gains and losses were about equally numerous. Turnover amounted to $6,600,000.

Treasury Financing

The market for Treasury obligations had a good tone until the intimations were given in Washington of an intention to raise $500,000,000 directly and additional sums indirectly. The indication that $1,378,000,000 March notes also may be refunded next month also helped to turn the market around. At the end, losses ranged about to ½ point.

Telephone debentures were firm and a few other best rated bonds also improved, but the tone was easy after the Treasury statement. Speculative railroad obligations showed only small variations in either direction, and activity also was restrained. Communications bonds receded because of the union ruling on Western Union.

Latin-American default bonds were quiet and mostly lower. Some of the Australian state bonds moved higher, but most issues of the belligerent countries were neglected and substantially unchanged. Scandinavian, Belgian and other European neutral bonds held their ground.

Excess Reserves Drop $150,000,000

By the Associated Press

Lendable excess reserves of banks began last week dropping from their record high levels. The Federal Reserve Board said the total dropped from the unprecedented figure of $5,530,000,000 last week to $5,380,000,000 in the week ended November 1, a decline of $150,000,000.

Further declines are expected in the next few weeks as Treasury and other Federal financing gets under way, which will tend to convert idle cash into increased investments.

Foreign Markets

By the Associated Press

London, Nov. 2.—Investment support gave the stock market a forward slant today. Far Eastern loans were again strong spots while British government bonds edged ahead. Tobacco and department store issues took the lead in the industrial division.

Domestic rails were hoisted a bit and the commodity group was dotted with numerous small gains.

Paris—The bourse resumed trading today after the All Saints' Day interruption with all-around improvement. Rentes were well ahead of other divisions, buoyed by repatriated capital seeking investment outlet. Buying appeared generated by favorable appraisal of the Allied diplomatic and military outlook.

Amsterdam—Bourse quotations swung in a narrow orbit today. Domestic issues displayed reactionary tendencies at times while American stocks moved unevenly.

Liverpool—Cotton futures lost 5 to 8 points today when hedge selling and foreign liquidation found limited support.

Boston Wool Market

Boston, Nov. 2 (AP).—(U. S. Dept. of Agr.).—The wool market in Boston was very slow today. A few inquiries for domestic wools were received from users but they did not result in sales. Dealers occasionally offered moderate quantities of wools of various kinds and found a general lack of interest. These activities were largely efforts to test the market. Original bag 12-months Texas wools were offered at prices ranging $1 to $1.05, scoured basis, without finding takers.

Bank Clearings Under Year Ago For 3d Week

By the Associated Press

New York, Nov. 2.—For the third successive week, check transactions for the country as a whole failed to equal the volume for the comparative 1938 week. The decline this week was again attributed largely to the continued poor showing at New York, where a drop from last year has been recorded for five consecutive weeks.

Bank clearings for 22 leading cities of the United States in the week ended Wednesday, November 1, as reported to Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., totaled $5,845,602,000, compared with $6,034,543,000 last year, giving a loss of 3.1 per cent.

The aggregate for the latest week displayed a rise of $682,689,000 over the amount for the week preceding. Between the two similar weeks of 1938 the increase was $799,202,000.

New York clearings of $3,597,125,000 for the week were 7.3 per cent less than the $3,881,585,000 for the same 1938 week, while the turnover for the 21 outside cities at $2,248,477,000 was 4.4 per cent above the $2,152,958,000 recorded last year.

Utilities Lead New Financing In 3d Quarter

The Securities and Exchange Commission made public yesterday an analysis of security registrations which became effective during the three months ended September 30. During this period, a total of $566,464,000 of new securities became fully effective. This compared with a gross amount of $743,536,000 of securities registered during the same period of 1938.

By far the largest total of securities proposed for sale by issuers in any one industry group during the third quarter was shown for electric and gas utility companies. These companies accounted for an aggregate of $251,476,000, or 51.3 per cent of the total, as compared with $124,578,000, or 25.4 per cent, for manufacturing companies, and $46,468,000, or 9.5 per cent, for financial and investment companies. Registered securities in these three industry groups represented 86.2 per cent of the total.

The predominance of fixed interest-bearing securities in registrations during the third quarter of 1939 is indcated by the fact that such securities with an aggregate of $426,970,000 accounted for 87.1 per cent of the total.

Loadings Estimate Revised Upward

Chicago, Nov. 2 (AP).—The National Association of Advisory Boards issued a revised estimate predicting railroad carloadings would total 6,021,103 for the fourth quarter, an increase of 18.4 per cent over the same period of 1938.

The original estimate was 5,784,468 cars, an increase of 13.8 per cent over a year ago.

Engineering Awards Fall Off in Week

New York, Nov. 2 (AP).—Engineering construction awards fell off during the week ended Tuesday to $50,040,000, a decline of 22 per cent from the pervious week and 30 per cent below a year ago, Engineering News-Record reported today.

Private awards were 45 per cent less than the preceding week, but 6 per cent larger than the same week last year. It was the eighth consecutive week that private construction had topped its respective 1938 values. Public engineering construction was 5 per cent larger than the week before but 41 per cent under a year ago.

Output Tops Buying Power, Survey Finds

New York, Nov. 2.—The present level of the Nation's purchasing power as measured the ratio of the prices of farm products to manufactured goods prices shows that manufacturing activity at the present time is in a vulnerable position, according to the Alexander Hamilton Institute today. The index of manufacturing activity, on the basis of 1929 as 100, was 92.4 in September, while the purchasing power index was only 75.5.

From the standpoint of the Nation's purchasing power, manufacturing activity in September was more excessive than in either 1937 or 1929. The excessive activity in each of those years was followed by a severe recession.

War an Abnormal Factor

At the present time the war in Europe provides an abnormal factor in the situation, suggesting the possibility of a rise in purchasing power rather than a curtailment of manufacturing activity. That such a development is possible is suggested by the September rally. War has a tendency to cause inflation. When inflation develops, the national income rises faster than the prices of manufactured products. Consequently, there is a rise in purchasing power.

The present outlook is, however, that the present war is not going to create much inflation in the immediate future. In the first place, the war so far has been of a peculiar character. There has been little destruction, and such destruction is necessary for inflation. In the second place, the normal trend is toward deflation, thus making it more difficult for inflation to develop as the result of the war.

The prospect is, therefore, that the Nation's purchasing power is not going to show any sharp expansion in the near future. In fact, there has already been some reaction to the rise which occurred in September. During the first half of October, the price indicator of purchasing power declined to 73.1 from 75.5 in September. It may thus be concluded that the present discrepancy between manufacturing activity and purchasing power will be eliminated largely by a recession in manufacturing activity.

New Jersey Barred From Collecting Full Railroad Tax

Trenton, N. J., Nov. 2 (AP).—Nine New Jersey railroads won today a Federal Court injunction restraining the State from collecting any more than 60 per cent of the taxes levied for the years 1934, 1935 and 1936.

District Judge Phillip Forman made permanent a temporary injunction allowing the railoads to continue withholding a total of $14,820,937 levied for the three years.

The railroads, which have fought the State's taxing system up to the United States Supreme Court, have paid $22,117,874 for the three years.

In granting the injunction, Judge Forman said in a 62-page opinion he would authorize the restraint "until such time as the taxing authorities of New Jersey revalue the property . . ."

Railroads involved were the Central of New Jersey, New Jersey & New York, Reading, Delaware, Lackawanna & Western, Lehigh Valley, New York Central, New York & Long Branch, Erie and the New York, Susquehanna & Western.

State of Pennsylvania Borrows at 0.399%

Harrisburg, Pa., Nov. 2 (AP).—Pennsylvania sold a $30,000,000 issue of tax anticipation notes to the National City Bank of New York today at an interest rate of 0.399 of 1 per cent—announced as the lowest on record for State business.

The bank's bid was 100.615767, with a premium of $184,730, which brought the interest rate below the offerings of two other firms—Halsey, Stuart & Co., and the Mellon Securities Corp., Pittsburgh.

Loans for the corresponding week a year ago totaled $578,000,000.

C. H. Jackson, Photographer, Found Dead

News Cameraman Took Pictures of Every President Since War

Clarence H. (Jack) Jackson, one of Washington's most widely-known news photographers, was found dead yesterday in his apartment at 2127 California street northwest. He was about 49 years old and had been dead since Saturday, police said.

Since coming to the Capital shortly after the World War, he had photographed every president and a host of other notables.

Mr. Jackson was among the first photographers to limit his efforts to obtaining news pictures. When Key Bridge was under construction, he made monthly pictures of progress from a steel bucket travelling across the river on a cable. He also made some of the earliest air views of the city.

He was a brother of Edward Jackson, official photographer to President Wilson during the Versailles Conference. He served overseas as a photographer with the Signal Corps, A. E. F.

For 18 years since the Armistice, Mr. Jackson had been engaged in photographing prominent men and women here.

Mr. Jackson worked on several Washington newspapers and also had been employed by national news picture services. During most of his career in the Capital he had been associated with Underwood & Underwood, but in recent months had been employed by the Interior Department.

An autopsy will be performed today to ascertain the cause of death, police said.

Burial will be Monday in Philadelphia.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

The minor three-card suit bid, which is as close to a psychic as any bid can come and still be legitimate, led "Doc" Conolly into a percarious grand slam contract the other night at a Washington tournament. Frank B. Lord, Washington bridge authority, tells the strange story. The cards and bidding are shown in today's box. It required two finesses and a suit break to make it.

"An expert will usually take the chance of one finesse in order to make a grand slam," says Lord, "because of the bonus.

"Five-card suits often make slams and occasionally a four-card suit, if the distribution is favorable, but a grand slam in a suit where the declarer holds only three is unusual enough to go in the book. Nobody but 'Daring Doc' Conolly would attempt such a feat.

"After North had passed, Dr. Conolly in the East opened with one diamond to test out his partner, as he could run to hearts if doubled. In fact, he did go to three hearts on the second round.

"His partner also supported. Conolly returned to five diamonds and got a response of six diamonds. Then, of all things with only three diamonds in his hand, he bid seven diamonds, and held his breath for a double, which was not forthcoming."

South led a low spade and the doctor won with the king. He drew trumps, exhausting those in his own hand, and guessed the heart finesse correctly, first playing the king, then the ten, which North covered, and cashing the jack and eight. He discarded dummy's losing five of spades.

He entered West with the ace of spades and tried the club finesse, leading the queen, which was also successful. After two club tricks, there was nothing but trumps in the dummy hand.

"Of course," concluded Lord, "the distribution was such that seven no trump or seven hearts could have been made, but the doctor got a big kick out of making a grand slam in diamonds with only three in his hand. No one else reached a grand slam in any denomination."

Chapter 41

YES, they had all heard the doctor say that.

"Why, I'd enjoy doing it, Prof. Hulme. There's nothing I like better than being with sick people."

And to Miss Lane, "Oh, no, indeed, it wouldn't interfere with any plans of mine. I'm just a useless old woman, you know, I've nothing else to do."

Stunned by the extravagant unexpectedness of the danger, they sat silent in defeat. They had tried all the devices available to civilized people.

But Canby recognized neither defeat nor the limitations of good breeding. Here on the mountain, in the silence of night at its stillest, Timothy heard again the raw insolent rudeness of Canby's voice, battering down that door to which civilized manners had no key. "Say, that's a swell idea of yours, Mrs. Washburn! Too good for you to keep to yourself, by heck! I'll stay with you on that. I'll sit there too." And when the old woman, disconcerted, opened her mouth to protest, he closed it with an impertinent, "I'm just a useless young man, you know. I haven't got anything else to do either, see? Any more'n you have. Skiing's over for this year." Timothy once more saw Canby's impudent grin, as he looked around the table, careless of making a fool of himself.

EVEN DR. CRAFT, silent and sardonic as he was, and as little given to seeing anything at all entertaining in Clifford life, had laughed out loud, the first time he visited his patient after this, when he saw the two looking hard at each other across the door to the sickroom.

Anson Craft's doctor-face had lightened to hear a faint giggle float out from the darkened chamber. Timothy, coming in behind him, heard it, too. But his face did not lighten.

"My orders," said the doctor crisply, "are that talk shall be limited to 15 minutes in every hour—not a minute more. And not one calamity story out of you, Mrs. Washburn! Nor anything in the least exciting out of you, Hunter. Nor from anybody. Now, Mrs. Washburn, nobody is to go into the patient's room. She's strong enough to wait on herself." He raised his voice, "Miss Barney, do you hear me? When you're tired of them, just shut the door." He turned to the others, "And it's not to be opened one inch more than that crack till I say so."

By the time he said so, March was over and for three weeks Canby had sprawled, hour after hour, all day long, every day, outside that door, like a watchdog on guard, oblivious as any dog of the passage of time. For the permitted quarter of every hour he brazenly outtalked Mrs. Washburn; for the periods of silence prescribed by the doctor, he sat with tightly closed lips, vigilant eyes fixed on her to see that she said not a word. When he ran out of talk, he read aloud, droningly, stumblingly, like a great schoolboy, unashamed of the poor work he made of it, calling out, "How do you pronounce s-l-o-u-g-h, anyhow?" Or, "Say, what does 'invidious' really mean?" with Susan's voice coming back in answer, faint, husky, but amused and natural—first antenna flung forward toward life.

AND BECAUSE he was there, always there, Canby was the one who welcomed her as she groped her way back to health. Everything that Timothy had counted on as a weakness of Canby's turned by a baleful magic into an advantage—that he was out of work and idle and futureless and irresponsible, all that Timothy was not, as he came and went in the few intervals of his sober, toilsome, exacting work. It was worse than that. Because he was Canby with no dignity to protect, no position in society to keep up, because he was a nobody who could afford (since it cost him nothing) to be as ridiculous as he pleased without injuring a prestige necessary to usefulness, he could ignore the presence of the loose-tongued old woman always in the room with him as Timothy could not. It was not long before Canby, throwing decent reserve, self-respect, good taste out of the window, said whatever came into his head to say to Susan, as though he did not know that Mrs. Washburn, now frankly detesting him, would at once set the party telephone wires humming with foolish and malicious distortions of his confidence. These preposterous versions soon came back to his ears. He roared over them in the highest spirits, and brought them in for Susan to laugh about in Mrs. Washburn's very presence. One day when Timothy came in from supper to get the news, Canby was saying jocularly through the crack in the door, "Boy I saw down street yesterday told me—" he shifted his position to fix the old woman with a mercilessly amused stare—"that peple are tellin' around that I been engaged seven times and married twice—or words to that effect. Somebody must have been listening at the keyhole yesterday when I was telling you about Mildred. Next off, they'll have the sheriff after me for failure to pay alimony to my wives." So he had been confiding in Susan about his emotional troubles, had he, thought Timothy, astounded and enraged, so they had come along to the confessional stage! And with that poisonous old parrot in the same room!

Confounded with surprise, his entire experience of what could be expected and what was impossible, thrown into incredulous disorder, he struggled vainly to keep his alarm and resentment out of his voice, and was stiffer than ever with his, "How are you today, Susan?" "That's fine. Keep it up."

It was nothing to Canby what Mrs. Washburn told people he said to Susan. It was something to Timothy—in his position, at his age, with his traditions. So Canby was the one who every day grew more and more wonted to the oddity of addressing himself to the crack of an ever-so-little opened door, Canby was the one whose talk grew more practiced, more fluent, more natural, more easy and intimate, and Timothy, his heart burning like fire, was the one to be awkward and bungling and left-handed, as in the presence of a detested, pitcher-eared village gossip and the irreverent young man, obviously (although unconsciously) his rival, he said self-consciously to a crack in a door, "How are you feeling today, Susan?" "That's fine. Keep it up." To such remarks, made in such a tone, Susan's faint answers were, of course, impersonal and remote. They might have been exchanging greetings in a crowd at a subway station. They would have been infinitely closer to each other there.

It had been like a long-drawn-out nightmare of helplessness. Day after day, his waking hours had been filled by the authentic, bad-dream inability to raise a hand in his own defense. Leaden-limbed, impotent, incredulous, he had watched the current setting away from him, faster and faster. The moment had passed—when had it gone by him? No, no, it had never been there—when, risking all on one stroke, he might have given Canby the preemptory order to drag the old woman away bodily, and leave him alone with Susan—but, no, he would not have been alone then, in the common room of a boarding-house open to constant coming and going. How could he have said to Susan what he could only say to her alone! More than that—there was the impassable barrier of the doctor's order.

Incredulous of the need for this order, urgent, impatient, he had followed the doctor to the street one day. "See here, Anson, if Miss Barney's well enough to have people—strangers to her—gabbling away all day in the next room, why isn't she well enough to have some of us who know her well, who really have a thing or two to say to her, step into her room for a quiet talk? She must be getting stronger all the time. Her voice sound . . ."

Dr. Craft had at first said with his usual irritable rudeness, "When I'm ready to change the treatment of a case I'll say so. I don't need . . ." but after all, he was an academy alumnus, had been no so long ago one of Timothy's students. "Listen, T. C.," he said more reasonably, "I'll tell you how it is." Standing by his car, he began to pull on his gloves. "There are two things to consider. One is this old hell-cat who'd go pushing herself in to hang over the bed, if I let down the bars. If you and Miss Peck could go in for a real talk, why, there'd be no keeping Mrs. Washburn out. And she's cold poison. It's hard enough for me to handle the situation as it is. Have a heart!"

He opened the door of his car and went in. "But that's not all. The fact is, that girl has had a terrific shock. 'Shock' in the medical sense. I mean. Not that we doctors know what 'shock' is. It's one of the many things we don't know. But let me tell you, it's one of the things we don't want to monkey with! I'm not at all sure she's really out of the woods yet, though I think her eyes'll be all right in a fortnight. Every medical man wants a good wide margin of safety when it's a question of shock."

He got into his car, saying over his shoulder, "What do you want to see her for, anyhow? Whats' the hurry?" Stepping on the starter, he answered himself, "If it's something abotu her position or her teaching—well, no matter what!—can't it wait? She's getting on all right now. Why not leave well enough alone? That combination of the cheerful young idiot holding the old idiot at bay—that's really funny! That's the kind of thing she needs now. Well, so long!"

Here on the mountain, once again, for the thousandth time, Timothy ran feverishy from one fast-locked steel gate to another, trying in vain to shake them, beating his hands against their bars.

He could not understand Canby's unconsciousness of what he was doing. How was it that no one told him? In a community alive with meddling tongues, why did no one meddle now? Everyone in town must have seen that he, that Susan—everyone, that is, at the academy. At least, all the students who came to the house on Sunday afternoons. Or had he been so damnably discreet and well-bred and middle-aged that their knowledge had gone only as far as half-conscious, unspoken recognition, the kind of dim perception which, because it has not yet been put into words, fades away to blankness before a more vivid and arresting impression? Canby was now certainly giving Clifford a vivid enough impression to blot out anything else. Everyone, not only the gossips, was following with guffawing sympathy the farce-comedy of his courting under the eyes of Mrs Washburn! Yes, Timothy thought, that must be the reason—his own decent and decorous advance into sentiment, improbable in the first place, stupidly lacking in color and spirit, had been pushed from people's minds by one of the richest subjects of cackling that had ever been thrown to the town's pecking beaks.

And there was another explanation, a very simple and elemental one—the man leaning over the fire, his elbows on his knees, his face in his hands, quailed back from the last bitter drop in the cup he was draining, but drank it down and sickened. Since it was to be expected for a man of Canby's age to be in love, it took no perception on anyone's part to see it, but for a man of the age of Prof. Hulme——

To live those days over again was so accurately like a nightmare, that as in a nightmare, a cold crushing weight pressed down on Timothy's chest and cut off his breathing. He struggled to wake himself up. Half-suffocated, he flung back his head to draw in a great gulp of the soft June air. His eyes were caught by the position of Orion. It had slid preceptibly lower since he had last looked up. With just that slow implacable shift, his star had sunk lower while Canby's mounted higher during those three weeks when he had in any one day more unbroken hours to talk with Susan than Timothy had had since the first twilight evening. He had had time and to spare, Canby had, to show himself to the girl with all the contagious ha! ha; of his confidence in life, which had brought the boys and young men of town swarming around him, yet which indicated nothing at all, thought the older man in a rage, save glands swollen to bursting with young blood. Canby had had time to tell Susan, as confidentially as though they were castaways together on a desert island, not only a thousand memories of his little boyhood and adolescence, but as her strength came back, to draw from her one story after another (which Timothy had never heard) of her childhood, of her life at the Academy, at the Normal School. "That gir' thinks the world of you, Uncle Tim," he said one evening, happening to walk up the hill with Timothy. "As much as I do! We have great old times comparing notes about you! Telling stories of swell things we remember you doing. She told me today what you did and the way you looked when you found the kids on the school playground trying to kill a toad. And I told her about the mess I got into, time I had that belluva row with my stepfather and you yanked me away from him and took me in up here! And she feels just the same as I do about what you put up with from Aunt Lavinia. We'd give anything if we could somehow sort of make it up to you, help out somehow."

As Timothy remembered this remark, so casually made with its so-casual "we," the inner volcano broke again into flames—had Susan then repeated, trading confidence for confidence, what he had told her, her only in all the world, that Indian-summer afternoon on the frost-browned pasture? Suspicion, fury, indignation once more seared his tongue to silence. Again he must live through the momentary agony of an imagined betrayal before he could again remind himself that oh, no! no! Susan would never do that. It was not in her nature. And that idea about Aunt Lavinia did not need to come from her. Canby already had spoken about that. He had probably brought it out naturally enough as he went back in rambling talk to his days at the Academy, using it as he used everything, as a way to range himself with Susan—sympathy for poor Uncle Tim only a pretext for being on Susan's side.

Frankfurter Defends Hiring Of Young Men

Favors Recent Law School Graduates Over Older Lawyers

By Alfred Friendly.

The "Frankfurter Plan" of creating a Government legal career service from young graduates of the Nation's best law schools was extolled yesterday by its founder and principal practitioner.

The occasion was the second and last day of public hearings before the President's Committee on Merit System Improvement. The major subject matter was the Government's 5,300 legal positions. The main testimony came from behind the bar, not from the witness chair. It was given by Supreme Court Justice and Committee Member Felix Frankfurter, for years the New Deal's principal recruiting officer and legal talent scout at the Harvard Law School.

Frankfurter was in no disagreement with the testimony from a long file of witnesses who urged competitive civil service appointment for Federal lawyers. Indeed, observers felt sure that the committee would recommend to the President a classified status for at least a third of the Government's attorneys—those in the entrance, or "P-1" and perhaps "P-2" grades.

Disagrees on Means

It was testimony on the method of accomplishing this end that found Justice Frankfurter dissenting.

The argument—and there was plenty of it—was whether credits from "unapproved," commercial law schools were acceptable as qualifications; whether attorneys with some years' private practice should be allowed to compete in entrance tests with recent law school graduates; whether there were techniques of testing an applicant's ability that would not discriminate against the younger men.

First student at the impromptu course of "Frankfurter on Lawyers" was Lee Somers, testifying for the American Federation of Government Employes. He said that by discriminating against certain less expensive law schools, scions of the wealthy would be given favored opportunities for Government legal jobs, and that a "caste system" might develop.

Can Work Way Through

Frankfurter pointed out that there were three accredited law schools in Washington and that in almost every one of the 90-odd accredited institutions in the country, a student could work his way through. By questions he sought to bring out that accepting credits only from certain institutions was merely setting up an eligibility standard similar to other eligibility prerequisites for any Government job.

Pointedly, he reminded Somers that the American Federation of Labor, with which the A. F. G. E. is affiliated, specifies required standards of training, apprenticeship and experience for membership in its craft unions.

To the testimony of former Civil Service Commissioner Samuel H. Ordway, jr., that new examining techniques had been developed that would not discriminate against a younger man, even in competition with one of more experience, Frankfurter replied that he was "frankly, very skeptical."

Dispute With Gordon

He had his most acrimonious dispute, however, with Charles Gordon, who, with Ordway, represented the National Lawyers Guild. Gordon contended that examinations should be thrown open to all lawyers—law school seniors or old hands in the profession.

In a battle of almost an hour, Frankfurter told Gordon that older lawers seeking Government jobs were liable to have been failures in private practice. Competitive examinations with recent graduates, however, would give the edge to an older man on the basis of experience, even though his talents and potentialities were inferior, he implied.

In addition to the topic of lawyers, the committee yesterday showed lively interest in testimony of Mrs. Harris T. Baldwin, of the National League of Women Voters, and of H. Eliot Kaplan, of the National Civil Service Reform League, that veterans' preferences should be abolished or sharply decreased.

Other witnesses included Luther E. Steward, president of the National Federation of Federal Employes, who was commended by Gen. Robert Wood, committee member, chairman of Sears-Roebuck, for his presentation of the fundamental necessities for a practical and progressive personnel system, and Edgar G. Brown, president of the U. G. E., who cited examples of discrimination by employing officers against colored applicants.

Seal's Plan For D.C. Up for Study Today

'Kitchen Cabinet' Will Decide on Giving It To Commissioners

The District "kitchen cabinet" this morning will decide whether to send Corporation Counsel Elwood Seal's plan for District governmental reorganization on to the Commissioners.

Completed after more than two month's work, the proposed bill will be reviewed from all angles. It is expected the main planks in the streamlining program will be approved.

The bill, up to now, has been the sole work of Seal. Today his fellow kitchen cabinet members will express their views. In the cabinet with Seal are Maj. Daniel J. Donovan, District auditor; Richmond Keech, vice chairman of the Public Utilities Commission, and Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director of highways.

Under the Seal bill, the Board of Commissioners is retained with additional powers. The District government is placed under 12 or 13 departments.

Merger of the Municipal and Police courts into a new City Court of the District of Columbia.

Transfer of the Department of Vehicles and Traffic to the Police Department.

Should the cabinet approve the proposed bill it will be sent to the Commissioners for their action at the next session of Congress.

By the same token you score or fail to a greater or lesser degree by the way you feel.

Are you alert and keen . . . is your appetite at top peak . . . do you have a full quota of red cells? OR has overwork, worry, colds and sickness caused a loss of appetite and a reduced red-blood-cell count?

That-tired-feeling may be a warning . . . a general run-down condition may mean a lack of normal resistance.

If you feel the need of a tonic do try the tried and tested S.S.S. Tonic to improve a lagging appetite and help change weak blood cells to strong ones . . . a very important step back to health.
